Barking dogs win probation

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Kaiser and Kaiserina, two German shepherds, were put on six weeks' probation Monday night after their conviction for barking.

Selectmen spent more than an hour conducting a public hearing about the dogs, owned by Mrs. Charles Atwood of 43 Swan Road. The hearing was requested by neighbors, who say the dogs bark excessively and create a nuisance.

Parts of the hearing resembled a trial as lawyers cross-examined witnesses and friends of the dogs. The dogs were not present.

Eight neighborhood families, apparently led by W.J. Smyly of 35 Swan Road, filed complaints with dog officer Nick Molea and requested a hearing under state laws, chapter 140, section 157. The law empowers selectmen to deal with barking or dangerous dogs according to their judgment.

Others who signed letters of complaint were Dr. and Mrs. Mike MacKenzie, Drs. Subhash Bowry, Dr. Paul Vernaglia, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Powers, Al Lapointe and John Zocchi Jr.

Each side had a lawyer. John Carr represented Atwood while Tom Sullivan represented Smyly, the main complainant.

The dog officer was questioned first. Molea said officers answered 30 complaints about barking dogs at the Atwood residence since April 5. Atwood has been fined five times, he said, and has paid the two fines due so far.

Molea said the Atwood estate, which he estimated at 1½ acres, has a large pen for the dogs "but it's right next to Mr. Smyly's bedroom."

When joggers, bike riders, squirrels or other dogs come nearby, "the dogs go hysterical," Molea said under oath.

Molea said Atwood is "an irresponsible dog owner" but said she has done everything he asked. Still, he recommended the dogs be taken away and given to law enforcement agencies or given new homes.

The dogs are not dangerous, Molea said.

Carr adopted the "isn't that right?" method of questioning Molea. Selectmen later said "he proved that dogs bark."

Carr said Atwood suffers from Alzheimer's disease and produced a physician's letter to that effect. He called Atwood's nurse to the stand.

She said she had been at the Atwood home 24 hours a day in April, May and June. Since June 25, someone has been with Atwood 24 hours as well, she said.

Other employees at the Atwood residence were not called but were present. Carr summarized their remarks.

Vito Sammarco of 27 Pilgrim Drive urged that the town do a better job of controlling dogs. "The public has a right to demand quiet, to good clean streets and that dogs be on leashes," he said.

Fred Deminico of Chardon Road agreed. "I've never seen the barking dog situation so bad," he said. "It's out of hand. One dog barks and every dog on the block follows." Deminico said one dog nipped him last week and told of nearly getting in a fist fight with one dog walker recently.

"Someone called the police and four police cruisers showed up. There were more cruisers there than at the bank robbery," he said.

Carr, defending Atwood's dogs, said he found it interesting that nobody from the neighborhood was present at the hearing. Later, selectman Judie Muggia speculated that they did not want to appear to be in conflict with a woman "in Mrs. Atwood's condition."

Muggia said the town's ultimate responsibility was to people, not dogs.

Selectman Frank Sopper said six employees ought to be able to control the dogs and restrict their barking.

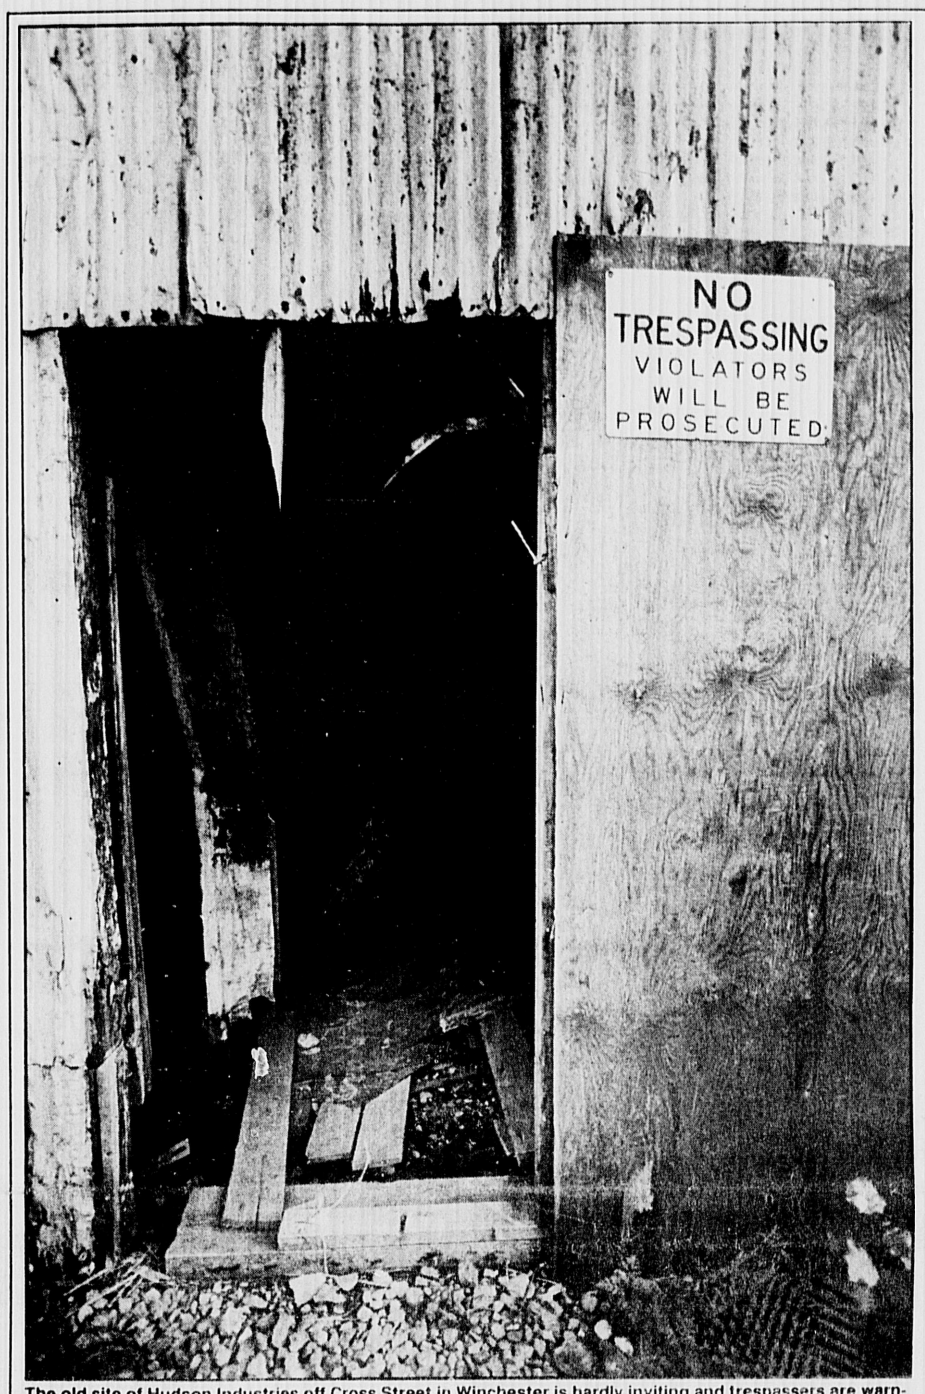

Selectman Mark Lombardi made light of the problem. "I got a call from someone whose next-door neighbor's burglar alarm had been sounding for over an hour. Nobody went up and shot the burglar alarm," he said.

Lombardi said those who "had the nerve to sign complaints should have the nerve to come to the hearing. Besides, if the same person complains all the time, who knows who has the problem?"

Muggia suggested the probation solution. Molea will report to selectmen again Sept. 15 to see if Atwood's employees can do a better job of controlling Kaiser and Kaiserina. They are to be outside only between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. unless they are on a leash.

Four selectmen voted for the motion but chairman Wade Welch said he would have voted to remove the dogs from the household.

"I don't think you people have done your job controlling the dogs," he told the Atwood employees.

The old site of Hudson Industries off Cross Street in Winchester is hardly inviting and trespassers are warned. A fall town meeting will be asked to re-zone the area to allow about 72 units of condominium housing. (Paul Drake photo)

Town worried by condo site toxics

McCarthy did not respond directly but said, "I wouldn't in good conscience put my parents or my children in those condominiums, based on the information I have now."

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Additional tests for cadmium, mercury and arsenic at a proposed housing site will be sought by the town's toxic waste committee following heated debate with developer Angelo Marotta.

Debate peaked after two hours as Marotta and his attorney said further tests of the Cross Street site were unnecessary, while committee members Robert Dewald and William McCarthy sought more information.

Marotta owns the former Hudson Industries site and wants to build 72 condominium units. Marotta and attorney Larry Murray answered detailed questions about their plan to cap potential toxic wastes in the area.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) found cadmium, mercury and arsenic in the ground during extensive testing.

McCarthy said he found insufficient tests conducted by DEQE and Goldberg Zino, a private geotechnical firm used by Marotta and the previous owner.

Marotta said additional testing would be a waste of money.

McCarthy made a motion to request up to $1,000 in emergency funds from the finance committee to re-test the site. The motion failed with members McCarthy and Dewald in favor and chairman Robert Deering and member Dr. Warren Taylor against it.

Deering said comparable testing is needed but $1,000 would not be sufficient.

Murray accused McCarthy of not knowing enough about toxic waste in general and the Cross Street site in particular.

"I came into the meeting seeking the truth. Some of the comments you've made are less than accurate," said Murray.

He said he is convinced additional testing wouldn't help McCarthy understand the issue.

McCarthy did not respond directly but said, "I wouldn't in good conscience put my parents or my children in those condominiums, based on the information I have now."

Dewald addressed Pat Donahue, a member of the DEQE staff, and said, "Your responsibility is to protect the citizens and I don't think it's being

Selectmen offered two units in exchange for help in approval

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester's help in building condominiums on the site of Hudson Industries, off Cross Street, is worth at least two units of housing to the developer.

Developer Angelo Marotta, through attorney Larry Murray, offered the town two units of housing if selectmen would speed approval of 74 units at the site.

Murray dismissed claims the area is a "toxic waste site" but told selectmen Monday that he and Marotta would work with the toxic waste study committee created by the spring town meeting.

Town meeting approval, in two forms, is required for Marotta's plan to build condos in the area.

First, the area must be re-zoned from "light industrial" to residential.

Second, town meeting must petition the legislature for permission to make the park road leading to Leonard Beach a permanent town road.

Wade Welch, chairman of selectmen, said Murray and Marotta face a big job to get ready for the fall town meeting "but it's not impossible. We stand ready to help you." Warrant articles for the November town meeting must be submitted by Sept. 19.

Marotta plans 72 units with 115 parking spaces on the site. Buildings would be two and three stories tall.

Access to the site is tricky, however. Marotta wants to use the beginning of the Leonard Beach road, which he would improve to town standards at his expense, at least as far as a new bridge across the Aberjona to the condos.

Marotta would own the bridge he plans to build but the road would become a town way, thus guaranteeing condo buyers frontage on a public road.

Low-cost housing plans take separate paths to approval

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Progress toward construction of Winchester's first seven Section 705 housing units for families with low-to-moderate income is slow but apparently steady.

Correspondence about the seven units on four sites approved by the spring town meeting is heavy. Action, so far, is slight.

Joseph Flatley, assistant secretary of the Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD), wrote to the Winchester Housing Authority in July to say the sites "appear to meet our site selection criteria."

But, as selectmen noted Monday night, Flatley hardly gave the plan a go-ahead sign. The EOCD will provide up to $82,000 per unit for construction but any additional costs must be paid by the town.

Each site "has significant outstanding issues which will need to be resolved before the housing authority's program for developing seven units of family housing can be implemented," Flatley said.

Separate issues surround each site. At Lockeland Road, on a corner of the Mullen Playground approved by town meeting for a single-family unit, the park land must be conveyed to the housing authority through a special act of the state legislature.

Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh has entered the town's "home rule petition" in the legislature. A hearing will be scheduled.

Flatley's letter also pointed out that the town meeting vote to build on each site within year "poses no problem" as long as the time limit is understood to mean that a contract for state money to construct the home is signed within a year, not that the home is finished in a year.

Selectmen agreed Monday that Flatley's interpretation is in line with the thinking of town meeting members. They noted without comment that Flatley believes the site could accommodate up to 16 units. Town meeting voted for one.

A site at the intersection of Cambridge and High streets, on land formerly attached to the Ambrose School property, won Flatley's general approval, though he points out topographic problems. Flatley says the site could accommodate a duplex but town meeting voted for a single-family unit.

The Woburn Loop site, near Cross Street, could accommodate up to four units, in Flatley's estimation, but town meeting voted for one duplex (two-family) unit there.

Selectmen and housing authority director Jerry Keefe have written to transportation secretary Frederick Salvucci, asking for a public hearing and a determination that construction is allowed on the former railroad right-of-way.

No answer has been received, selectmen said Monday, but Saltmarsh called to say Salvucci will visit the site Tuesday, Aug. 19.

Saltmarsh said the timing meant Flatley's stated deadline of Aug. 15 will not hold but Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, said Saltmarsh should put his judgment "in writing."

Three units were approved for a Palmer Street site near the Mary Murphy Apartments. Flatley agreed up to three units could be built on the site but said costs would surely exceed $82,000 per unit because of topography and ledge. The town must provide additional funding, he said.

In addition, the site needs approval from the zoning board of appeals. In a July 29 letter, planning board members urged the housing authority to hire an architect to draw site plans in time to get the site on the agenda for the September appeals board meeting.

Mount Vernon St. green space likely to be remain, town told

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Green space on Mount Vernon Street at the intersection of Converse Place will apparently remain.

Town manager Chad Maurer told selectmen Monday that he had spoken with Mohammed Akbarian, owner of the lot, and mentioned three options. No financial considerations were discussed.

Akbarian said he could maintain an open space through an easement, could allow the lot to be taken by the town, or use a portion of the lot to expand the Mill Pond office building parking lot and sell the remainder to the town.

Selectmen, with support from the planning board and conservation commission, recently voted to approach Akbarian in an effort to maintain green space on the corner.

In other business, selectmen:

• Postponed a meeting with the planning board to discuss disposition of the Woburn Loop railroad right-of-way. The board also decided to make clear to residents how to indicate an interest in purchasing portions of the town property.

• Accepted a gift from Hazen H. and Catharine W. Ayer for the beautification design review committee's gift account.

• Encouraged residents to file for positions on the Middlesex County charter commission, which will be charged with studying county government and making reforms in it. The filing deadline is Aug. 19, said selectmen Judie Muggia., who is the town's representative on the county advisory board.

• Heard selectman Frank Sopper's assessment of the new Safe Drinking Water Act, recently signed by President Reagan. "It's another way of saying they'll force us to build a filtration system on our water supply unless we can prove that we can protect it," Sopper said. "We have to buy time because we can't afford to spend over $6 million for filtration."

• Voted unanimously to send a letter to the governor and other state officers, requesting some of the state surplus to offset the growing costs of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA).

Sopper said the state neither funded nor staffed the Metropolitan District Commission's water division before turning it over to the MWRA with debts to be paid by the 60 member communities.

"The bill for cleaning up Boston Harbor is going to be close to $3 billion," Sopper said. "There's no way the 60 communities can afford that without state or federal help and the state is sitting on a huge surplus."

• Scheduled a public hearing Aug. 25 to consider the new tax classification project, nearly completed by assessors.

• Placed consideration of a lot at 742-750 Main St. on the docket for the Aug. 11 meeting. Selectmen recently told Cosmo Pasciuto of the Sarci Realty Trust to remove his property from the lot but a recent letter from Pasciuto indicates he would like to maintain the lot for the town. He said he has already cleaned up the lot.

However, Pasciuto's letter also suggested that town employees "would not be allowed to misuse the area by dumping trash or using it as a storage area." The statement aroused the ire of selectman Mark Lombardi.

Lombardi asked the department of public works to respond to Pasciuto's charge in time for the Aug. 11 meeting. Lombardi said he thought a boat, an abandoned car and a dumpster, none owned by the town, were on the lot.

Chairman Wade Welch said the town should review its legal options to be sure it would not repeat a situation at 50 Cross St. where an agreement between the selectmen and a private property owner was later found to be illegal.

Special voter registration hours planned by town clerk

The town clerk's office has announced additional voter registration hours scheduled in the remaining days before the close of registration for the state primary, Sept. 16.

The final day for registering to vote in the primary is Tuesday, Aug. 19, and on that day, the registration hours in the office of the Town Clerk at Town Hall will be from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Special registration hours are also scheduled Saturday, Aug. 16, from noon to 8 p.m.

"The voter registration process is simple, quick, and accessible," said town clerk Carolyn Ward. Any citizen of the United States who is a Winchester resident and who will be 18 years old by the next election day may register at town hall between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday or during the special evening and Saturday sessions.

Tuesday, Aug. 19, is also the last day to change party enrollment. All registered voters, whether Democrats, Republicans or unenrolled (independent), may participate in the state primary.

However, unless they change their enrollment by the Aug. 19 deadline, voters are reminded that Democrats and Republicans may only request the ballot of their respective party. Independent voters may request either ballot by declaring their party choice at the polls.

Additional information about the voter registration process may be obtained by calling the town clerk's office at 721-7130 or 721-7131.

Duck died from eating lead pellets

A duck at Mill Pond, thought to be killed by a minor oil spill last week, died after eating lead pellets, according to the Tufts School of Veterinary Medicine in Southboro.

Board of health director Joe Tabb sent the duck's remains to the school last week for an autopsy.

The cause of death was ingestion of 50 to 60 lead pellets, similar to those found in shotgun shells.

The cause of death for two other ducks found dead two weekends ago at Mill Pond will not be determined because they were buried.

Post office crosswalk is considered

A crosswalk on Waterfield Road, near the post office, ought to be built near the existing bicycle and pedestrian path, according to town engineer Jake Ciarcia.

Asked for a recommendation by selectmen, Ciarcia noted that there are no crosswalks on Waterfield Road near the post office. The nearest crosswalk is at Church Street.

"At present, pedestrian movements are being made in a random fashion, depending on where a person parks and where he is going. Simply installing a crosswalk doesn't necessarily mean it will be used," Ciarcia said.

However, installation of the crosswalk would result in the loss of two parking spaces.

Peggy Schleicher appeared at the July 14 meeting of selectmen to request a crosswalk.

PLANNING TO SELL?

The decision to sell your home is not usually an overnight impulse. After all, a new lifestyle will be beckoning and that is an important decision.

Before you make a firm decision to sell, make an appointment to visit an established residential agency to update yourself on current market conditions. You'll probably want to know what is available, where and in what price ranges any home, apartment or condo which you have decided on for your new location.

Also you'll want to know the probable net proceeds from the sale of your home and the tax consequences of the sale. Depending on whether you'll need the cash from the sale for a down payment, you may want to consider participating in your buyer's financing which could serve as a safe, high interest investment.

There's a lot of information you'll want to get before you make that decision (most of it good if you're a homeowner). Our office would be more than happy to assist you in complete confidence.

No. 1 in Winchester because we care . . . It's more than just a business with us . . . it's you and the professional service we provide for you that is the cornerstone of our continued success . . . that's why more buyers and sellers select ANN BLACKHAM & CO. to be their Real Estate broker.

ARUBA, PARADISE FOR POETS

Due to its most unusual climate, dry and windswept Aruba has the most unusual vegetation in the Caribbean. Cactus, aloe vera and other desert plants abound throughout the rolling sand dunes. The wind sculpts everything from the assymetrical divi-divi trees to surrealistic rock formations. The northeast coast is rugged and its surf is merciless. It is not advisable for any activity other than sightseeing. The southwest coast, however, is calm and offers miles of beautiful palm-fringed white sand beaches. This includes world-famous Palm Beach, site of many of the island's hotels. Aruba also has casino gambling, good shopping and great dining in a wide variety of restaurants.

Our experienced staff at FAIR WINDS TOURS looks forward to assisting you with your complete personal and business travel arrangements. It never costs you any more to use our service. In many cases we have saved our clients money and in all cases we have saved them unnecessary headaches and hassles. Come on by and see us. Free parking is available behind our building.

Choate-Symmes reduced fees draw men to cosmetic surgery

Not long ago, it was taboo to tamper with Mother Nature. To improve one's appearance through plastic surgery was generally unacceptable unless a birth defect or an accident was responsible for disfigurement.

Times have changed. In 1984, plastic surgeons in the nation performed 293,300 common cosmetic surgical procedures at their patients' requests. These were breast augmentation, nasal surgery, eyelid surgery and face-lifts. And men are choosing cosmetic surgery in growing numbers.

Choate-Symmes Hospitals have initiated a discount program for the above procedures, as well as for the combination of face-lift/eyelid surgery.

"Reducing hospital fees for cosmetic (aesthetic) surgery makes Choate-Symmes very competitive with other hospitals and brings these procedures, formerly considered a luxury by some, within reach of many," says Dr. Steven Friedman, a member of the active medical staff at Choate-Symmes and chairman of the plastic surgery service at the Choate Hospital division.

The reduced fees cover use of operating and recovery rooms and charges for four routine pre-admission tests. The discount program calls for pre-payment by the patient, prior to the day of surgery, with the balance determined by the amount of operating time and the number of ancillary services required. The discount does not cover the physician's bill, for which the patient is responsible, since this is elective surgery.

"We can offer these routine procedures safely and efficiently through one-day surgery," says Sandra Saleeba, Choate-Symmes vice president for marketing and strategic planning. "Their availability on an outpatient basis enables us to pass on lowered rates to patients."

Dr. Robert Savage, a member of the active medical staff at Choate-Symmes and chairman of the plastic surgery service at the Symmes Hospital Division, points out another advantage. "In addition to the low prices, patients also have the 'safety net' of a full service hospital in case of minor complications," he says.

Though the discount program is new, several patients at Choate Hospital in Woburn and Symmes Hospital in Arlington have already taken advantage of it.

An added incentive for having one-day cosmetic surgery at Choate-Symmes is the "Optional Overnight Stay," according to several plastic surgeons on the staff. The service is geared toward patients who require little or no professional care following one-day surgery, but who are a little insecure about returning home immediately, either because they live alone or because they do not feel ready to resume the demands of a busy household. For a nominal fee, the patient can choose to stay overnight and has access to television, telephone, dinner and breakfast the next morning.

Dr. John Bergmeyer, staff plastic surgeon at Symmes, says it was the ideal solution for one of his patients who had extensive surgery for the face-lift/eyelid combination and felt groggy afterwards. "She and I both felt good about her staying overnight."

Friedman and other plastic surgeons say the number of men who choose cosmetic surgery is growing. Among the male patients of Friedman and Savage, face-lifts, nasal and eyelid surgery have been the most popular procedures.

Old Canal's route will get a marker

Nobody in town remembers the Middlesex Canal, which closed forever in 1853. Most people aren't even sure where the canal was.

Soon, however, everyone will know.

Frances B. VerPlanck and Susan Keats, the town's representatives on the Middlesex Canal Commission, won unanimous support from selectmen Monday for a granite post and a plaque on town property at the intersection of Wildwood, Fletcher, Willow and Palmer streets.

The state legislature has given each town on the canal's route $1,000 to erect appropriate markers. VerPlanck and Keats decided a granite post, four feet high with a 45-degree angled top, would be the right place for a bronzed plaque.

Selectmen enthusiastically agreed.

The canal opened in 1793 but declined rapidly after the introduction of railroads. It passed from Charlestown through Somerville, Medford, Winchester, Woburn, Wilmington, Billerica and Chelmsford to the Merimack River at Lowell.

The town's department of public works will assist with installation of the marker. Any cost beyond $1,000 will be contributed by the town's historical commission.

Mrs. VerPlanck's husband, a civil engineer, drew the map showing where the canal ran through Winchester, at no cost.

Census Bureau to visit area

Local representatives of the U.S. Census Bureau will revisit selected area households beginning Aug. 1 to conduct its Survey of Income and Program Participation (SIPP).

SIPP is a major nationwide continuing survey introduced in the fall of 1983. It is one of the nation's largest household surveys with about 30,000 households participating.

The Census Bureau publishes periodic reports providing information from the survey. Subjects covered include

•jobs and earnings,

•economic effects of unemployment, disability, and retirement,

•how taxes affect personal spending, and •participation in programs such as Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid and food stamps.

Information from SIPP helps policy makers and administrators determine how well government programs are serving the public and how changes in programs and policies will affect the public.

Here are some facts based on SIPP interviews covering the fourth quarter of 1984 (the sample size limits accurate reporting to national figures only):

•About one of every three children in the United States lives in a household that receives a means-tested benefit. Means-tested benefits, such as food stamps, Medicaid, and subsidized housing, are based on specific income and asset guidelines.

•Two-thirds of children in female-family households (no father present) were in those receiving benefits. The proportion was 85 percent for such Black and Hispanic family households.

•Among married-couple households, the proportions of children in households receiving benefits were about one-half for Blacks and those of Spanish origin, and 22 percent for all children.

•Better than three out of four children lived in families where the householder worked at a full-time job, the rate varying from 86 percent for children in married-couple households to 51 percent in female-family households.

•Seventy-one percent of children were covered by private health insurance. The rate was 81 percent for children in married-couple families and 40 percent for those in female-family households.

•About 6.4 million children lived in families where the householder had a health condition that limited the kind or amount of work he or she could do. The rate was 15 percent for children in female-family households and 9 percent in married-couple households.

Information collected in SIPP is confidential by law. Interviewers have credentials identifying them as U.S. Census Bureau employees.

REFINANCING YOUR MORTGAGE

If you've purchased a home during the last few years, you may be paying a relatively high interest rate on your mortgage. Depending on your individual circumstances, refinancing your loan at today's lower rates could save you a lot of money.

There are considerable costs involved in most refinance transactions. First, you'll have to pay some points (a point is 1 percent of the amount of the loan). Then you will have to get a new title search, a termite inspection report, and there will be some legal fees involved. In return, however, you may find yourself with a lowered mortgage payment. In deciding whether or not it makes sense in your case, the biggest factor is the length of time you plan to remain in your home. For just a year or two, it may not pay. Your Realtor can help you work out the numbers that apply to your case and refer you to reputable lenders with competitive rates.

The professionals at Bixby & Porter Company Realtors are ready to serve all your real estate needs. Please give us a call at 729-7000 or visit our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester.

Offer of housing made to town for help in condo plan

everyone's mind, was not mentioned by Murray or Marotta, who followed the same procedure the last time they met with selectmen.

Early in Monday's discussion, the subject was again ignored. Murray talked about access, density, rezoning and straightening the boundary between the town's Leonard Beach property and Marotta's land to match the present course of the river.

Selectman Bob Deering said the impact of increased traffic on Cross Street worries him. Murray said he would have a study done by an independent source but he doesn't think the impact on traffic would be "significant."

Selectman Judie Muggia asked if Marotta was prepared to help the town provide low- to moderate-income housing. Murray hedged, saying he was "sensitive to the town's need" and "open to suggestions."

But selectman Frank Sopper would not let "the toxic question" go unnoticed.

Sopper noted the other issues but added, "The burning question is one of health. There's cadmium, mercury and arsenic on the site. Some areas with those substances have to be capped and vented before you can build housing there.

"What if you develop the area and then mercury vapors come up? What are you going to do, move everyone out, build a fence around it and call it Love Canal II?

"Who's going to monitor? I'd be unhappy to be responsible for people moving to an area that could be injurious to their health," Sopper said.

Murray said he would meet with the town's toxic waste study committee, formed specifically by town meeting to discuss "the Hudson Industries site and other possible toxic waste sites."

But Murray claims there is no "toxic waste" at the site and attributes that phrase to "the newspaper."

Pointing to an April 3 letter from the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), Murray said flatly, "There are no indications of toxic waste."

Murray said metals like mercury are found "in every area but in some areas they're in higher densities than others."

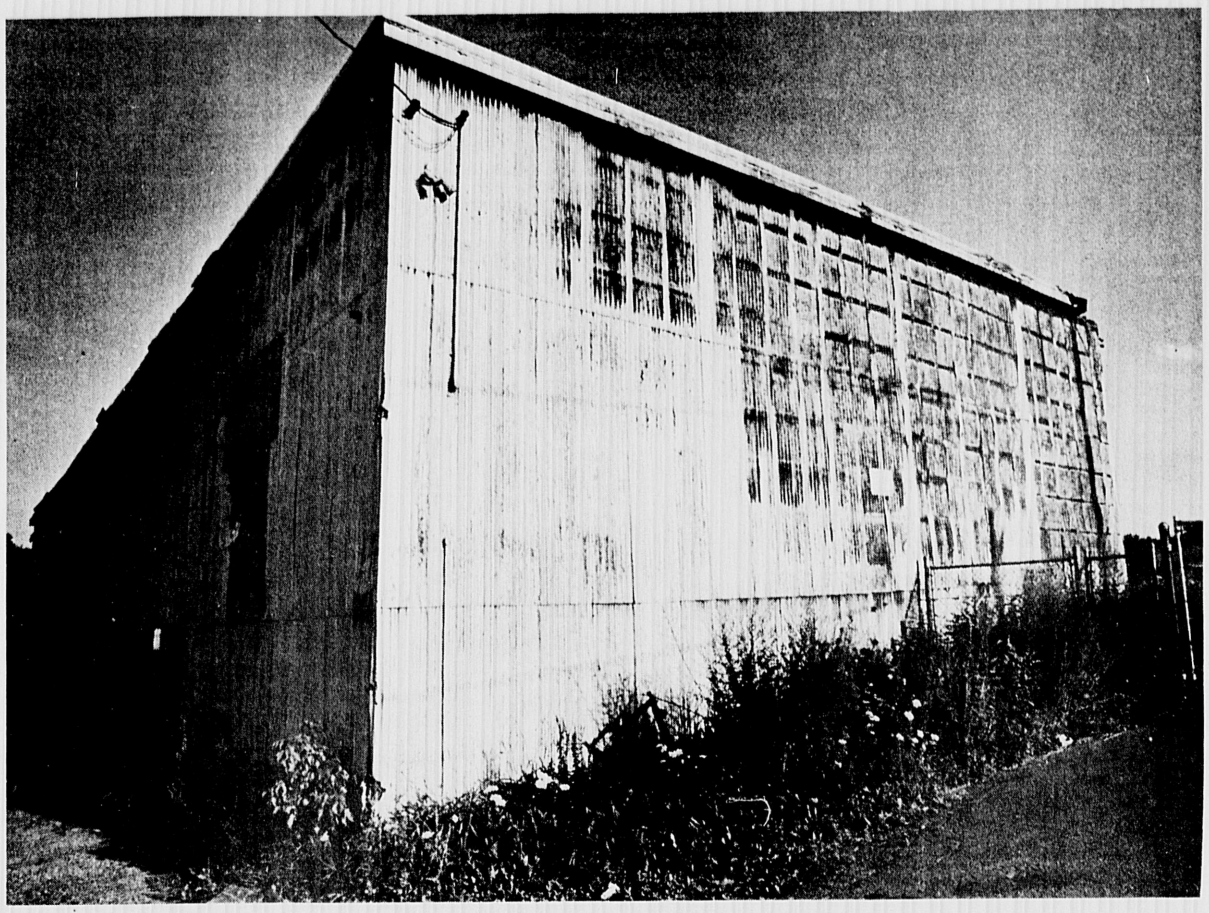

Murray also said cadmium, arsenic and mercury are naturally occuring elements most people memorized in basic chemistry classes.

He quoted from the April 3 letter emphasizing that there is, in the DEQE's words, "no imminent or substantial threat to the environment."

Sopper, however, recalled an earlier letter from the DEQE that outlined the results of soils tests and showed precisely where cadmium, arsenic and mercury are located on the site.

Murray said the elements are found nearly everywhere, "probably in your own backyard.

"They're in our bodies," Murray said. "The issue is not the existence of these substances but their density and whether it indicates a health hazard."

An old steel building occupies the site of Hudson Industries, where developer Angelo Marotta wants to build about 72 condominium units. The presence of cadmium, mercury and arsenic in the soil has led to a debate between town boards and the developer about whether the term "toxic waste" should be applied to the materials found there. (Paul Drake photo)

Murray said he relies on the experts at DEQE and the town's board of health.

"Then why did the DEQE say you had to state in the deeds that it's a toxic waste site?" Sopper asked. "You have to cap and monitor the area, according to same April 3 letter. Why do you have to do that if there's no danger?"

Murray said the DEQE is being cautious, trying to insure that today's determination that the site is safe will remain true in the future.

"Just because they want to test and monitor in the future, they shouldn't be criticized for being cautious," Murray said.

All testing requested by the DEQE has been done, Murray said.

Sopper said the DEQE has "changed its mind" about the site, originally saying no residences could be built on part of the site but later requiring only capping and venting of vapors.

Sopper also asked Murray to supply the DEQE report showing the exact results of tests at the site.

"There's a missing link somewhere," Sopper said.

Discussion turned away from health issues to housing. Selectman Mark Lombardi asked how helpful Marotta might be with the town's housing problem.

Murray said he'd rather have selectmen make the first request. A minute later, Murray changed his mind.

"If we could go to 74 units (from 72), we'd provide two units to the town for the cost allowed to the town," he said.

The amount allowed for low- and moderate-income housing by the state Executive Office of Communities and Development is $82,000 per unit.

"We'd be willing to meet state specifications and deed the units to the town," Murray said.

While appreciative of the offer, selectmen said they really had a larger number of units in mind. Muggia said she would have asked for three.

"One kind of housing we don't have in Winchester is for the handicapped, which is something I had in mind as well," Muggia said.

Murray said Muggia made "an excellent point." He said one-third of all condo units at the Hudson Industries site will be built on one floor.

"These units will also be basically entry-level housing for the Winchester market," Murray said. "That's not because they won't be excellent quality" but because they'll cost less than the average Winchester home, he said.

"It's unfortunate many people who work for the town can't afford to live here," he said.

Welch commended Murray and Marotta for their offer of two units. "I know you've already been cut from 97 units to 72," he said.

Welch said selectmen have often been criticized for attempting to make "linkage" between approval of developers' projects and contributions to the town. "So I'm pleased you've made this offer at an early stage without a lot of arm-twisting."

Lombardi also thanked the developer. "I was going to ask for five units and settle for two," he said.

Marotta's next step was a meeting with the toxic waste study committee Tuesday night. A story about that meeting is also on today's front page.

Boston Saxophone Quartet to wind up summer concerts

The Boston Saxophone Quartet, one of the very few saxophone quartets in this country, will give the final concert in this year's Mill Pond Park concert series at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 13.

The group performs a range of music, from Renaissance dances to arrangements of Lennon & McCartney. The quartet recently provided the soundtrack for the critically acclaimed PBS special on American Playhouse, "The Cafeteria," by Isaac Bashevis Singer, and has performed at the MIT Chapel, Sounds of Summer Series in New Seabury, and the Fairhaven Concert Series in New Bedford.

The BSQ is composed of a unique blend of musicians combining a tremendous range of group and individual experience in wind performance. All four members have performed in concert with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other orchestras.

Kenneth Radnofsky, leader, is a concert saxophonist who has performed at Carnegie Hall and is a faculty member at the New England Conservatory of Music.

Michael Leonard, alto sax, winner of the New England Conservatory's concerto competition, does a number of arrangements for the group.

Winchester resident, Peter Cokkinias, tenor sax, has served as conductor for several organizations, including the Greater Marlboro Symphony and Boston Civic Symphony.

Steven Young, baritone sax, is principal bassoon player with the opera campany of Boston and teaches at the Berklee School of Music.

In case of rain, the concert will be given in the Town Hall auditorium.

The auction is scheduled Oct. 18, the first day of a fall arts festival which will run through Oct. 26.

Donors should contact the recreation department at 721-7125. Each donation will be accompanied by the name of the donor while on exhibit and during auctioning unless anonymity is requested, thus providing an opportunity for local merchants, artists, craftspeople, or groups to publicize their businesses or activities.

Examples of community arts activities that will benefit from the auction are: summer park concerts, summer theater, community arts festivals, "The Culture Calendar" (a newsletter devoted to the arts in Winchester), and new programs and activities in the arts.

She worked as a singing waitress at Mt. Washington Hotel in New Hampshire. A former music teacher, Gobeille was music director for "Godspell" three times.

Gobeille majored in music education at the University of Lowell and is a human resources representative.

For ticket information, call Burlington Players at 229-2649.

Kelly and Pittas at Alley Theater

Malaysia is not exactly cold, AFS'er says

By ERIC MORTENSEN

Have you ever been willing to sell your soul for an air conditioner? Or maybe 70-degree weather? Or an ice cream cone?

Malaysia is not what you would call cold. There is no summer or winter here. The climate is instead divided into a long, hot, dry season and a long, hot wet season. The former is currently half over. Summers in Winchester do get toasty but you know it will soon chill out a bit.

It is now Week Seven of my 10-week stay in Malaysia as an American Field Service (AFS) intercultural exchange student. I live with a Malay family in a kampung (village) in the west coast Malaysian state of Selangor.

My house is set back from the one road and quaintly surrounded by palm trees and other beautiful equatorial vegetation. The house is hand-carved with fantastic woodwork, all done by "aba" (father).

He is a fascinating man, standing about 5'6" and powerfully built from more than three decades of manual labor in our coffee and cocoa plantations. He speaks very little English but teaches me much in Bahasa Malaysia.

My mother and 16-year-old brother, Fuad, speak not an English word but communicate with me constantly. The originally frustrating language barrier has dissipated almost completely.

Though I do not speak Bahasa Malaysia well, I have learned, out of sheer necessity, to express myself in various ways in the absence of verbal communication.

The Malay language is, as languages go, not very difficult. There are no tenses, only prepositions, to express time. The word for airplane is a combination of the words for air and car. Many words are thus constructed.

I estimate that if I were here for a single year, I would master the language.

While preparing my luggage for the trip over, I planned for heavy amounts of rain. That was Error Number One.

After four weeks, it finally rained . . . during my four-mile bike ride to school. Error Number Two.

I forgot my lifejacket. Error Number Three.

Yes, it does rain in good ole Winchester but here's a comparison between New England and Malaysia: Picture the difference between standing in the shower with the water on about medium power — and standing beneath Niagara Falls. Need I say more?

The rain was hopefully anticipated by local farmers. The weather is second only to the government in creating the current plight of the farmers.

On average, a field worker will bring home $5 to $10 a week, roughly $2 to $4 U.S.

This simply is not enough. The popular saying here is "Scratch for breakfast, scratch for dinner." I have friends at school who walk four or five miles or more to school because they can not afford bus fare.

I attend school Monday through Friday in a science track class. It is a rural area and the the educational level is obviously on the low side. About 10 percent of the students will graduate to university level.

In school, I play futball (soccer) and sepat tekraw.

Sepat tekraw is a team sport similar to volleyball but utilizing the head and legs in a fashion similar to soccer. The object is to keep the ball in control, in the air, and send it over the net to the opposing team.

This last step is done using back flips and fantastic acrobatic kicks. It is very easy. (Dear reader: the preceding sentence was drenched in sarcasm.)

Every time I turn around, I rediscover the beauty of this country. Every morning as I bicycle to school, I ride down a long straight road. I cut my way through the knee-high mist as would the bow of a sailboat early in the morning on a New England lake.

To my right are frequent fish stands with angular thatched roofs accenting the oriental signs and Chinese people below.

To my left, the sun drags its way above the picturesque palms in the distance. It may be difficult to understand, but this is just my attempt to describe the indescribable.

Life here is peaceful. The people don't rush. They maintain a relaxing pace. Everyone knows everyone in my kampung and doors are left open to match open hearts.

I often awaken to find a five-year-old boy looking through my pictures or a little girl asleep in my desk chair with our kittens. Things can not be kept hidden and I have had to work hard to adapt to allowing my stuff to be frequently handled.

Patience and acceptance are among my traits which, I think, have been amplified unintentionally in the past weeks. I must emphasize that AFS gives you the opportunity for an experience, not a fun vacation.

There is a bit of excitement right now because the national government has decided to hold elections Aug. 3. It should be interesting to witness the result and the reaction of the general public.

My own life here is quite different from what I am accustomed to back home. I work with my father in the plantations and eat in the traditional Malaysian style — with the fingers of the right hand while sitting on the floor.

The food consists of rice and fish but the fruits are also numerous, exotic and delicious. So far I have tried everything I have been offered and have loved everything.

Malaysia is an incredible place. I feel as though I have been here for many years. I left being a visitor behind long ago.

I am part of my family here and totally immersed in the culture. My thoughts, however, often drift back around the world to 01890. There will be more to come.

(Editor's note: Eric Mortensen will be a junior at Winchester High School in the fall. He is the son of David and Jean Mortensen and is spending the summer in Malaysia as an AFS summer exchange student. The Winchester AFS chapter was organized last fall.)

McGonigle party in town draws 150

A fund-raising party for incumbent sheriff John McGonigle was conducted recently at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Winchester.

McGonigle said more than 150 people, including police chief John McHugh, attended. He said he was "delighted" with the size of the crowd.

The sheriff said he plans to visit many Middlesex County towns to hear the concerns of the people about the criminal justice system and law enforcement in general.

Be sure of condo site

Town officials must be doubly sure the old site of Hudson Industries is safe before they approve condominiums there.

Developer Angelo Marotta, a state legislator from Medford, wants to build about 72 units on the site. State environmental officials once indicated the presence of cadmium, mercury and arsenic would make housing there a bad idea.

They now say the site is good enough if developers cap the site, vent it and monitor it.

Winchester officials should insist on knowing all they can and being as careful as possible. If the site is truly safe, there's no reason condos shouldn't be built there.

But if there's any doubt, Winchester should not be a party to endangering anyone, however forewarned they should be through reading their deeds.

Must be a better way

It was "Monday Night Live" at the selectmen's meeting this week.

There must be a better way to decide whether dogs bark excessively or are vicious than to spend 75 minutes of a selectmen's meeting with an old-time melodrama.

There it was. Wade Welch, wearing the mantle of the judge, had to caution the audience several times when cheers and catcalls rang out for the players involved. All that was missing was popcorn to toss at the mustachioed villain.

While it might have been great theater to watch the lawyer for the defense interrogate witnesses, it was bad policy for the town. Members of the planning board waited throughout the proceeding for a scheduled meeting to discuss the Woburn Loop.

Their meeting was postponed until next week.

Too bad. Boo. Hiss.

George Derringer

State's confused too

Town moderator John Sullivan should be as successful with state bureaucrats as he was with town officials during the last town meeting.

When three town boards seemed to be operating at cross purposes on the housing issue, Sullivan lectured them sternly and demanded they get their act together. They did.

Massachusetts officials could use the same lecture now.

While one office tells town officials they must submit complete plans for their Section 705 housing units to the Executive Office of Communities and Development by Aug. 15, the state secretary of transportation won't even visit one site until Aug. 19.

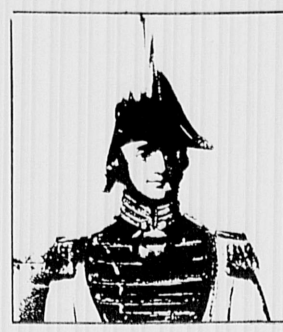

Trying to make sense of the state bureaucracy is the major function of state legislators. Rep. Whip Saltmarsh might ask for lecturing lessons from Sullivan.

At least this time, however, the EOCD can't pin the blame for the long-delayed housing program in Winchester on town bumbling.

The Commonwealth wins that prize.

Coming soon to a selectmen's meeting near you?

You might remember the uproar when selectman Frank Sopper used his video camera and recorder to demonstrate evil-doing near the town reservoirs in the Middlesex Fells Reservation.

During discussion of a town-owned lot behind 742 Main St., selectman Mark Lombardi objected strenuously to claims that town employees litter the lot and that a private party does not use the lot for his own purposes.

At the end of the discussion, Wade Welch summed up.

"Captain Video, anyone?" he said. Nobody had to ask what he meant. Rated PG.

"Winchester is going to the dogs!"

Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, tried desperately to keep anyone from saying those words during a marathon public hearing about two Swan Road dogs Monday night.

He failed.

According to dog officer Nick Molea, the town has 1,700 registered dogs and they raise a ruckus in some neighborhoods, according to some folks. Most of those folks are cat lovers, according to reliable rumors.

But for more than an hour, Welch kept anyone from saying the town is "going to the dogs." When somebody finally said it, Welch waved his arms furiously.

Let the record show, however, that while Welch waved his arms, the soundtrack recorded "Right." Must be a lot of cat lovers.

What's in a tattoo?

By TERRY MAROTTA

A lot of people have tattoos.

You realize this in the summer especially, when they put so much of themselves on display.

Take the beach, for example. There you see freckles; moles; yards of thigh; great cheerful bellies on men who rub them with affection, the way you'd rub the neck of a dog snoozing at your feet.

And tattoos. Zillions of tattoos; it turns out, strange and dusky-hued insignia that bloom like secret gardens beneath the clothes.

Why do folks want a tattoo in the first place? Getting one used to constitute a rite of passage almost. A young man would join the service first, then drink too much one night, drift over to the more pungent parts of town, and let a silent fellow in an undershirt inject hot needles beneath his skin. It was a puberty rite as much as anything else.

It seems to be more than that now. In getting tattoos today, folks are asking their bodies to act as billboards, allowing corners of their flesh to stand as advertisements for who they are and what they believe in.

I was at a lake last week and saw a young man with so many tattoos he looked like the sample book. Squiggles of color dotted his biceps. Star and snowflake patterns drifted through the pimply heavens of his back. A series of asterisks marched across his belly, making reference, perhaps, to footnotes hidden in the subtext below. He looked like Merlyn's book of Magic, written in Merlyn's spidery shorthand.

Just down from him, a veteran's tattoos told his story to the world. His outfit's insignia reiterated itself on his chest, like a good soldier giving name, rank and serial number. Serpents and dragons testified to his fighting abilities. "Semper Fi" announced his branch of service. The man himself was 50 if he was a day; his skin, though, was still 19.

By the water's edge, the most recent kind of tattoo presented itself for the world's admiration. It belonged to a girl of perhaps 20, an abundant testimony to staunch hormones and a good appetite. Over her left breast, in roughly the spot where girls pledge allegiance, a dark blue tattoo read "Wayne's".

It was either Wayne himself or some hapless successor who followed behind her in a kind of bounding Collie's trot. Despite her having named her chest for him, he seemed very much a minor character in this young lady's rich and rolling narrative.

tattoos represent a way to assert oneself to the world then, a method for stating one's individuality. They're breathing bumper stickers, living ads, blushing personal mottos.

I haven't seen any yet that say "Honk If You Love Jesus," or "I'd Rather Be Dancing." I won't be surprised if I do though. Maybe I'll run across an old chestnut like "Impeach Earl Warren" one of these days, or the more feisty "If You Can Read This You're Too Close."

There's something very nice about tattoos. Something wacky and outspoken and typically American.

I have a friend who has one on her shoulder, a small and discreet butterfly. It's a totem of some kind for her and a decoration too, I think, like the tiny diamond stud my cousin from California wears in her nose.

It's good to feel free enough to sport such decoration.

I may get a tattoo myself. The symbol for Pi would be nice, for Pi's brave decimalled march toward infinity. I like butterflies too, with their sweet and dithering lack of a flight plan. The possibilities are endless.

G.K. Chesterson said once that lying in bed would be the supreme experience if one only had a pencil long enough to write things on the ceiling. I wonder if he ever thought of using, to the same end, the flat blank plain of his own broad tummy?

Poetry for today's world

TO THE EDITOR:

I found this verse in some keepsake. I have no idea where it was written, but I was impressed with how it was said. I'd like to share it.

Sincerely,

June Leavitt

The following poem originally appeared in "Timberline," house organ of Southwest Forest Industries, of which Clayton Arnold is Manager of Communications and Publications.

Be Thankful, My Brothers

Look around you, my brothers. What do you see?

Pollution, inflation, drugs, crime and poverty?

Yes, these confront us but take a good look.

Past murky waters to the depths of the brook.

What lies there below is goodness and hope—challenge and chances, not reasons to mope.

There are trees, streams, many a hill and dale.

Sounds of man's progress, a newborn baby's wail.

We've the right to protest, vote and to speak.

To walk our own paths each day of the week.

Yet life isn't all roses, on this we'll agree.

But who'll make it better, if not you and me?

"It's all in your outlook," a wiseman once said.

So if you don't like it, help remake the bed.

Seek out the truths, the wonders of our land.

Love it, Cherish it. And lend it your hand.

Be thankful, my brothers. We're truly blessed.

Bow down. Praise God. And give life your best.

Safe Drinking Water Act will help New England, EPA leader claims

By MICHAEL R. DELAND
Regional Administrator
U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

In late June, President Reagan signed the Safe Drinking Water Act amendments, the first major piece of environmental legislation this year. This new law broadens the agency's responsibilities for ensuring high quality and safe drinking water supplies.

In summary, the new amendments require the development of drinking water standards for many contaminants in drinking water that are currently unregulated, and strengthen the agency's enforcement powers.

In addition, the amendments contain the first set of national groundwater provisions. These include the Wellhead Protection Program and the Critical Aquifer Protection Area Program. Both are designed to protect public groundwater supply wells from contamination sources.

Also, the new amendments impose a ban on lead-containing plumbing materials since studies have found that excessive levels of lead in drinking water can harm the central nervous system, expecially in children.

Specifically, the law requires EPA to set standards within the next three years for 83 contaminants it has already listed in the Federal Register. Nine must be regulated within a year of the bill's enactment, 40 within two years and the remaining 34 within three years.

Within 18 months, EPA will issue regulation requiring that public water supply systems test for contaminants not yet regulated by the federal government. Public water systems would have to test their water for these contaminants at least once within five years thereafter.

Other provisions include requiring states to install filtration systems for surface water supplies, to remove pollutants and to issue regulations requiring disinfection of public drinking water supplies. While these are costly measures, they go far toward reducing the risk of disease caused by microbiological contaminants entering water distribution systems.

For example, outbreaks of giardiasis have occurred in North Andover and Pittsfield. Unter the new amendments, these communities will required to install filtration systems.

EPA realizes these requirements place a financial burden on the states. Thus, the agency has requested an increase in grant monies in the FY '87 budget for program assistance to help ease some of the cost.

Wellhead protection provisions are a key feature of the new amendments. Within three years, states will be required to develop programs protecting areas around wells supplying public drinking water systems if they wish to receive implementation funds from EPA. Restricting various activities, such as landfills and certain types of development within a specified radius of a well head, will go a long way toward environmental and public health protection.

Upon approval of state well head protection plans, states will be eligible for an EPA grant of 50-90 percent of the cost of plan development and implementation. Funds after three years are only available to implement protection. States are required to implement a plan within two years of approval and to provide the Agency with a bi-annual status report.

The New England office of EPA, together with the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DOQE), has instituted an effort to protect ground water supplies that is a mirror image of the Wellhead Protection Program. Already six months old, this prototype is designed as a resource protection effort which defines the critical area around a public well in need of protection, identifies all contamination sources and which outlines the federal, state and local role in managing these sources.

The new law requires a ban on lead-containing plumbing materials, which pose the greatest threat to children under six. The amendments prohibit the use of lead solders, flux and pipes in new installations and repairs of public water systems and drinking water plumbing connected to such systems. A warning is required on any solder containing more than .2 percent lead.

In addition, public water systems are required within two years to provide public notification to all users explaining the potential lead contamination sources and reasonably available methods of mitigating such contamination.

Other features of the new law include providing EPA authority to act against tampering with public water systems, revising procedures for public notification of water system violations and expanding federal emergency powers to include intervention against high-risk contamination of underground water sources, as well as the water supply.

Finally, the new version of the Safe Drinking Water Act carries with it tough enforcement measures. EPA is now required to issue administrative orders or begin court action against public water systems in violation when states do not take appropriate enforcement action within 30 days of notification.

We in New England are particularly dependent upon groundwater for our drinking water supplies. This new statute will enable EPA to better protect our precious resource. I pledge the EPA will use every tool in this new law, including agressive enforcement, to do just that.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

The House and Senate. While more than 8000 bills have been filed for consideration in the 1986 session, only a portion of those have actually been given approval by both the House and Senate on roll call votes and subsequently signed into law by Governor Dukakis.

As the House and Senate continue to meet informally, during the summer recess, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" begins a review of bills that have been signed into law during the first seven months of the session. This week's report includes legislators' votes on bills which were approved by roll call votes in both branches and signed into law by the Governor.

Ethics(H 5231)- Approved by House 139-1, Senate 33-0 and signed by Governor Dukakis on April 8 was the bill restoring the State Ethics Commission's enforcement policy in conflict of interest cases.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Senator Richard Kraus voted yes.

Essex Jail(S 147)- Approved by House 126-16, Senate 27-3 and signed on July 1 was the bill directing the transfer of land in Middleton to the Essex County Commissioners for the construction of a new jail.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Kraus voted yes.

Local Aid Resolutions(H 5400)- Approved by House 112-30, Senate 19-5 were nonbinding resolutions expressing the intent of the legislature that at least $241.1 million in new local aid be given to Massachusetts cities and towns in fiscal 1987. The total includes $49.8 million in increased local aid as a reserve for communities to replace a portion of the actual loss of federal revenue sharing money.

Supporters said the package was a fair one which will help communities.

Opponents said the amount was inadequate and noted it gives some communities as much as 90 percent and others as little as 10 percent of anticipated federal losses. These resolutions do not need the Governor's signature.

A Yea vote is for the resolutions. A Nay vote is against them.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Kraus voted yes.

1987 Budget(H 5600)- Approved by House 119-22, Senate 33-1 and signed by the Governor on July 10 was the $9.8 billion fiscal 1987 state budget.

A Yea vote is for the package. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Kraus voted yes.

Malpractice(H 6172)- Approved by House 80-59, Senate 29-0 and signed on July 23 was the medical malpractice reform bill including the controversial provision placing a $500,000 cap on pain and suffering awards unless there is a loss of bodily function, substantial disfigurement or other special circumstances.

School Breakfast(S 2051)- Approved by House 68-38 was the new version of a bill requiring several more Massachusetts communities to provide a school breakfast program giving free or low cost breakfasts to certain children. The Senate did not hold a roll call on the bill itself, but earlier in the session, the Senate 24-9, refused to eliminate a section of the bill requiring that breakfasts be made available to children who do not qualify for free or reduced price breakfasts at a cost to each child which is equal to the cost to the school. Governor Dukakis signed the bill on July 23.

In the House, a Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

In the Senate, a Yea vote is for eliminating the section. A Nay vote is for the section.

These pre-1975 laws essentially allowed these lots to be exempt from any changes in a community's zoning laws. The Senate did not hold a roll call on passage of the bill but it did vote 23-10 against tabling the matter. The bill went to Governor Dukakis who amended it and sent it back to the legislature where it is now pending.

In the House, a Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

In the Senate, a Yea vote is for tabling the bill. A Nay vote is against tabling.

Karen Martin readies a backhand return during the Winchester husband and wife tennis tournament last weekend. She and her husband, Ted, won the tournament title. (Wes Schmale photo)

Martins win husband-wife tennis crown

It was strictly a family affair in the championships of the annual E. Whitney Gray husband-and-wife tennis tournament in Winchester.

Ted and Karen Martin defeated their in-laws, Tom and Katherine Dunn, 7-6, 6-1 in the finals. Tom Dunn and Karen Martin are brother and sister.

Ted Martin's acrobatic volleying and Karen's consistent play carried the day for the champions, who earned a spot in the finals by defeating veteran teams of Bob and Stella Gallant, Denis and Joan Byrne, and Al and Pinky Samoiloff in earlier rounds.

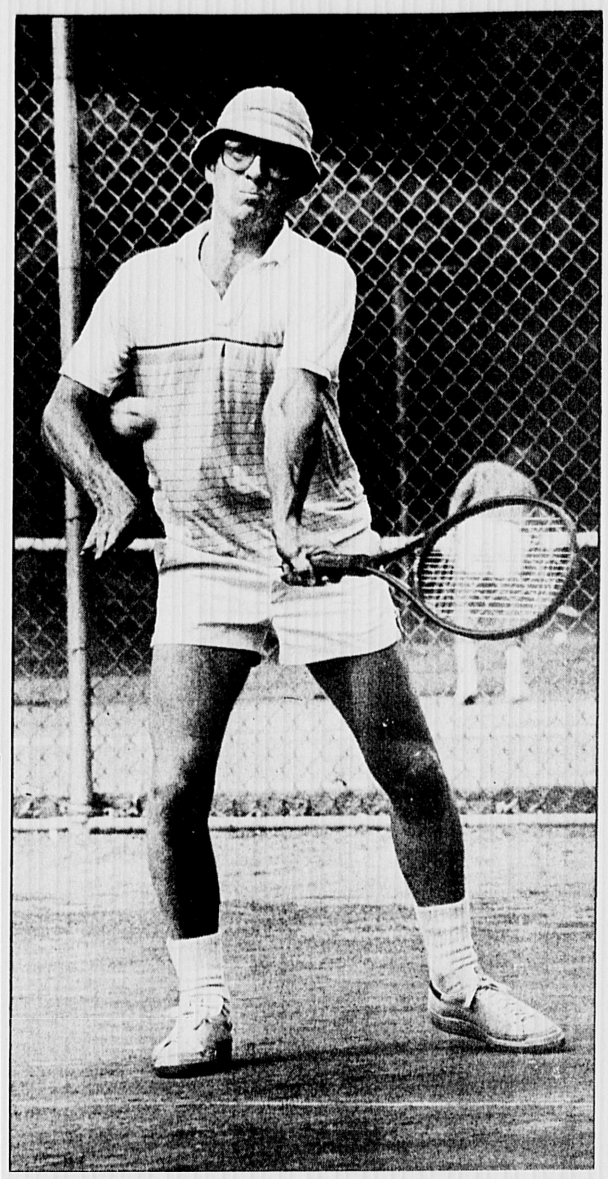

In the semifinals, the Dunns eked out a win over Bill and Ann Ferry, thanks mostly to Katherine Dunn's precision ground strokes.

Other fine performances in the tourney came from Joe and Abbey Culhane, who waged an epic battle with the Ferrys before coming up just short in the third set, Alex and Linda Popp, Steve and Sue Powers, and "Madame President" and John Minniti.

In the consolation match, the team of Jon Ripley and Hillary Turkewitz defeated Bob and Louise Trakimas 6-3, 6-4 in a hard-fought battle.

The Trakimases edged Jim Phillips in the tournament dance contest Saturday night with a couple of "nifty flips, much to the delight of the other participants," observers said. They also said Phillips has begun work on some new moves in an effort to regain his crown.

Whit Gray showed he could still "hoof it" with the younger set as he spun around the floor a couple of times, the observers said.

Phillip Vultaggio is hockey camp's most valuable goalie

Phillip E. Vultaggio of Fenwick Road was named "most valuable goaltender, junior division" at the conclusion of a recent two-week hockey camp at Phillips Exeter Academy.

School director Dave Schneider said the award is given each year to the participant "who best demonstrates the attributes of excellence, both as a hockey player and as a camper."

Schneider commended Vultaggio for "his superior ability, his willingness to learn and his overall attitude," adding that the camp staff looks forward to Vultaggio's return in 1987.

Vultaggio has been a participant in Winchester Youth Hockey since 1980 and was the goalie when the Winchester peewees won the Middlesex League title and the silver medal in the state playoffs in 1985. His coach is Richard Walsh of Grayson Road.

Poetry comes in many colors at Lincoln School

Lincoln School primary grades spent several months during the school year making poetry come alive. One glance at the walls in the office area made visitors aware that children at Lincoln truly enjoy poetry.

Third grade classes were visited by noted poet Elizabeth McKim, who introduced children to peotry by participating in an exchange of learning with them. McKim created "a trusting climate" in which the children could play with language and explore and extend the boundaries of their imagination.

As an extension of the visits, Joanne Martignette, instructional specialist, did poetry workshops with the kindergarten, first, second and third graders. The kindergarten children wrote group poems about colors. An example follows:

Red
by Justin Fisher, Sam Richardson, Addie Gaumer, Jeff Boffo, Jennifer Fiumara and Ryan Magee

Red is the color of a rose that makes me happy.
Red is the cover on my bed.
Red is the color of my sweater that I pull over my head.
Red is the traffic light that tells me to stop.
It's the color of the robin's suit and the rooster that gives a hoot.

First graders wrote couplets. Couplets are two successive lines of virs forming a rhyme. The children chose colors to write about.

One of my favorite colors is green
It reminds me of my jeans.
by Scott Baum

A color I'm not very fond of is green because it makes me feel mean.
by Morgan Brandt

Another type of poetry is acrostic. An acrostic is a composition in verse in which sets of letters taken in order form a word. Second graders chose names of animals to work with. Below are samples:

A Cowardly Cat
cAught a mouse
To play with.
by Andrea Morris

My Beaver

Tree bArk eVery wEek when It's dRy outside.
by Amy Lerman

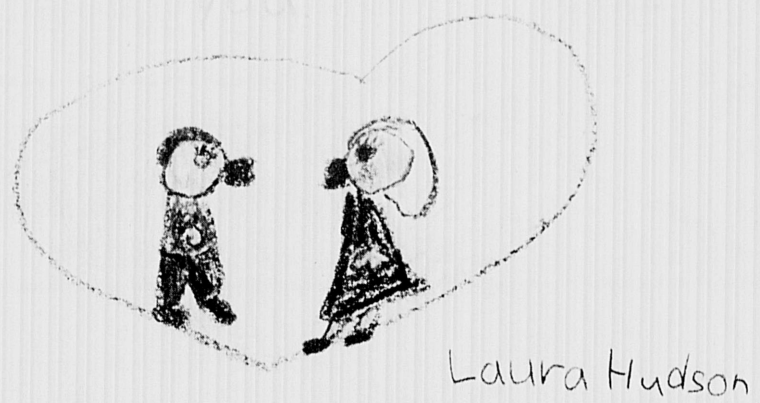

A Bear

Neckties

by Anna McCall-Taylor

Haiku, originally called "hokko," or "starting verse," is an effective pattern of expressing trains of thought and strains of feeling. It consists of a few words that carry a great amount of meaning. The single image and the warmth and simplicity of Japanese poetry form gave third graders an opportunity to think, feel and communicate in a simple verse..

Two new storytimes set for pre-school children

Look what's coming this fall--two new storytime series for preschoolers at the Winchester Public Library's Junior Library. There will be separate storytime for two-year-olds and for three-, four-, and five-year-olds.

"For You 2" is a story and activity time for two-year-olds and their parents. This is a beginning group experience, and a time for parents and children to explore simple stories, rhymes, songs, simple craft activities and creative movement with the guidance of a professional librarian.

Activities are geared to develop verbal, social and motor skills of two-year-olds, taking into consideration their short attention span and need for lots of positive reinforcement. Parents will join their child on the floor for these sessions.

"For You 2" will be offered in a pair of six-week sessions this fall. The first will begin the week of Sept. 2. Children may be enrolled in the Wednesday or Friday storytime. Both will run from 10:30 to 11 a.m.

A separate series of storytimes will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays for three- and four-year olds (and five-year olds not in kindergarten). Tuesday sessions will run from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. and Thursday sessions will be from 1:15 to 2 p.m.

These storytimes will also feature stories, songs, rhymes, crafts and creative movement activities, and will run for six weeks.

Registration for the first series of fall storytimes will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 12. Advance registration is required. For further information, call the junior library at 721-7140.

Dino Movies set

The Winchester Public Library's "Dinomite Dinosummer" continues with two "Dino Movies" Wednesday, Aug. 16.

Children 4-9 are invited to the morning session, when "Dinosaurs: The Terrible Lizards" will be shown from 10:30 to 11:15. "Hot Blooded Dinosaurs" will be shown from 2 to 3 p.m. The afternoon session is for children 10 and older.

Both sessions are free and no advance registration is required. The movies are part of a series of summer activities which have included a performance by the Poobley Greegy puppets, folk tales with storyteller Sumner McClain, crafts sessions and, of course, the summer reading program.

The junior library has been decorated with dinosaur murals, footprints and displays, making it the perfect place to spend a "Dinomite Dinosummer."

Thursday Night Movie

Tonight's film at the library is "The Lavender Hill Mob," starring Alec Guinness, Stanley Holloway and Audrey Hepburn. Guinness stars as a bank clerk who steals three million pounds sterling worth of gold bullion and melts it down into tacky replicas of the Eiffel Tower.

Smuggled into France, six of the statues are accidently sold to a group of school girls. The fun starts when Guinness and Holloway attempt to retrieve the souvenirs.

The film is free, open to the public, and begins at 7 p.m. in the library meeting room. Call 721-7171 for more information.

Rec campers warn Hollywood of stage skills

If you've always wanted to be a star, to act as a star and be treated like one the place for you would have been Winchester Recreation's "Camp Sunshine." The only catch is you would have had to be 5 years of age.

The theme was "Hooray for Hollywood," the campers and counselors were the stars. The two-week session was packed with activities such as preparing a special Chinese theater, participating in skits, lots of talk about Hollywood and an enjoyable trip to the North Shore Music Theater to see the story of Pinocchio.

At the conclusion, it became quite clear that the young campers were very talented. All that can be said now is look out Hollywood!

As for the counselors, they will be remaining here in Winchester to begin the fourth and final session of summer, "Free to Be You and Me." Their only hope is that any newly "discovered" camper remembers where he began.

SENIOR NEWS

Dick Brogna and his band will perform from 8 p.m. to midnight Saturday, Aug. 9, at the Jenks Center's monthly dance.

Seniors dance at a recent Saturday night monthly dance.

Winchester seniors board a double-decker bus to tour Boston on a recent trip planned by the Winchester Seniors Association recreation committee.

Saturday night dance, Aug. 9

Saturday Aug. 9, the monthly dance will resume after July recess. Called the "T-Shirt Dance," it will be enjoyed in casual attire. The lively strains of melody provided by Dick Brogna and his band will make the evening a happy occasion. Light refreshments will be be available from 8:00-12:00 midnight. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Construction continues at Jenks Center

Now that all is cleared away with the Department of Environmental Engineering (DEQE) with whom the Jenks Senior Center contractor and the building management team had to work closely, things are moving steadily forward.

Removing the ground water after the heavy rains held up the construction about two weeks, but now the addition is taking definite shape, heavy machinery is being utilized, and the construction is in full swing.

Jenks holds exercise classes

Exercise is found to reverse many effects of growing old. The New York Times, June 11, 1986 article by Jane Brody, reported a study prompted by the geriatric population explosion.

Researchers are finding that moderate exercise can not only retard the effects of aging but can actually reverse them.

Among the demonstrated benefits of exercise are increased work capacity, improved heart and respiratory function, lower blood pressure, increased muscle strength, denser bones, greater flexibility, quicker reaction times, clearer thinking and reduced susceptibility to depression. The findings show that no matter when in life a person starts to exercise, improvements in function-ing can occur.

Dr. Roy J. Shephard, an expert on exercise and aging at the University of Toronto said, "You'd have to go a long way to find something as good as exercise as a "fountain of youth."

You don't have to run marathons to reap the benefits.

For the average older person who does little more than rapid walking for 30 minutes at a time, three or four times a week, it can provide ten years of rejuvenation."

Dr. Herbert A. DeVries, a pioneer in the field who recently retired as a director of the Andrus Gerontology Center at the University of Southern California said, "Older people, even those over 70 or 80, can make as great a percentage gain as the young through regular exercise."

In his book "Fitness After 50," published by Charles Scribner's Sons, he emphasized, "People who improved the most were the ones who had been least active and most out of shape."

Recent studies show all age associated declines can be delayed by fitness-promoting exercise. For this reason, the regularly scheduled exercise classes at the Jenks Senior Center have improved the vim, vigor, and vitality of the participants under the able leadership of June Cannon. Arrange to join one or more of the classes on Monday, Wednesday, or Friday mornings to improve general fitness, both mentally and physically.

Monthly movie set for Aug. 15

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to view the showing of a 1949 movie in color entitled, "In The Good Old Summertime," at 1 p.m. Aug. 15. The film stars Judy Garland and Van Johnson. It is a remake of the non-musical, "The Shop Around The Corner" in 1940. It was presented on the stage as "She Loves Me." The score is comprised of a number of old tunes sung by Judy and contains comedy numbers by the great silent comedian, Buster Keeton.

Supporting players include S.Z. Sakall and Spring Byington with a very young Liza Minnelli making her screen debut in the final scene.

Doubledecker bus trip is Aug. 10

At 10 a.m. August 10, the Jenks Senior Center Recreation Committee has planned a double-decker bus trip to Arnold Arboretum.

Lunch will be at the Union Oyster House, Boston's oldest restaurant established in 1826. Since eating will begin at 11:30 a.m., people taking the trip are advised to have an early breakfast. A choice of menu will be made from two entrees, Seafood Newburg or London Broil.

This bus is the first double-decker to go through the gardens. A guide will narrate the trip beginning at the entrance to the Arboretum. The bus will return to Jenks Center at 4:00 p.m.

Call the center at 721-7136 for reservations.

Bowling League in full swing

The Winchester Seniors bowling league is one of the popular activities of the seniors association, dating back to the organization of the Winchester Seniors Service Corps., later to become the WSA Inc. The bowling league was organized by a group of very active seniors who met weekly, beginning at Burlington Bowlaway.

Later, they bowled at the alleys in Winchester. From September through may, weekly meetings are held at the Woburn Bowladrome on Montvale Avenue on the first floor, just one block from the square. The team meets on Fridays from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m., beginning on September 13th after the summer recess.

The Bowling league invites all seniors interested in the game to join them this fall. Bowling is an excellent means of exercising that is not too strenuous and provides multiple opportunities for socialization.

The small weekly charge includes the banquet at the end of the year. Shoes are provided to seniors without cost.

All seniors interested in joining the league, please contact Guy Mingolleli at 729-1525.

NEMH plans new building

Initial site preparation has begun for a new Physicians' Center at New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham. Formal groundbreaking for the new center, which will overlook Spot Pond, will take place approximately Oct. 1.

The new 50,000-square foot Physicians' Center is being built to better facilitate the more then 20,000 patients (including 3,500 Stoneham residents) who visit the present doctors' offices at NEMH each year. Plans for the new center call for its construction adjacent to the NEMH Medical Arts Building on hospital property which includes the site of the former Langwood Hall. That century-old building had been condemned as hazardous and was closed to the public for several years.

"We are sorry to lose this 100-year-old building," said NEMH spokesman Jim Bruer. "It holds a lot of memories. But it is beyond our control and it is considered a matchstick. Unfortunately, it has become a danger to the community."

As far back at 1978, the Stoneham fire department said the building presented an extreme exposure hazard to the adjoining buildings of the hospital and recommended that the building be raze

Over the past few years, New England Memorial offered the Langwood Hall building to any civic group interested in moving and restoring it, but the cost for such an effort was prohibitive. According to Bruer, some fixtures from the Langwood building have been salvaged and will be restored for use in the new facility.

Toxic group wary of Cross Street proposal

Dewald requested more detailed testing of the site.

"I have a problem with DEQE's assessment. All you have is a gross analysis," he said. "Down the road 20, 30 or 100 years, we might have a mess on our hands."

Donahue said he isn't sure a more detailed analysis is reasonable. She encouraged Dewald to submit a letter to DEQE requesting additional testing.

Dewald was unconvinced.

"My deep concern is that DEQE has no experience in testing the Cross Street site," he said.

Donahue admitted DEQE has not dealt with a site exactly like Cross Street but it has studied several similar sites. Testing the site would be "a duplication of effort. The samples are valid," she said.

Dewald interjected, "A duplication by another company to test is often highly recommended."

"DEQE has more experience than you, professor," Murray said. Dewald is a chemistry professor.

Dewald noted the site is directly across the Aberjona River from Leonard Field and Muraco School.

Developer Marotta said he would allow additional testing but doesn't see a need for it.

"It's a waste of money. All the tests have been done," said Marotta.

He asked McCarthy why he believes he could better understand the tests if another company did them.

"Two heads are better than one," said McCarthy.

"I agree with you. I'm going to make it safer for the kids (at the playground, the beach and the school)," said Marotta.

Murray explained that if November town meeting does not rezone the land from "light industrial" to "residential," Marotta would have to use it in an industrial capacity.

Donahue said testing wouldn't be as stringent for an industrial site as for residential use.

Marotta answered concerns about his involvement with DEQE as a state representative from Medford.

"I hide nothing. I have nothing to fear. I vote on their (DEQE's) budget. Believe me, they go by the test results," he said.

Murray said the engineer's plan of the site, if passed by town meeting, is to consolidate the waste on the site. All potential waste materials are located at the south end of the site, with the majority in one central area.

By moving the wastes from the outskirts of the hazardous area into a central place and capping that area, the developer can make the land safe, Murray said.

Donahue said the main purpose of impervious capping of waste is to reduce infiltration from rainfall. The material thus remains isolated, harmless and does not leach into groundwater, she said.

All committee members voiced concern about potential leaching in future years and questioned condominium owners' rights.

Donahue said DEQE will require frequent monitoring of the site by the developer. She said previous testing found no hazardous wastes in groundwater.

The board is scheduled to meet again at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 19.

Minutemen here 350 years later

Once a month, each month, from Cape Cod to the Berkshires, some 15,000 Massachusetts National Guardsmen and women put down the tools of their civilian trade and assemble at armories and airfields across the commonwealth to train, just as their ancestors did, for something they hope will never happen.

The reasons vary widely but it comes down to the same reasons colonists in 1636, formed into militia units.

In recent years, the National Guard has been transformed from a group of "weekend warriors" to well equipped and well trained units that serve beside their active counterparts on an ongoing basis. Today, many Guard units are rated higher than the active components because, in the Guard, there tends to be more experience and less turnover.

It's not uncommon for a guardsman to have trained on the same howitzer for 15 years versus two or three years for his active counterpart. Air Guard pilots who have flown thousands of hours and have many more years experience score higher in competition with active-duty pilots while using older, often obsolete aircraft.

Current military doctrine is that if something were to happen today, it would be a "come-as-you-are situation," which is why the attitude about the Guard has changed. We would not have the time to train forces as we did prior to both World Wars.

The term "Minuteman" and "citizen soldier" originated in 1636 when the militia units were formed in Middlesex County for protection against hostile Indians.

Today, the 26th Yankee Infantry Division, Massachusetts Army National Guard, which traces its lineage back to these same militia regiments, comprises the majority of the Guard units in the State. The division is commanded by Major General Joseph J. Saladino of Saugus and is composed of infantry, armor, artillery, aviation, cavalry, engineer, finance, medical, maintenance, signal, supply, transportation and military police units.

"There's been an upsurge of patriotism recently," says Lieutenant Colonel Sal Cerrone. "The quality of our recruits is the highest it's ever been, due primarily to the educational benefits afforded Guard members."

In addition to free tuition at State Colleges and universities, Guard members are eligible for benefits under the new G.I. Bill. "Add to this drill pay of over $100 a weekend for a new private," says Cerrone, "and it's easy to see why it's such a good deal for students and why the Guard is attracting high quality people." Guardsmen serve one weekend a month and two weeks' annual training, usually in the summer.

Other benefits include a student loan repayment program, enlistment bonuses and the simultaneous membership program, where a soldier is in both the ROTC program at a college and in the National Guard at the same time. There is even a provision making National Guardsmen and women eligible for low down payment Veterans Administration-FHA loans.

"Despite the obvious increase in patriotism, strength levels in the Guard have dropped," says Cerrone, "partly because of the low unemployment rate in the state. Many people just don't have the time or the need for a part-time career."

Cerrone heads a state-wide recruiting campaign named "Operation YD" which is currently underway to bring all units up to 100 percent strength.

Emerald necklace rings Boston's harbours in 'secret'

Boston's "emerald necklace" stretches 25 miles out to sea.

Among the city's best-kept secrets is the MetroParks Harbor Islands Reservation — a chain of 30 small islands that span the inner and outer harbors between Hull and Winthrop.

This century, the harbor islands have been largely deserted, following 200 years of use and abuse. But the public is re-discovering these quiet wilderness refuges which are minutes away from Boston's hustle and bustle.

Indians may have canoed to the glacially-carved islands as early as six thousand years ago.

When Captain John Smith explored the harbor in 1614, he recorded "many isles all planted with corn, groves, mulberries, savage gardens and good harbors."

By 1631, the Puritan settlers were using the islands for fuelwood and pastureland. Deer Island, which was connected to the mainland through landfill in 1936, was once legendary among hunters for its bountiful deer population. Slate Island, just off the Hingham coast, was quarried for slate as early as 1650. Hangman Island, barely more than a quarter-acre, sea-washed reef today, was the site of executions during the days of pirates.

Many islands have served as seaside resorts, isolated quarters for hospitals, prisons and institutions, and as dumping grounds for the city.

Above all else, the harbor islands were strategically important to the defense of Boston harbor from the Revolutionary War through World War II.

The Boston Harbor Islands State Park contains seven islands run and managed by the Department of Environmental Management (DEM) and the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC). These islands offer seashell beaches, historic forts, meadows, island camping, fishing, wildlife walks, picnics, birdwatching, plus spectacular views of the Boston skyline.

To reach the islands, take a ferry from Boston, Hingham, Nantasket or Lynn to Georges Island. After the boat docks at Georges Island, visitors can board DEM's free water taxis to Gallops, Lovells, Peddocks, Bumpkin and Grape Islands.

Other regions in the state park chain include Great Brewster Island, Thompson Island, Castle Island and Webb Memorial State Park.

Great Brewster Island, accessible only by private boat, offers fine views of the historic lighthouse, Boston Light, as well as of the outer harbor. The island contains 23 acres, with tidal pools and rocky beaches. The island has boat piers, picnic and camping areas and guided walking tours, but there is no freshwater available.

Thompson Island is owned by the Thompson Island Education Center, and the island's 157 acres are available on a limited basis for guided tours, hiking and picnicking. The center provides boat transportation to the island. For details, call them at 328-3900.

Castle Island was first linked to South Boston by landfill in 1891. Before that, it was an authentic island which played a major role in the American Revolution.

Fort Independence, with roots going back to 1634, is recognized as the oldest continuously used military fortification in the United States. The British spent thousands of pounds and took refuge in the fort as political tensions mounted in Boston during the late 1700s. They used the fort as a basis for operations, then set the island on fire when they were forced to evacuate Boston.

Fort Independence, renamed in honor of the new nation, was quickly rebuilt by U.S. forces and was manned during the War of 1812. It was also a Civil War military camp and an observation post during both world wars.

Today, Castle Island is popular for inner harbor views, picnicking, and the historic Fort Warren tours given by the Castle Island Association. For tour details, call 727-5250.

Webb Memorial State Park, a 36-acre peninsula that served as a Nike missile base in the 1950s, now features scenic walking trails, harbor vistas, tables and grills for picnicking. The park, located in Weymouth, is accessible by car.

New England's richest Civil War site lies just seven miles off the Boston coast.

The 30-acre George's Island houses Fort Warren — a training ground for Union soldiers, the birthplace of the marching song, John Brown's Body, and the stoney, inescapable prison for Confederate sympathizers and important Rebel leaders.

Through Labor Day, visitors can take guided tours through most of the crumbling, pentagonally-shaped fortress, with its two- to eight-foot thick, hand-hewn granite walls, it's musty powder magazines, sallyports, and barren living quarters.

Since Georges Island is located at "the throat" of Boston Harbor, facing the main ship channel, it has always been considered the most strategically important site on Boston Harbor.

The French allies during the Revolutionary War built the first earthwork fortifications on the island in 1778 to protect the fleet as well as the American colonists from the British.

Recognizing the island's strategic potential, the U.S. Government began the two-decade construction of Fort Warren in 1833.

The island was used as a training grounds for Union soldiers, and the Tiger Battalion of the 12th Regiment had to clear away construction debris before they went into training.

They often sang while they performed this drudgery, and a running joke about a battalion member with the same name as John Brown, the abolitionist hanged after the Harper's Ferry raid, led the men to write the lyrics to John Brown's Body.

It was their song, played during a military parade, which Julia Ward Howe transformed into The Battle Hymn of The Republic.

By 1861, the fort was used as a prison for Confederate prisoners.

Among the most famous inmates was Alexander Stephens, vice president of the Confederacy and two diplomats, James Murray Mason and John Slidell, whose arrests aboard a neutral British steamer nearly caused an international crisis.

The fort was later equipped with more modern tools of warfare during World Wars I and II, although it saw no military action in all its history.

The last guns were carted off to salvage yards in the 1950s, and nearly 30 years of neglect left its mark on the old fortress. The Civil War murals in the John Brown's Chapel have been vandalized, and hundreds of chandeliers and marble mantlepieces have been stolen from the premises.

Still the fortress is a great place to explore. The MDC park rangers offer entertaining guided walks of Fort Warren — complete with ghost stories and other island legends.

Free guided tours are offered weekdays 11:15 a.m. and 2:15 p.m., weekends 11:15 a.m., 1:15 and 3:15 p.m.

In addition to the historic fort, the island offers picnic areas, fishing and boating, plus a snack bar.

Historian Edmund Rowe Snow paints Lovells Island as the site of buried pirate treasure, but the 62-acre island is best noted for its picnic area with hibachis and tables, walking trails through meadows, duned, and saltmarshes, and the ruins of Fort Standish, built in 1900.

Lovells also offers campsites and has the only supervised swimming beach on the islands.

Campers must bring their own fresh water and obtain free camping permits by calling the MDC at 727-5250.

The MDC gives guided walks of Fort Standish and Lovells Island weekdays noon and 3:30 p.m., weekends noon, 1, 2 and 3 p.m.

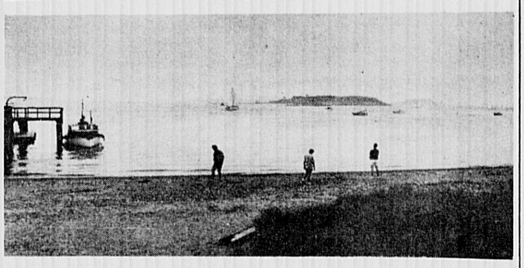

The 188-acre Peddocks Island is one of the largest harbor islands. Unlike the other islands, which are uninhabited, Peddocks has a small, summer population. The summer residents live in rustic cottages without electricity.

On the east head of the island is the remains of Fort Andrew. Built in 1900 out of fears created by the Spanish-American War, the fort was garrisoned with coastal artillery in World War I and with antiaircraft guns and observation stations during World War II.

Guided tours of Fort Andrews are given by the MDC weekdays

A summer finale of shows

Uneven results in A Tale Of Two Cities

REVIEW

Larry Carpenter, Artistic Director of the American Stage Festival in Milford, N.H., accepted a heady challenge when he undertook the adaptation and direction of Charles Dickens' A Tale Of Two Cities. While the handsome mounting, running through Aug. 9, is uneven, Carpenter is to be commended for his valiant effort and a production that does succeed on many levels.

This classic, the story of a young man who sacrifices himself so that another man may enjoy happiness with the woman they both love, is technically stunning.

John Falabella's somber sets with their disconcerting angles depict a Paris turned upside down by mob rule during the French Revolution, wonderfully abetted by David Lockner's ominous light design, handsome period costumes by Mark Wendland, and provocative music provided by Skip Kennon. All bring vitality and truth to the urgency of the life and times in 1775 — the horse-drawn carriages on the cobbled streets of old London and, across the channel, the roll of the infamous death wagons.

Carpenter's picturization of the epic scenes (there are 25 in the cast, many portraying multiple roles) is brilliant; on the other hand, the long first act is sluggish.

Some of the performances are marvelous. Richard Levine lights up the stage at every turn, whether in his characterization of the turncoat John Barsad or as the deliciously foppish Marquis de Evremonde (truly a gem of a cameo). Olivia Williams is powerful, booming forth as the bitter and vengeful Madame Defarge, and towering in her final denunciation of the French aristocracy. Bernadette Wilson is sweet and sensitive and totally convincing as Lucy Manette, and Robin Chadwick warms up to his role of Jarvis Lorry, banker and loyal friend of the Manette family.

Unfortunately, the other principals leave much to be desired. John Martinuzzi is totally inept and unsympathetic as Sydney Carton. He is without vocal intonation or facial animation and, rather than creating a likeable rogue, he interprets Carton as blase and distasteful. When he heads for the guillotine, you couldn't care less. (Oh, for Ronald Coleman!) Ray Dooley's concept of Charles Darnay is that of a totem pole. The dialogue of Joyce Worsley as Miss Pross is often muffled, and that of Tom Celli as Alexander Manette is even worse, totally unintelligible.

Manette, "buried alive" in the Bastille for 18 years, is finally released ("recalled to life") with the help of old family friend Lorry, who, along with housekeeper Miss Pross, has looked after Manette's daughter Lucy all these years.

In London five years later, a man the Manette family met on the boat train, Frenchman Charles Darnay, is tried as a traitor for selling secrets to the French. His solicitor Mr. Styver (William Linton) is assisted by Carton, who possesses an uncanny resemblance to Darnay. Spy John Barsad makes a poor witness and Darnay is acquitted.

Meanwhile, in France, an uprising by the populace foments, turning to an outright rebellion by the poor and oppressed.

It is now 1789. Lucy and Darnay are married and the parents of a young daughter. In Paris, the mad, dangerous throngs storm the Bastille. After three years of fighting, Darnay receives an urgent message from a loyal servant asking for help and returns to Paris, "an immigrant," whereupon he is imprisoned.

Fifteen months pass before Darnay is brought to trial by the People's Court of the newly formed Republic. Due to an impassioned plea by Manette, he is found innocent, only to be re-arrested on charges by Madame Defarge.

In one of the show's most dramatic moments, she unfolds her story, how her sister was "outraged" and her brother killed attempting to defend her. She demands retribution and produces a letter penned by Manette while imprisoned, which seals Darnay's fate.

But Carton, in an act of self-sacrifice, drugs Darnay during a prison visit and exchanges places with him. Darnay and family are spirited out of France, while Miss Pross, in a struggle with Madame Dufarge, accidently shoots and kills her.

And Carton faces La Guillotine with the immortal lines, "It is a far better thing that I do than I have ever done. It is a far far better rest than I have ever known.

Fanny staged at Goodspeed

The poignant musical Fanny, which chalked up 888 performances from 1954 to 1956 to become one of Broadway's greatest hits, is on this week at the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam (Conn.) and will run through Sept. 26.

Goodspeed's recreation of this musical tale of young love, old love and deep friendship, has a cast of 22 under the direction of Thomas Gruenewald.

Three of the most notable talents of the American theatre put together this lyrical adaptation of Marcel Pagnol's trilogy of novels set on the Marseilles waterfront. With a book by S.N. Behrman, the great master of dramatic and comic dialogue, and the brilliant director Joshua Logan, Fanny has an expansive, melodious score by Harold Rome.

The man behind this collaboration was producer David Merrick, whom Goodspeed is honoring this year with a season of musicals he originally produced on Broadway.

Featured in the cast are Peggy Bayer, Deborah Bendixen, Joseph Bowerman, Devin Carnicelli, Charlie Costanzo, Leonard John Crofoot, Karen Culliver, John Dorrin, Gary Gage, Dale Hensley, Andy Hostettler, Marilyn Hudgins, David Hurst, Richard Korthaze, Genette Lane, Andrea Leigh-Smith, Lee Lobenhofer, Chester Ludgin, Judith McLane, Gary Moss, Barry Phillips and Michele Scirpo.

Curtain times are Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m.; Saturday at 5 and 9 p.m. and Sunday at 5 p.m., with a Wednesday matinee at 2:30 p.m. Ticket prices range from $14.50 to $23.50. For tickets call the Goodspeed Opera House box office at (203) 873-8668.

Ballet on the Esplanade

Boston Ballet II performs its 13th annual Esplanade series from Aug. 7-10 and 12-16, free of charge at the Hatch Shell on the Charles River. All performances begin at 8:30.

Richard Dickinson, director, has announced this year's program, an evening of three world premieres and two Boston premieres.

The three new works are Concerto for Eight, choreographed by Danny Sloan, Director of the Danny Sloan Dance Company; Albinoni Suite, choreographed by Boston Ballet principal ballerina Laura Young; and The Moon and The Guardian, a collaboration between Richard Dickinson and Cambridge based dancer and choreographer Arawana Hayashi.

The two Boston premieres, both by the world renowned choreographer Antony Tudor, are Continuo and Little Improvisations.

Danny Sloan, a leading choreographer and Director of the Danny Sloan Dance Company, choreographed Concerto for Eight. This modern ballet is set to the popular jazz-oriented orchestral work, Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F minor.

Principal dancer Laura Young choreographed Albinoni Suite, her first work for Boston Ballet II. Set to seven movements from Tomaso Albinoni's Concerti Grossi, this will be a work for eight dancers that celebrates the performers' youth and vitality.

Richard Dickinson and Arawana Hayashi are jointly choreographing an unusual work for the Esplanade performances.

The Moon and The Guardian is in the style of Bugaku, an ancient Japanese folk dance that evolved into court dance. It is grounded in the Japanese tradition of using lots of space, the art of flower arranging and painting. The ballet has three movements, represented by the Japanese compositional principle JoHaKyu.

The music by Toru Takemitsu is in a 12-tonal style, and specifically written for Gaguku orchestra. Heaven, earth, and humanity are represented in the music that also includes a poem read aloud on stage.

Continuo, choreographed by Antony Tudor to Pachelbel's Canon in D is an elegant and lyrical ballet. With three couples, performing three separate pas de deux, the overlapping canonic structure of the music is mirrored in the structure of the dance itself.

Little Improvisations, the second Tudor work being performed by Boston Ballet II, is a work that explores the relationship between a young man and woman immersed in childhood games on a rainy day. This enchanting pas de deux is set to Robert Schumann's Scenes from Childhood, Opus 15.

Continuo and Little Improvisations are reconstructed by Maria Grandy from a Laban Notate score.

Boston Ballet II is a talented company of 15 young pre-professional dancers who each year, after their debut before an estimated audience of 75,000 people, tour extensively throughout New England. They will also appear in Boston Ballet's 23rd Season productions of Coppelia, The Nutcracker and Tales of Hans Christian Andersen.

Perennially one of Boston's most popular summer attractions, the Esplanade performances offer New Englanders the opportunity to experience some of the finest dance the city has to offer.

Bullpen extends run

Bullpen, the Red Sox comedy by Steve Kluger at the Hasty Pudding Theatre in Cambridge, has extended its run through Sept. 7 with new performance times.

The play revolves around six veteran ballplayers who've been together for years. When they learn that a young phenom called "The Kid" is coming up from Pawtucket, they know that one of them is going to get the axe.

Bullpen started in Cambridge in Jan., 1985, with a staged reading at the American Repertory Theatre and was later named in "Best Plays of 1984-1985."

It opened officially in Boston on June 24th after a sell-out Los Angeles run. The day before the Hub opening, a request was received from the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, NY, for a copy of the script for the permanent drama collection there.

Licensing of the show prohibits changing the play from the Red Sox to any other team and requires future productions to include free advertising for The Jimmy Fund in every program. A benefit was held here recently by the producers of Bullpen.

New performane times for Bullpen are Tuesday through Friday at 8 p.m., Saturdays at 7 p.m. and 10 p.m., and Sundays at 7 p.m.

All performances are at the Hasty Pudding Theatre, 12 Holyoke St., in Harvard Square. Tickets are $17 for all seats on Friday and Saturday, and $14 for all seats at other performances. For reservations call 547-3600.

What To Do

Newport Folk Fest returns

The Newport Folk Festival, Aug. 9 and 10 at Fort Adams State Park, Newport, R.I., features artists who have not yet appeared on the famed folk festival stage: Sweet Honey In The Rock, Bill Staines, Hot Rize, the Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band and The Chicken Chokers.

New artists to the folk music scene include Claudia Schmidt, Patty Larkin, Christine Lavin, Alison Krauss, Si Kahn, Nanci Griffith.

Returning to Newport are veteran performers John Sebastian, John Hartford, Tom Rush, Richie Havens, David Bromberg, The McGarrigles, Odetta, and Corky Siegel.

Though the powerful a capella singing group Sweet Honey In The Rock is new to the festival, leader Bernice Reagon is not. Reagon, who founded the group in 1973, was a board member of the Newport Folk Foundation during the 1960s.

Appearing in this festival for the first time is another highlight in Bill Staines' career. Staines was one of the winners of The Boston Globe's Annual Reader's Poll in 1981 as a local folk singer. His delivery is smooth, his guitar playing is expert and his yodelling won him the 1975 National Yodelling Championship.

Cajun music, which has always been part of the Newport Folk Festivals, will be represented this year by the Savoy-Doucet Cajun Band. Accordionist Marc Savoy, fiddler Michael Doucet and vocalist/guitarist Ann Savoy comprise the group.

Louisiana born Marc Savoy began playing traditional Cajun music when he was 12. Ann Savoy is a musician and historian whose book Cajun Music: A Reflection of a People has just been published. Michael Doucet is an extraordinary fiddler who is regarded as Cajun music's young innovator.

The bluegrass group Hot Rize is named after a secret ingredient in Martha White Flour, an early sponsor of bluegrass music on the radio. Their alter-ego group Red Knuckles and the Trailblazers features four old-timers specializing in vintage honky-tonk country classics of the thirties, forties and fifties.

The Chicken Chokers are a modern reincarnation of a southern old-time dance band from the early 1900s. Their music can be hot and rocking or funky and rolling with a twist of weirdness thrown in for good measure.

Newcomer Nanci Griffith, a Texas native, charms audiences with her clear powerful voice, vivid story-like songs, skilled guitar playing and country-folk style. She is a poet and has completed her first novel, Tow of a Kind Heart.

Claudia Schmidt sings and plays 12-string guitar and mountain dulcimer as well as the delux pianolin, a 52-string bowed and strummed instrument that is reminiscent of a zither and a bowed psaltery.

Alison Krauss began her career at age 10, and now at the ripe old age of 15 she is a renowned fiddle champion. She will soon be featured in People magazine and has just signed a contract with Rounder Records.

Si Kahn is a leading member of the current generation of social activist folksingers.

General admission tickets are $17.50 advance, $20 on the days of the Festival, $10 at all times for children under 12. They are on sale now at all Ticketron outlets, or by phone from Concertix 876-7777 in Boston or Teletron (800) 382-8080 outside Massachusetts.

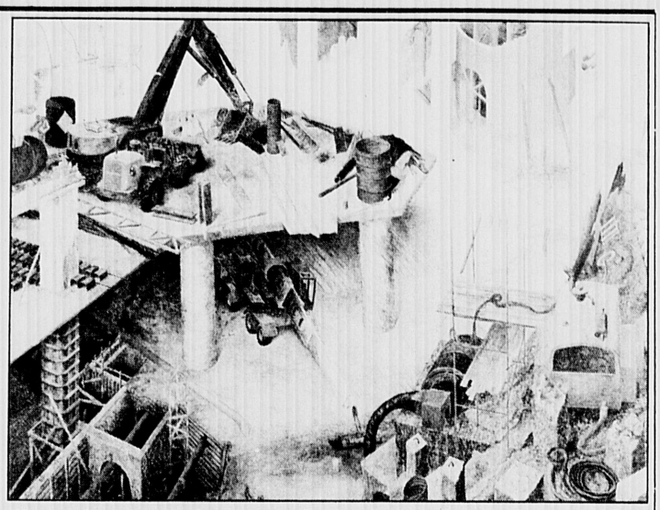

Highlights of this year's Newport Folk Festival include performances by (clockwise from bottom left): Sweet Honey In The Rock, Savoy - Doucet Cajun Band and John Sebastian.

What About Art?

By Meredith Fife Day

Warm and translucent reds, oranges and umbers luminate the expansive space of Eric Shambroom's oil, The Hexagonal Tower.

ICA show raises issues

It is difficult to evaluate the Boston Now exhibition. At times it is even almost difficult to look at the exhibited works.

But the show is not "hopeless" as one apparently disappointed and disgruntled visitor to the ICA galleries wrote on a clearly visible viewer response form.

Perhaps, though, the lack of accessibility and visual excitement for that viewer is a point not to be ignored.

Boston Now was established by the Institute of Contemporary Art six years ago to document and bring attention to current artistic developments in the Boston area.

Each year the emphasis of the competitive exhibition changes. Past Boston Now shows have been Abstraction, Sculpture, Figuration and Photography.

This year's Boston Now: Painting, includes the work of 15 artists selected from over 600 submissions.

The artists represented are a varied group. The curators have done a commendable job of finding common denominators among them and grouping the works accordingly in the galleries.

The narrative and allegorical paintings of Gina Fiedel, Mary Sherwood, Donald Shambroom and Tim Steele fill one gallery. Aggressive in the use of borrowed imagery and myth and its incorporation into a personal statement, these artists each have a story to tell.

From the symbolic figuration of Steele's paintings to Sherwood's religious pictorial "quotes" in the center of landscapes from another time and place, there is a sense of the struggle to make a visual medium accomodate ideas that need verbal explanation.

Only in the vast cavernous construction scenes by Shambroom is a balance struck between visual expression and metaphorical intent.

Shambroom's point of view — looking down into the sites filled with machines, structures, wires, pilings, hoses, furnaces — separates the viewer from the scene. The resulting detachment enables a probing and inspection of this world that man has created but does not enter.

Shambroom's luminous, transparent color and trenchant selection of detail add to the experience that encompasses visual sensation and goes beyond it as well.

The paintings of Bryan McFarlane and Damien DiBona hang together in another gallery. Both artists acknowledge within their personal imagery the significance of the process of painting itself.

The brush stroke is DiBona's means of giving form to shapes while depicting the impetus of their formation and moving them through their dark spaces.

In McFarlane's work, it is the paint that is symbolic, and squeezed paint tubes are attached to the surfaces. Artist Applying Paint is a head and its reflection filled with a bright, full palette of squiggly marks.

The paintings of Jim Chiros and Stephen Mishol are paired in the adjoining gallery. Chiros' dream-like images emerge from a fog of dry pigment so spatially convincing that a sense of the paper's surface is lost.

Mishol's paintings, though, make much of their surfaces. Small wood cruciform shapes push outward from the wall. The thickly applied oil and wax verticals and symmetry are darkly pulsating, with jagged edges and surface variation becoming significant in the context of the form's regularity and universality.

The upstairs galleries contain the abstract works of Catherine McCarthy, David Patterson, Douglas Bell and David Ortins, and the post-pop imagery of Jeff Hull, Nelson and Todd McKie.

Dominated by the monumental and haunting works of Bell, the abstract works are either linear and fluid as in the paintings of McCarthy and Patterson, or statements of color as form and space, as in those of Bell and Ortins.

The shapes and images of Hull and Nelson press close to their surfaces. Both painters have distinctive palettes — artificial and fluorescent — that appear pre-determined and interchangeable among their respective paintings.

McKie, on the other hand, uses color integrated with the individual works and determined by the relationship of a total color field and its component parts. He, along with Mishol and Bell, seems most sensitive of the exhibiting artists to the evocative power of color and its integrity as form.

McKie is also able to make a basically visual statement which incorporates humorous and narrative events.

"My work is full of contradicitions. Fat and thin. Big and small. Ugly and beautiful. Funny and tragic," states McKie. "Is the dog smiling? Or starting to drool? Is that a bone on the bird's head? Or a shoe? Is the chair little because it's far away, or because it's really just a tiny little chair? . . .

"I love to paint. I really do."

That is what a show of paintings should be about: loving to paint. Or at least being compelled to paint.

The viewer who wrote "this show is hopeless" probably could not see that underlying impulse in all the works. It is there, to be sure.

If some of the works in this exhibition are less accessible than others it is because that initial impulse is perhaps crowded by the drive to break new ground, to turn the art world on its ear or even, possibly, to be collected.

It is important, too, that curators take risks for the artist's statement being made in the language of good, passionate, visually exciting painting as much as they do on the chance that, because the statement is new and individual, the artist will be on the cutting edge of a contemporary movement.

Otherwise, the inherent force of the visual statement to move, to provoke and to communicate will become limited in its scope only to an elite few artists and patrons "in the know."

In conjunnction with the Boston Now exhibition are Sunday afternoon gallery talks by represented artists. David Ortins and Steven Mishol will discuss their work this Sunday at 2 p.m. The two artists presenting talks Aug. 17 are Gina Fiedel and Douglas Bell, the informal gallery talks are free with admission to the museum.

The Institute of Contemporary Art is located at 955 Boylston St., Boston. Gallery hours are 11 to 5 Wednesday through Sunday and 11 to 8 Friday. Boston Now: Painting is on view through Aug. 24.

What's Healthy?

Stopping nosebleeds

Why do nosebleeds occur and how can they be stopped?

The vast majority of nosebleeds are only a nuisance and can be stopped rather quickly with simple first aid procedures. Occasionally, however, they can signal underlying serious disease, or even be life-threatening in their own right.

A child's encounter with the neighborhood bully or an adult's fist fight in the neighborhood bar can, of course, bring on a nosebleed. In fact, injuries — some much more subtle than these — are probably the most frequent cause of nosebleeds. Sometimes, however, they can begin spontaneously.

According to the Mayo Clinic Health Letter, most nosebleeds begin in the front part of the septum, which is the partition separating your nasal chambers. Many small, extremely fragile blood vessels converge in this area. Because these vessels are so fragile, they're easily damaged, either by direct or by indirect injury. A direct injury would be blowing your nose too hard or by nose-picking. An example of an indirect injury would be cracks in the vessels caused by breathing dry air or by a stuffy nose.

A head cold or an allergy may encourage crusting within your nose, which can damage the vessels and prompt spontaneous bleeding. This is similar to the effect of breathing dry air.

What should you do if a nosebleed occurs? If the bleeding is from the front part of your nose, the first thing to do it sit or stand up. By doing this, you reduce the blood pressure in the veins of your nose. Second, you can pinch the nose, holding it with your thumb and index finger and breathe through your mouth. Continue to hold it for 5 or 10 minutes.

Another type of nosebleed, most often seen in people of or beyond middle age, arises farther back in the nose. These nosebleeds start spontaneously and are often difficult to stop. They can be caused by hardened arteries or high blood presure. It is usually necessary to be treated by a specialist, and hospitalization and surgery are often required.

To summarize: Although nosebleeds can be early symptoms of a serious ailment, the vast majority result from a direct or indirect injury to those fragile vessels along the septum just inside your nostril. To stop the bleeding, try the self-help tips I've suggested. If they're not effective, see your family physician.

Classic sweaters return

Sweaters. There are the sophisicated styles of top designers made of wool and cashmere, and there are the rows of shaker knit cottons that line the shelves of stores like ice cream flavors at a soda fountain.

Sweaters are definitely a hot item for fall ... and not just because they keep the wearer warm. For years, designers have dictated "what's in" by using sweaters as their medium.

Take a look at knitwear designer Adrienne Vittadini, who got raves for her yellow and hot pink cabbage rose collection last spring.

Forget the cabbage roses for fall '86. This fall, Vittadini is going for the preppies with bold argyle patterns in sweaters and skirts.

In her fall '86 preview show, Vittadini was, well, very Vittadini. Her now standard slim knit skirts and long tunic sweaters were in abundance, but, of course, they had some new twists.

Consider: Caramel-colored knit skirts, some accordion pleated, with turtleneck sweaters covered by cardigans and pullovers in classic argyle but in new colors such as purple, green and fuchsia.

The turtleneck sweater showed up in several other fall collections besides Vittadini's. Bill Blass showed them worn long and lean or tucked in and belted with a full circle skirt that reached to the middle of the calf.

Bob Mackie turned heads with twin sweater sets, while Betty Hanson designer Mark Leal showed chenille sweaters worn with plain skirts or trousers. There were also silvery sweaters worn with gray flannel trenchcoats and trousers in Leal's collection.

Designer Cathy Hardwick warmed up her show with a bright group of mimosa-colored ribbed knit sweaters and matching leggings. Her zigzag sweaters in black and white were worn long and lean over black leggings.

New looks for men this fall

By TOM MICHAELS
Special to What's Up

Color, cut, classics, casual.

These are the four C's of fall fashion I found while shopping the mens market this year.

While we in Boston have relied on the traditional for years, I'm excited to see that the mens market has embraced the classics while adding splashes of color (both subtle and bold) and relaxing the cut to match our more casual lifestyles.

Let me just tell you a little bit about how you're going to see the four C's and what they'll mean to you.

Color.

Fall is almost here, and in New England that means color. Color continues to be the most exciting part of men's fashion.

Grey, brown, and blue are still important, but take another look at the subtle shading of color flecked tweeds and herringbones.

Teal, red, yellow and spruce green as an update to traditional plaids or stripes are as bright as a Vermont "peak" weekend.

A brushed plaid shirt with corduroy trousers when you're mowing the lawn only needs a heather tone cardigan and bright duffle coat to take you to the football game or to a casual dinner.

Your Bass Weejuns will dance with some colorful socks in mustard, rust, or bright blue. Above all, mix the colors and have some fun.

Cut.

Well, Frankie says "Relax, don't do it." (Consult a teenager if you don't know Frankie).

The cut or fit in mens apparel this fall is very relaxed and allows you to do anything you want. You're going to feel very comfortable in sweaters and jackets with raglan (oversized) sleeves.

Pants, whether plain or pleated front, are not necessarily baggy, but leave plenty of room to run for the long pass and look great while intercepting.

Shirts are of natural breathable fabrics, generous enough to move with you on the fall hike. So, whether you're raking leaves or leaf peeping, relax!

Classics.

Thank you, Boston. The Classics have been rediscovered in the rest of the country. And they're better than ever! Take a shetland sweater, add some color and texture (cable stitching looks great) and you've got classics re-interpreted for 1986.

Wool or cotton shirts in traditional tartan plaids with cotton khaki pants have always been a mainstay of menswear.

Jackets, duffle coats, and parkas are designed to take the bite out of the first fall chill.

Make sure you top it off with a nice Irish wool scarf and tweed cap.

Well made classics are timeless. You should have many in your closet now. Just add a couple of new colors or silhouettes to update.

Casual.

Finally, fall is casual, at work and at play. Color, cut, and classics fall in line casually. Checked button down shirts with birdseye patterned ties walk well to work. Sweaters are swell with collarless knit shirts, even colored t-shirts.

Pant creases cry to be wrinkled (don't overdo it, though!).

Outerwear is oversized, jeans are faded. The rules are relaxed. You are more casual. Your wardrobe should have you and what you do in mind.

Caring for leather

Smooth suedes, tailored tweeds and rough tough leather — you'll be seeing a lot of them this fall.

Once you wear it, how do you keep suede looking as smart as it did in the store?

The truth is the care of suede is easy and inexpensive, according to Alicia Herrera, a New York-based fashion designer, who uses it as a medium for many of her designs. Barring a major accident — an entire bottle of wine poured over the garment — it should be cleaned twice a year, by a professional.

In-between care starts with storage. Suede should never be stored in a plastic bag. It is a skin and must "breath." A linen cover kept open is best, or simply drape a cloth around the garment.

Suede should be brushed often to keep dust from settling and to maintain its rich look. Suede brushes are available in most notion departments. Cleaning fluids and abrasives shouldn't be used to clean suede. Instead, a damp cloth or sponge should be used for light cleaning. For tiny spots, a simple pen or pencil eraser may help.

To press suede, the iron should be at its lowest setting and a brown paper bag placed between iron and garment. Skim the surface and avoid overheating that will discolor and damage the suede.

If you're in the market for leather, look closely to make sure the color and textures of the different skins match when considering a garment. Don't buy too tight a fit. Leather will have normal relaxation shrinkage when it's cleaned.

If you get leather or suede wet, don't put it in the dryer. Allow it to air dry in a cool, well-ventilated place.

Market Hints

From PRACTICAL HOUSEKEEPING, 1883

When buying Beef, select that which is of a cherry-red color after a fresh cut has been for a few moments exposed to air. The fat should be of a light straw color, and the meat marbled throughout with fat. High-colored, coarse-grained beef, with the fat a deep yellow, should be rejected. In corn-fed beef the fat is yellowish, while that fattened on grasses is whiter.

The best Fowls are fat, plump, with skin nearly white, and the grain of the flesh fine. Old fowls have long, thin necks and feet, and the flesh on the legs and back has a purplish shade.

When fresh, the eyes of Fish are full and bright, and the gills a fine clear red, the body stiff, and the smell not unpleasant. Lobsters, when freshly caught, have some muscular action in their claws which may be exited by pressing the eyes. When Scallops and Hard-shell Clams are fresh, the shell closes tight. Oysters, if alive and healthy, close tight upon the knife.

WHAT STAYS WITH HOUSE?

Real estate is usually defined as the land and everything attached to it, such as: buildings, trees, shrubs, etc. The buyer normally gets all of the real estate, but none of the owner's personal property. A problem arises when personal property has become a part of the real estate. This is called a fixture and does pass with the real estate.

There are three usual tests which must be satisfied. Has the personal property been permanently affixed to the real estate? Is it intended to became part of the real estate? And finally, what is the local custom? Some fixtures might include: shades, heaters, ranges, screens, storm windows, and lighting fixtures.

It is important that the seller spell out specifically in his sales agreement exactly what he intends to give to the buyer as part of real estate. This will save misunderstanding at the closing, and sometimes save a sale.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

Real Estate Happenings by Steve Collins

A MOVING EXPERIENCE

Moving companies generally give both non-binding and binding estimates. A non-binding estimate is the agent's educated guess about the poundage of one's possessions. The final cost is not determined until they are loaded on the truck, taken to a weighing station and weighed. If you were under-charged, you make up the difference. You get a refund if you were overcharged. A binding estimate has you pay a pre-determined rate, even if the shipment proves to be heavier that the mover estimated. Most movers bid high enough to protect themselves against a loss. Some carriers, with a binding estimate, will bill you less if the shipment is lighter. The mover's basic fee usually covers only the cost of loading your possessions onto the van, transporting them, and unloading them.

Our staff of professional real estate personnel at CENTURY 21 COLLINS REALTY, INC. offers prompt, dependable and personalized service in all phases of real estate. Whether you are planning to move to another neighborhood right here in Arlington or will be transferred across the country feel confident we will give you the proper guidance every step of the way. Our outstanding reputation is built on complete client satisfaction and we are pleased to be able to provide answers to all your real estate related questions.

Solicit several bids from movers. Compare total prices, including extras.

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit — alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts — is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.

Ex-Hudson site is toxic, Sopper says

Is the Hudson Industries site, where developer Angelo Marotta wants to build 72 condominim housing units, really toxic?

Attorney Larry Murray dismissed such claims last week in meetings with selectmen and a toxic site study committee, at one point blaming newspapers for toxic scares.

Selectman Frank Sopper tried to clarify some facts Monday night.

Speaking during a meeting of selectmen, Sopper recalled that the developer and his attorney said 134 Cross St. is not a "toxic waste site."

Sopper said the issue was one of semantics because the site does contain toxic materials.

"The Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has investigated two sites in Winchester, 611 Main St. and 134 Cross St.," Sopper said.

"And the DEQE only investigates sites if the levels of toxic material are above background levels. I'm still trying to get a copy of the DEQE report to know how much above," Sopper said.

"But by DEQE standards, the site is toxic," Sopper concluded.

No other selectmen discussed the topic this week.

Town considers higher tax rate for businesses

By GEORGE DERRINGER

A decision about "tax classification," the official name for taxing commercial property at a rate higher than residential property, will be made Monday, Aug. 25.

Selectmen had advertised a public hearing about the question and actually began the hearing Monday night.

The hearing was continued until Aug. 25, however, because written approval of the town's revaluation has not been received from the state Department of Revenue.

Assessors voted 3-0 recently to recommend a 115 percent tax classification, which means commercial property owners would pay taxes on 115 percent of their valuation while residence owners would pay tax on 100 percent of their new valuations.

If adopted by selectmen, the recommendation presented by board of assessors chairman Frank Mahoney would result in a tax rate of about $13.16 per $1,000 valuation for residences.

Commercial, industrial and personal property (mostly machinery and equipment used by businesses) would be taxed at $15.34 per $1,000 valuation.

Rates computed by Mahoney are based on a total town valuation of $1,549,408,100 and a tax levy of $20,669,367.

Given the assessors' recommendation, selectman Bob Deering asked what basis they used to determine that 115 percent classification was fair.

Mahoney said the extra services given to businesses justified the amount but said whether the figure chosen was 105, 110, 115 or 120 percent was relatively insignificant.

"The central business district gets significantly more services in police protection, board of health inspection, street sweeping, snow removal and so forth than the average homeowner gets," Mahoney said.

Mahoney said commercial, industrial and personal property assessments comprised 13 percent of the tax revenue in fiscal 1982 but only 8.9 percent last year.

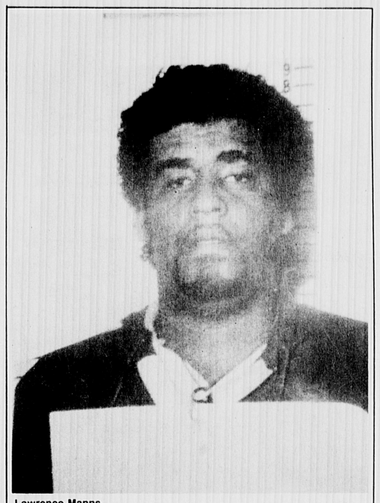

Selectmen discussed a settlement between the town and Boston Edison that had resulted in in $4 million decrease in assessments. Edison took its case against a $13 million assessment to the appellate tax board. The assessors settled for an $8 million assessment against the company's property in town.

"Let the record show that none of the present assessors favored that settlement," said Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen.

Despite that reduction, personal property valuations have returned to their former level at $21 million, Mahoney said. Assistant assessor Jim Doherty and an outside firm opened 151 new personal property accounts, all at businesses.

"We told them to avoid any home occupations and personal property equipment at homes," Mahoney said. "Still, we found that some businessmen had not been charged

Lynn resident charged with bank robbery

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Lawrence Manns, 33, of Lynn was charged Tuesday in connection with a bank robbery July 29 at the Washington Street branch of Winchester Savings Bank.

Manns faces federal charges of bank robbery while armed and masked, illegal possession of a sawed-off shotgun, and assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon.

He is being held without bail in the JFK Federal Building in Boston and was scheduled for arraignment at the U.S. District Court in Boston yesterday. He will be transferred to the Essex County House of Correction, according to Winchester Lt. Det. Joseph N. Perritano.

An FBI swat team, Winchester police and Lynn police arrested Manns, a 6'9" 290-pound black male, on a federal warrant in an apartment at 16 West Baltimore St. in Lynn Tuesday at 7:15 a.m.

Police said masked men held up the Winchester bank and escaped with more than $5,000 in cash.

"We had an identification made the day of the robbery. The following day the bank photos were enlarged," said Perritano.

Tuesday morning an FBI team composed of eight men forced its way into an apartment and arrested Manns. Perritato, Det. Daniel McGee and Lynn police officers participated in the arrest.

Police are following leads for the other masked bank robber involved in the Winchester robbery.

Spenser For Hire working in town

By GEORGE DERRINGER

"Spenser For Hire" found work in Winchester today and tomorrow.

Selectmen voted unanimously Monday night to allow Warner Brothers Television to use several spots in Winchester center for filming two portions of the TV show Thursday and Friday.

When Winchester scenes appear on the TV series, however, the producers will pretend the town is really in New Hampshire. Winchester will not be mentioned.

Nonetheless, the town will receive favorable publicity from the filming and the populace will be excited, said Cathy Alexander, director of the Winchester Chamber of Commerce.

The show, which stars Robert Urich, is set in Boston. Several scenes have been shot in various metropolitan locations during the past several weeks.

Alexander appeared before selectmen Monday night to ask permission for the TV company to use the town.

"In a perfect world, we'd like more advance notice," Alexander said. "But as director of the chamber of commerce, I'm thrilled they've chosen the town, although they will call it a town in New Hampshire."

The schedule calls for scenes to be shot at the C & G Restaurant on Main Street Thursday morning, when four parking spaces near the restaurant will be closed.

Later Thursday, the Winchester office of Bay Banks will be used for a courtroom scene. Other scenes will be

"As director of the chamber of commerce, I'm thrilled they've chosen the town, although they will call it a town in New Hampshire," Alexander said.

Selectmen urged to mull alternative housing sites

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester selectmen made $7,000 available to the Winchester Housing Authority Monday night in an effort to speed approval of the town's seven units of low- to moderate-income public housing.

David Mortensen, chairman of the special commission on housing created by the last town meeting, asked selectmen for the money on behalf of the housing authority.

"The housing authority needs to know how much it is going to cost to build these units," Mortensen said. Funds from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) can only be used for architects' fees, he said, but soil analysis and site analysis are needed first.

"No such study has been made or planned," Mortensen said. "We need to know if we can build these seven units within the money available from EOCD."

"If not we have to decide whether to seek additional money from town meeting or to seek alternative plans. And consideration of alternative sites is at a standstill," Mortensen said.

He suggested that $7,000 appropriated by town meeting in fall 1985 to acquire options on existing housing, which was then seen as a way to fulfill state requirements for state-mandated "affordable housing," be used for analysis of the current four sites.

Mortensen asked that estimated building costs be calculated by the end of August. Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, said the schedule could not be met but agreed with Mortensen's suggestion.

Selectmen did agree, however, to suspend their own rules and vote on Mortensen's suggestion "to make funds available" to the housing authority.

Selectman Bob Deering said he is concerned that "the issue of single-family housing has not been put to bed." The EOCD does not favor single-family units but two of Winchester's seven units, one on Lockeland Road and one on Cambridge Street, are to be single-family housing.

"The housing authority should write to EOCD and make it clear we want seven units, not more," Deering said.

Welch said he is troubled by the timing. If the state department of transportation will not allow housing on the former Woburn Loop railroad property, there is no reason to estimate the costs to build a duplex on that spot, Welch said.

Mortensen said his committee is in a hurry because the warrant for the fall town meeting will close Sept. 19. That date will be a deadline for determining if town meeting should be asked for more money or more sites, Mortensen said.

Selectman Mark Lombardi recalled that the Green Company has agreed to build two units of affordable housing for whatever the state provides. The EOCD grant amount is

(Please see HOUSING, page 14)

Deering said the town should have a back-up plan. "If the EOCD throws out one site, then do you put four units at Palmer Street and two on Lockeland Road?" he asked.

Growing mound of trash may require special town meeting

By GEORGE DERRINGER

A special town meeting may be needed to pay soaring costs of Winchester garbage disposal.

Town manager Chad Maurer and department of public works director Dom Serratore were told last week that estimated tipping fees at the North Andover disposal facility would rise 50 percent from $32 to $48 per ton.

In addition, hauling fees will rise from the budgeted amount of $11 per ton to $26 per ton, effective Nov. 1, Serratore said.

Serratore recently sought bids for hauling and found the low bid was $26 per ton. "Assuming the bid of $26 per ton for hauling is accepted, the transfer station budget will have a shortfall estimated at $418,960 at the end of fiscal 1987," Serratore wrote.

To make matters worse, Winchester people are creating more garbage than ever. The budget allowed for only 13,500 tons of trash but the total will probably exceed 14,300, Serratore said.

Tipping fees, the amount the town pays for putting its trash in the North Andover facility, are rising rapidly partly as a result of the lower cost of oil.

The facility burns trash and sells electricity to utilities at a rate tied to the cost of burning oil to produce the same amount of electricity.

The budget called for it to receive seven cents per kilowatt hour but low oil prices have resulted in payments of only three cents instead.

Because the facility has less income, it must charge more to towns to make up the difference.

"The only way I see is to have more funds appropriated at town meeting," Maurer told selectmen Monday night. Selectmen appointed a committee of Maurer, Serratore, and representatives of the capital planning committee and the finance committee to make recommendations. Two selectmen will also sit on the committee.

Serratore outlined three options in a memo to Maurer last week.

First, the town could simply appropriate $418,960 at the fall town meeting and absorb the increased costs in future years.

The town might also buy five new trailers and contract for hauling only. Serratore estimated costs at $6 per ton with increases of about a dollar each year thereafter. Under this plan, the town would have to spend $200,000

Town population falls to 21,283

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

In five years Winchester welcomed only about 65 more residents, according to federal and state census figures.

Winchester's population rose from 21,385 in 1980 to 21,450 in 1985. The town's unofficial census for 1986 logged Winchester at 21,283.

The town, unlike the federal and state census bureaus, includes college students and residents enlisted in the armed forces, according to town clerk Carolyn Ward.

Winchester has seen less than a 1 percent increase in the last five years, according to federal and state figures. Ward said Winchester suffered a significant decline since 1978.

"In 1979, population gradually began to decline," said Ward, attributing it to a drop in elementary school enrollment. In the late 1960s and through the 1970s, Ward said Winchester averaged 22,000 to 23,000. She said statistics show people are having fewer children.

Ward said the town might be due for a slight rise in population in the next few years.

"I think we're going to see a slight increase," said Ward.

Birth records reveal an increase in births to Winchester women in their early 40s, she said. Ward said newly built condominiums in town will bring in more people, too.

Neighboring towns have experienced similar rises and falls in population. In Lexington, the population dropped about 1 percent, while Stoneham rose about 1 percent.

However, Arlington experienced a more significant drop of 3.6 percent. Arlington lost about 1,800 residents. The 1980 federal census in Arlington was 48,219, in the state's census in 1985 it dropped to 46,465, according to town clerk Annamae Arsenault.

Belmont's population decline was similar to Winchester's. Belmont lost a modest 3 percent, about 80 residents.

Stable populations generally mean more housing units in any town because average household size fell from 3.84 persons in 1970 to 2.6 in 1980.

Leaves turned their backs, waiting for the rain, as storm clouds rolled across Winchester center last week. Thunderstorms and heavy rains were the rule but Winchester escaped the effects of tornadoes, including one which touched down Thursday in Bedford. (Paul Drake photo)

POLICE LOG

Florida resident arrested for OUI and drug charges

Police arrested Mark E. Sullivan, 34, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., for operating under the influence of alcohol and possession of a class "D" controlled substance.

At 11:45 p.m. Aug. 8, Inspector James B. Gray observed a 1977 Chevrolet Monte Carlo traveling north on Main Street in an erratic manner.

Gray pulled the car over at the intersection of Washington Street and Mystic Valley Parkway.

Police arrested Sullivan on charges of operating under the influence of alcohol and possession of an alleged class "D" controlled substance.

Sullivan was taken to Winchester station, booked and later bailed at $200 cash. He is scheduled for arraignment in Fourth District Court in Woburn this week.

Sunday, Aug. 10

At 12:07 p.m., a George Road resident told police she had seen someone throw a beer bottle at her car windshield around 4 a.m. Damage to the windshield was minor. Police found broken glass from a beer bottle near the car.

At 2:04 p.m., police cited a Russet Lane resident for speeding after a car accident at the intersection of Manomet Road and Arlington Street.

Damage was minor to both cars. The cars were driven from the scene.

At 3:05 p.m., police reported a truck accident in Leonard Field driveway. A man driving a 1975 Chevrolet van ice cream truck, told police he swerved to avoid a bicyclist and smashed into the post of the front gate of Leonard Pond driveway. Damage was minor to the post and the truck, police said.

At 5:27 p.m., a Swanton Street resident told police someone smeared ketchup and shaving lotion on his 1976 Oldsmobile. The gas cap was found on the ground.

At 7:31 p.m., a Madison Avenue resident told police someone stole his tool box, containing a hammer, a drill, a gold watch and a bracelet from his driveway. The resident told police he left the tool box in his driveway at 7 p.m. for about 15 minutes and went inside his home to make a telephone call.

At 9:08 p.m., police placed a 15-year-old Salem Street boy in protective custody after they found him in an unconscious state near the park department. Winchester ambulance took the boy to Winchester Hospital. He was treated and released to his mother, police said.

Saturday, Aug. 9

At 7:31 p.m., police cited a 29-year-old Church Street man for motor vehicle violations.

Police observed a 1984 Ford Mustang traveling on Church Street with an expired registration sticker on the license plate.

Police pulled the car over and cited the driver for operating an unregistered car on a public way and operating a car with an expired license. The car was towed from the scene.

At 9:58 p.m., police arrested a 21-year-old Woburn man for failing to stop at a stop sign and for operating a car after his license was revoked.

Police observed a 1970 green Chevrolet Nova fail to stop at a stop sign at Pond Street and Cambridge Street. Police pulled the car over and ran a check on the man.

Police found the man's license was revoked indefinitely after leaving the scene of an accident and causing injury in Woburn.

The man was bailed for appearance in Fourth District Court in Woburn.

Robinson will speak at town GOP meeting

Rep. William G. Robinson, Republican leader of the Massachusetts House of Representatives and a candidate for state auditor, will speak at a Winchester Republican Town Committee meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 19.

John Cannon, chairman of the town committee, has invited all residents to the meeting, scheduled at 53 Wildwood St.

Robinson has served in the House since 1964 and was elected GOP leader in 1979.

"Bill Robinson is known as one of the most dynamic leaders in Massachusetts government and has earned a reputation as a champion of the taxpayer and friend of the consumer," Cannon said.

"He was a major force behind the successful repeal of the 'Dukakis surtax,' arguing that surplus revenues belong to taxpayers," the town chairman said.

PTA suggests ways parents can foster child's education

Many parents want to be involved in their children's education but don't know what to do or how to start. To solve the problem, the National PTA has developed suggestions for parents.

"One study after another has verified that the most successful students are those whose parents become actively involved in the educational and decision-making process," says Ann Kahn, president of the 5.8 million member National PTA.

"There is no doubt that parent involvement represents a powerful way of making schools more effective, and of dramatically enriching children's academic experience," she says.

In a recently published guide, "Parent Involvement: What Your PTA Can Do," the National PTA has divided parental involvement into three areas: Parents acting as participants in their children's education at home, as school volunteers and supporters, and as participants in school decision making.

Kahn says "parents are the first and probably the most important teachers their children will have. In the early years, parents prepare children for later teaching by a professional," she says.

Parents have contact with their children for much of the 92 percent of the time they are not in school. Among the areas where parents like to help is homework. A 1985 study on effective schools found that students whose parents help with homework do better in school and have a more positive attitude toward education.

The PTA suggests that parents establish homework routines early and distinguish between showing an interest in a child's homework and actually doing it for him or her.

Some ways parents can establish a homework routine for their child are to:

•Set a regular time and place for studying. In the primary grades, take 10 minutes daily to read and talk to your child before doing homework. In the upper elementary grades, set aside a half hour for studying and reviewing.

•If the homework includes directions, read them or have your child read them aloud. Make sure your child is following the directions. If not, demonstrate an example, try one together, then have the child try one alone.

•When your child is finished, check the work and circle errors to be corrected. Sign the homework. This will help foster the home-school connection.

•If you don't understand an assignment your child has received, ask the teacher for clarification. Write notes to teachers from time to time indicating what you've observed about your child's homework progress.

"Parent Involvement: What Your PTA Can Do" offers specific suggestions to parents about how to get involved in their children's education. The guide is available for 50 cents from the publications department at National PTA, 700 North Rush St., Chicago, IL 60611.

VALUE OF HOME OWNERSHIP

If you ask me why you should buy a home, I can give you three sound reasons:

STABLE HOUSING COSTS: There is no sure way of telling how high rent will be in the future, but you can surely bet it will continue to rise. Depending upon the type of mortgage a homeowner selects, monthly payments can remain fixed—or at least predictable—over the life of the loan.

EQUITY BUILDUP: Once rent money is spent, it's gone forever. However, each monthly mortgage payment reduces the amount owed on the loan while building up equity (dollar ownership) on the property.

INCREASED VALUE: Here's the big one. Most goods lose value with age and use. Home values, on the other hand, have a long history of increasing faster than the rate of inflation. That increase is on the entire amount of the value, including the mortgaged portion. On top of that, homeowners have the best tax breaks going and will continue to do so into the foreseeable future.

No. 1 in Winchester because we care . . . It's more than just a business with us. . . it's you and the professional service we provide for you that is the cornerstone of our continued success . . . that's why more buyers and sellers select ANN BLACKHAM & CO. to be their Real Estate broker.

Board of appeals faces tough cases

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Three controversial matters are slated to be considered by the town zoning board of appeals Tuesday night.

One, however, is likely to be postponed until the October meeting.

A plan to convert part of the First Baptist Church into 11 condominium units will be given a "preliminary site plan review." Attorney Paul Amico will represent the church.

Town meeting approved re-zoning of part of the church building during its May 22 session. Some neighbors opposed the move, primarily because it could add to a shortage of parking spaces in the area, but most speakers called the proposal "creative" and "innovative."

Developer Rene LeMarr will renovate the remainder of the building for the shrinking Baptist congregation. He plans 11 condo units in his portion of the structure, which he intends to market primarily to older people.

"Very little" money will be exchanged, Amico said.

Re-zoning of part of the church building was approved by town meeting in a 120-13 vote. The project must still receive variances from the board of appeals, however.

Amico will present his preliminary plans at 7 p.m. in the board of health conference room, located in the lower level of the town hall.

Public hearings are scheduled for two other projects Tuesday night but one involving a real estate institute will be postponed, selectmen were told Aug. 11.

Real estate institute

A plan for a real estate "institute" on former property of the Medical Missionaries of Mary on Arlington Street has been advertised as the subject of one public hearing.

Edward Callan, president of Edward Callan Interests in Boston, will appeal two decisions by former building commissioner Anthony Zagzoug. At his request, however, the advertised public hearing will be postponed two months.

Zagzoug contended that the plan for a corporation called One Arlington Institute, led by Callan, to conduct real estate investment seminars on the property, is not a legitimate "non-profit educational" use.

The property is in a "conservancy-institutional" zone but non-profit groups could make use of the land. Zagzoug, however, said he was not convinced institute participants would "engage solely in non-profit activities."

Zagzoug questioned whether research activities of guests at the institute will be used for future private profit-making real estate development.

Callan contends no business activity will be run at the institute, which he calls "strictly an educational facility."

Selectman Mark Lombardi is already on record in opposition to the project, although Callan has already made approximately $80,000 worth of improvements to the property.

One Arlington Institute will also appeal another decision by Zagzoug.

Zagzoug objected to use of a portion of the main residence at the site as a dormitory for guests. Winchester by-laws specifically prohibit overnight accommodations at a non-profit educational corporation's property.

The former building commissioner said the institute's intended use would constitute a single-family dwelling, also prohibited in conservancy-institutional zones.

Callan says institute guests will not sleep there. "The only people staying on the property will be myself and perhaps two other staff members," Callan says.

Yellow signs

Small yellow signs in front of several Winchester homes will be the general topic of a second public hearing.

Specifically, the subject will be the yellow lawn signs in front of 8 Sheffield Road, the home of Dick Sampson. He is the owner of American Alarm and Communications, Inc., which installed the signs in front of about 100 customers' homes in town.

The board of appeals will establish something of a precedent, however, when it determines whether Sampson's sign violates town by-laws.

Acting building commissioner Arthur Gallagher says the signs violate a by-law which allows only one sign in front of any home in a residential district. Most customers had two warning signs installed.

According to town by-laws, signs in front of single residences may display only street numbers and/or the name of the occupant.

Advertising signs are not permitted.

American Alarm's signs appear to be within legal size limitations. The house number is in the largest type but the signs also bear the words "Security by American Alarm."

Sampson, whose company gives the signs to homeowners, says the signs serve several purposes. They greatly reduce burglary, according to national statistics, and help emergency vehicles locate specific street addresses.

Gallagher has said American Alarm is responsible for all such signs because town by-laws make the person who installs them, not the person who owns them, responsible for violations.

Sampson says warning signs, which he calls "flower bed signs," are common across America, except in New England. They can reduce the incidence of burglary about 90 percent, he says.

Neighbors of American Alarm customers who display the signs have quietly objected, however. They say a home located between two homes displaying such warnings is more likely to be the target of a random burglar.

Tuesday's hearing will deal with only Sampson's sign but he hopes a favorable decision by the zoning board of appeals will lead to similar handling of all others. The signs have been an issue in only a very few towns across the country, he says.

Library's 'Dinosummer' attracts record crowds

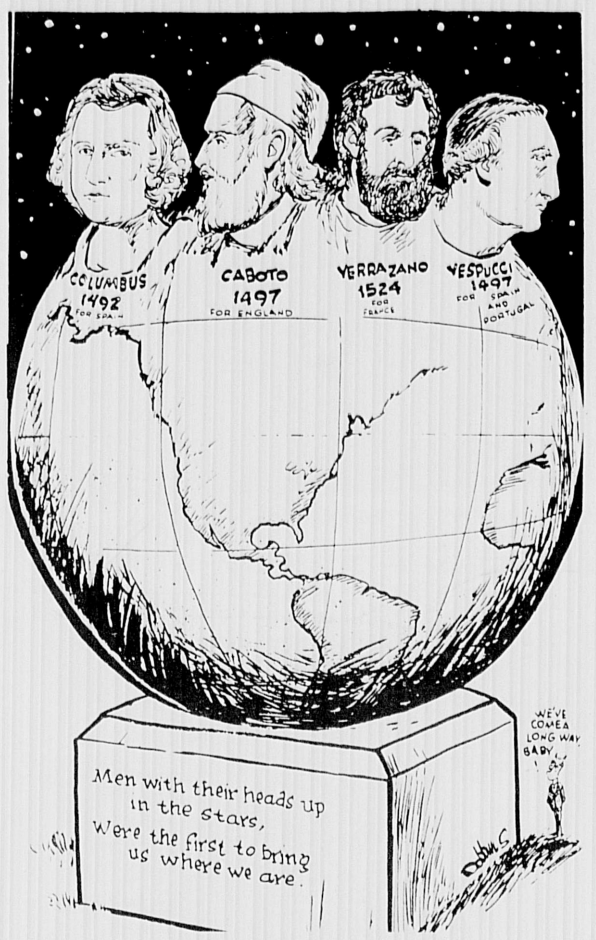

Summer is drawing to a close, and the Winchester Junior Library's summer reading program, "Dinomite Dinosummer," ends with a bang next Thursday, Aug. 21, with an awards party for all participants.

The party, which will be held at the library this year, will feature entertainment, certificates, awards for children who have read at least 10 books as participants in "Dinomite Dinosummer," and entertainment.

The program has attracted over 400 elementary school children, a record. Participants receive a button and "dinobook" of activities, riddles, and information about dinosaurs.

Those who read at least 10 books during the summer have a dinosaur with their names on it displayed on the prehistoric scene in the display case outside the junior library and receive certificates and awards at the awards party.

"Dinomite Dinosummer" officially ends Monday, Aug. 18, so any children enrolled must report the books they have read to the junior library by that date.

This stamp, designed by Dr. William D. Barone and drawn by James Dobbins of Winchester, was given to the commander of the tall ship "Amerigo Vespucci," Romano DiCecio, by Antonio Vespucci, also of Winchester, last Friday in Charlestown Navy Yard.

Vespucci family celebrates visit of namesake's ship

The Vespucci family of Winchester, the only known Vespuccis in the United States, spent last Friday morning at Charlestown Navy Yard visiting an Italian vessel, the tall ship Amerigo Vespucci.

Although America is named for him, Vespucci's contribution to early exploration of the New World has been scarcely recognized.

Eleven members of the Vespucci family, direct descendants of the explorer, presented a reproduction of a proposed commemorative stamp to Romano Di Cecio, commander of the 331-foot Italian Navy sailing vessel.

The stamp bears an illustration of four Italian explorers including Christopher Columbus, Giovanni Caboto (John Cabot), Giovanni da Verranzano and Vespucci. The illustration will appear on a U.S. Postal Service commemorative stamp.

Winchester's Antonio Vespucci, 72, a 10th generation descendant, presented the design to the captain.

Dr. William Barone of Winchester is also a direct descendent of Vespucci.

Amerigo Vespucci was mistakenly credited with the discovery of America. He never captained a discovery voyage, but he made four voyages and wrote letters describing the New World.

Columbus landed in the Bahama Islands in 1492. Vespucci discovered the mouth of the Amazon on one of his voyages during one of his voyages between 1499 and 1500.

An obscure German clergyman, Martin Waldseemuller, named the New World "America," wrongly believing that he had discovered the western hemisphere.

Barone, whose hobbies include world history and international affairs, is forming a committee to design a memorial to all the early discoverers, explorers and settlers of America. He plans special emphasis on those who traveled in what is now the United States.

He said he also met another direct descendant of Vespucci, Duca Pini of Miniata, while he served on a committee trying to save the Italian city of Venice from floods. He married a Canadian woman and lived in New York.

Antonelli Lobby honors local Tufts U. alumnus

The newly renovated main lobby of Cousens Gymnasium at Tufts University has dedicated in honor of Rocco J. Antonelli Sr., left, and in memory of his parents, Rocco H. and Rose J. Antonelli. Attending the ceremony with Antonelli are, from left, his sister Mary M. Antonelli, and his two sons, Robert B. and Rocco J. Antonelli Jr.

In a ceremony preceding the Tufts-Bates basketball game last December, the newly renovated main lobby of Cousens Gymnasium at Tufts was dedicated in honor of Rocco J. Antonelli, A44, of Winchester and Somerville, and in memory of his parents Rocco H. and Rose J. Antonelli.

A loyal alumnus with a strong enthusiasm for sports, and one of Tufts' most famous athletes, Rocco Antonelli has maintained an interest in the improvement of Tufts' athletic facilities. His gift to Tufts enabled the university to renovate and redecorate the gymnasium lobby, transforming it into a more useful and attractive space.

At the dedication ceremony, attended by Antonelli's family and friends, President Jean Mayer and a number of university administrators, director of athletics Rocco Carzo praised Antonelli's loyalty and unveiled a bronze relief plaque mounted in the lobby.

The centerpiece of the champagne reception before the game that evening was a large cake decorated with a basketball player, in recognition of Antonelli's achievements as a former member of Tufts' basketball team.

As a student, Antonelli majored in mathematics and physics, and graduated magna cum laude. He was an outstanding basketball and baseball player and was captain of both teams.

While excelling in academics and athletics he found time to participate in student activities as a member of the Math Club, the Newman Club and the Varsity Club.

In 1944 Antonelli was chosen Tufts' most outstanding scholar-athlete, receiving the Bennett Memorial Scholarship Award. In 1946 he was given a tryout with the first Boston Celtics professional basketball team.

He completed degree requirements at Tufts after World War II, continuing his studies at Harvard Business School, where he received a master's degree in business administration in 1948.

Antonelli is the founder and president of R.J. Antonelli and Company, Inc., Accountants and Auditors, of Somerville. He is a former commissioner of the Massachusetts Board of Public Accountancy; past president of the National Society of Public Accountants; and former Middlesex County treasurer.

CHECKING THE "COMPARABLES"

If you're trying to decide whether or not a particular property is a good investment, you can check what similar homes in the same neighborhood have sold for. This takes a lot of guesswork out of making the right choice.

Some sales information, such as price, financing terms, and transaction date, is public information. In most areas this is published and can be found in the public library. You can find out how properties have been appreciating based on actual sales experience rather than word of mouth from neighbors (it could be inaccurate) or the hopes of the sellers (they could be very optimistic). Once you have the addresses, you can drive by each home to get some idea of how it compares to the one you're considering. If you're working with an agent, he may have seen the comparables interiors and can give you a clear idea of how they measure up.

If you're considering a move, contact the professionals at Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Call us at 729-7000 or drop by our office at 33 Thompson St., in Winchester.

Decision day to build on the loop slated for Sept. 3

Wednesday, Sept. 3, will be a day of decision for the town's plan to build low- to moderate-income housing on a portion of the Woburn Loop south of Cross Street.

It will also be important to potential buyers of portions of the abandoned railroad right-of-way because they will learn whether structures can be built on the land.

The state Executive Office of Transportation and Construction will conduct a hearing at 10 a.m. that day "to determine if a building permit shall be issued to the Winchester Housing Authority" for construction of a single duplex (two-family) unit on the property.

A separate but related hearing, requested by town manager Chad Maurer, will consider whether any buildings may be built on the former Loop.

A spring town meeting voted to put two of the seven "affordable housing" units promised by the town on the site, once part of the railroad right-of-way.

Although the town owns the former Loop property, the state retains an interest and must hold a public hearing to discuss proposed uses of it.

Transportation secretary Frederick Salvucci customarily opposes anything except "passive uses" of former railroad right-of-ways but Winchester hopes for an exception. In its favor is the existence of the Swanton Street bridge, already a physical barrier to future rebuilding of the railroad.

So-called passive uses include parks, bike trails and parking lots.

Salvucci plans to visit the site Wednesday, Aug. 19, according to Jerry Keefe, executive director of the Winchester Housing Authority.

The Sept. 3 hearing, however, will be conducted at the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction in the State Transportation Building at 10 Park Plaza, Boston.

The Cross Street site's hearing has been scheduled at the request of the housing authority.

Claudia and Edward McCarthy of Winchester enjoy the ambience of the BMW reception at the Union Warren Bank U.S. Pro Tennis Championships at the Longwood Cricket Club.

Casey wins endorsement

Paul Casey, Democratic candidate for State Representative in the 34th Middlesex District, recently received endorsement from the Winchester Democratic Town Committee.

At its last meeting, the committee voted to fully support Casey in his quest for a seat in the state legislature in November.

In a letter to Casey from William H. Wells, town committee chairman, the committee pledged to participate and "assist in any way which will be helpful" in the campaign. The committeee called Casey "an outstanding candidate who can serve the town and the state with distinction."

Casey said he is "pleased and excited" to have received the endorsement and that "it shows strength in the party's unity within the town."

Casey also said he hoped other Democrats within the district would follow the example set by the town committee "and support him against the incumbent Republican, Rep. Sherman 'Whip' Saltmarsh."

Casey, the first Democrat to run for the seat in twelve years and the incumbent's first opponent since he took office in 1974, said he is "grateful to the town committee for its endorsement" and that he looks forward to working with them as he seeks to be the first Democrat to represent the 34th Middlesex District.

Powers-Horne win crown

Steve Powers and guest Robert Horne Jr. won the 1986 Winchester Swim and Tennis Club's member-guest men's double tournament last weekend.

The fourth annual tourney proved by far the most competitive with 18 teams in the main draw and the consolation round.

Seven tie-breakers were played with six matches lasting a full three sets featured among several marathon struggles in the two-day event.

Powers and Horne took the title with a 2-6, 6-2, 7-6 (7-5) victory over Alex Popp and Bill Wolfe, who also lost the championship matches in 1985 and 1984.

The eventual champions defeated Jack Corf and Vandy French 6-2, 6-3 in the semifinals while Popp and Wolfe and outlasted Steve Brosnan and Chris Scanlon 4-6, 7-6, 7-6 in a 2½-hour endurance test.

In the consolation finals, Paul Murray and "legendary" Ralph Bates, one of few men to play tennis wearing a safari hat, defeated Terry Fuller and John Peterman 6-2, 6-7, 6-3.

The tournament featured a steak cook-out coordinated by assistant manager Michael Minutoli on Saturday night. Whit Gray, the dean of Winchester tennis, was a guest of honor.

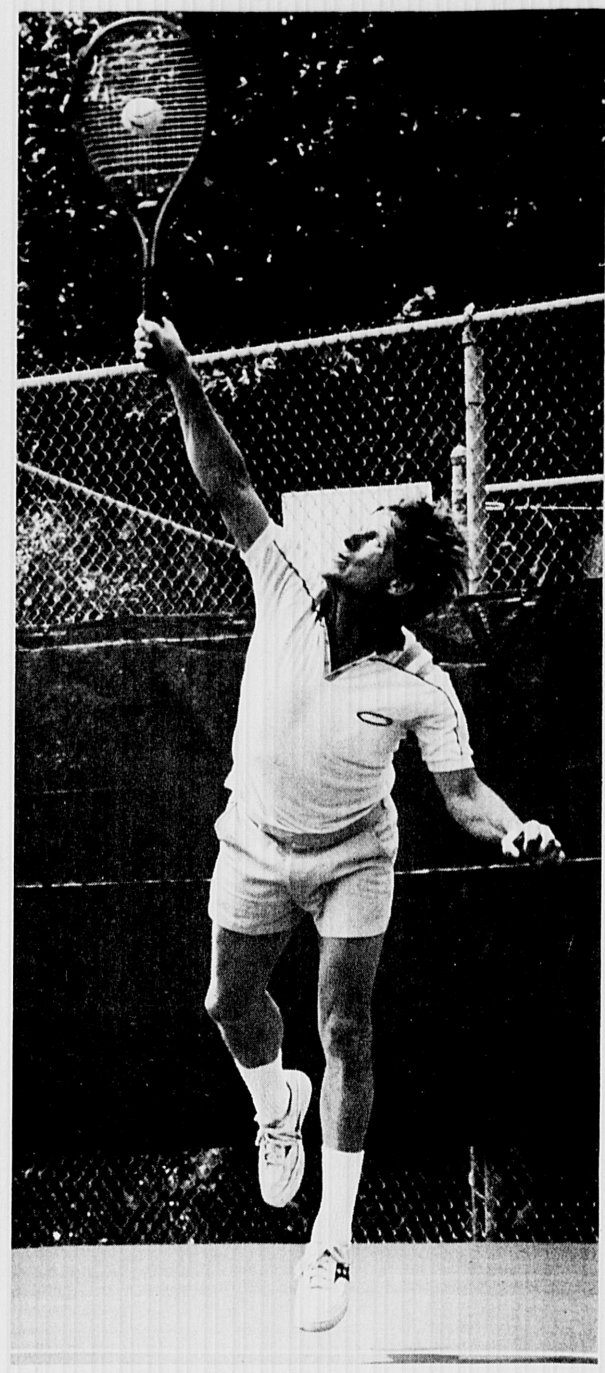

Joe Palumbo, tennis aide at the club, directed the tournament and umpired both final matches. Helping coordinate the event were Brosnan, Corf, Paul Bernazzani and Popp.

Weight control class offered

New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham offers a 10-week weight control workshop which helps participants lose weight and maintain their desired weight. This diet and nutrition program, taught by a registered dietitian, begins Wednesday, Sept. 3.

The workshop features diet plans, discussions, lectures, films, group activities and assignments designed to help participants change their behavior and adopt permanent new habits. By combining this program with one of NEMH's exercise programs, success is well within reach.

More information is available from the NEMH health education department at 665-1740, ext. 426.

Ciulla, Kelly win junior tourney

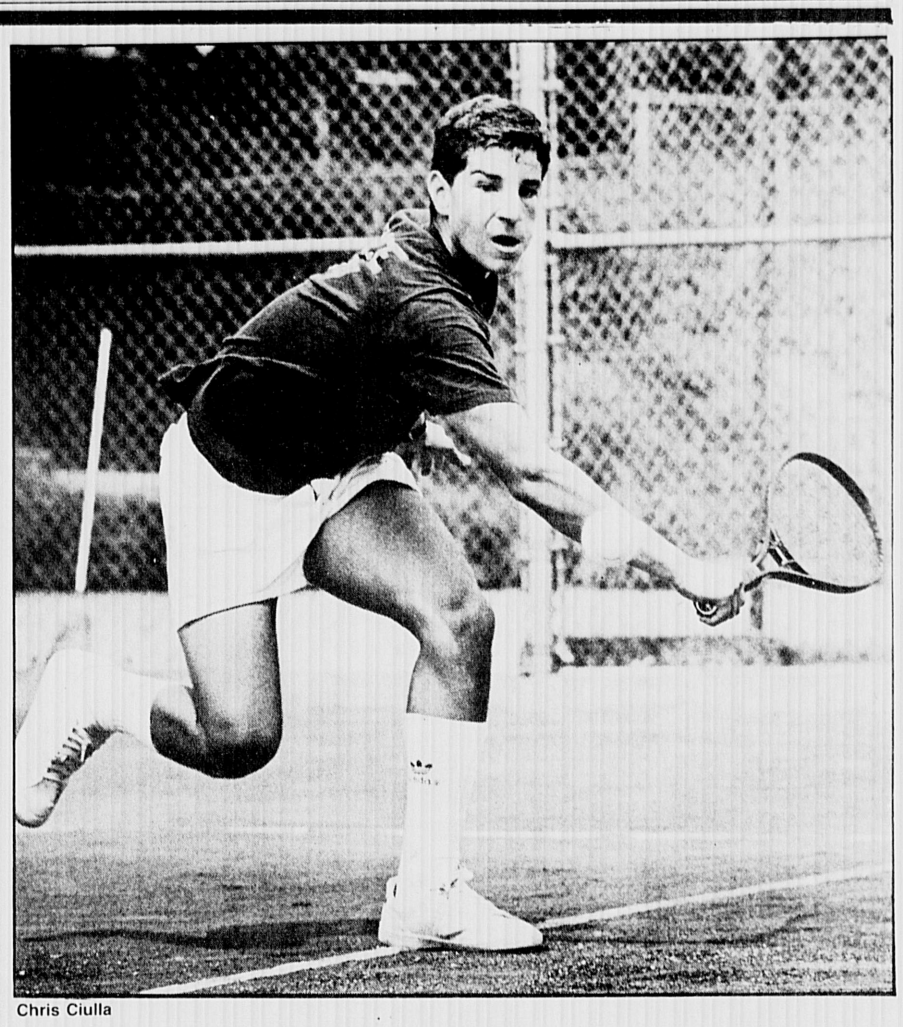

Chris Ciulla and Liz Kelley were winners in the 1986 NELTA/USTA junior tennis tournament Aug. 4-6 in Winchester.

Ciulla defeated Michael Bosco 6-3, 6-3 in Wednesday's finals after beating Mark Fantasia 4-6, 6-1, 6-2 in the semifinals.

500-bike ride through Iowa cornfields

By DAVID MOORE

How does it feel to pedal 500 miles through Iowa with nothing but cornfields beside you? Four Winchester men know.

To start, the days are long. Imagine starting at 6 a.m. on a hot, windy Wednesday in July, leaning your body and bike against 18-mph headwinds. The dry still isn't moving much but the wind makes the work harder.

About 10 hours later, furious pedaling is rewarded by an arrival in downtown Eldora, Iowa. Where?

Perhaps less than overjoyed with their destination, the four Winchester men began looking all over Eldora for their traveling companions.

They — or you or some other adventurous soul — could have planned to hook up again at the main campground in Eldora or at some other local landmark. But the task is complicated by nearly 20,000 bicycle wheels and half as many riders.

But if you are Winchester's Larry DeGeorge, Gary Wiedwald, Mike Hewitt or Dick Pallan, you'd check the Eldora bulletin board for message addressed to "Team Tardy."

"A lot of people riding in groups gave themselves names," explains the tall, husky Pallan. "When you arrived in the town you'd be camping at, you'd just look for a message from one of the group. The cousin of a guy we know in Winchester was riding in a group called Team Tardy. We hooked up with them."

The foursome participated in the 14th annual Register's Annual Great Bicycle Ride Across Iowa, or RAGBRAI as it has become known. Begun in 1973 by two reporters from the Des Moines Register, RAGBRAI is a 500-mile bicycle ride across Iowa with stops at seven towns.

This year's ride began July 20 in Council Bluffs and ended July 26 in Muscatine. However, it might be more appropriate to say the ride began when the bikers dipped their rear wheels in the Missouri River and ended when they dipped their front tires in the Mississippi River.

RAGBRAI is really a kind of folk festival on wheels, drawing swarms of participants from around the country and even other parts of the world. This year RAGBRAI attracted people of every age and level of biking expertise.

Because RAGBRAI is not a race, but a ride, people came for their reasons and rode at their own pace.

Pallan says the pace varied from the "fanatics who were on the road well before dawn, to those in the back who considered it a mortal sin not to stop at every pub along the way."

Hewitt says the Winchester group generally left around 5:15 a.m., staying toward the front of the pack "to escape the crowds and afternoon heat."

Their idea for the trip originated in 1982 when an article on RAGBRAI appeared in The Wall Street Journal. Hewitt read the article and was interested, though three years elapsed before he could convince himself to do it.

He applied to RAGBRAI this March, but had to wait until June to learn he'd have a place when the ride got underway from Council Bluffs.

The men say they joined the bike trip for mostly the same reason: to be a part o, a huge, exciting event that is basically good for you.

"I thought it would be great to be with so many people doing basically one thing," says Hewitt.

For Pallan, it was a cultural expedition to a part of the country he'd only read about.

"I've been a city person all my life," Pallan explains, "so it sounded like a unique experience. I wanted to learn bicycling, but I also wanted to meet farmers, which I did."

Wiedwald liked the trip well enough to consider doing it next year. "If I did it next year I think I'd like to have my kids along," he says. "The younger people seemed to like it a lot."

For the most part, Wiedwald, Hewitt and Pallan trained only moderately for the trip. They met each Sunday morning for a 40- to 50-mile workout, but were otherwise recreational bikers.

DeGeorge is the exception. He has run in numerous marathons, including Boston and New York, and has also ridden in European bike tours.

The biking was often strenuous, around 64 often hilly miles each day. "Iowa is not flat!" attests Pallan.

Once evening arrived, however, there was plenty of diversion to ease the aches and pains.

In fact, the whole state of Iowa seemed to open its arms to the bikers, offering food, shelter, showers and much homegrown entertainment.

In Washington, there was a basketball game between the "RAGBRAI All-Stars" and a local high school team. In Perry, thousands of bikers attended the wedding of Steve Hanel and Julie Snodgrass, who were making the trip on a tandem bicycle.

At the wedding's conclusion, the bikers burst out singing, "Bicycle Built for Two."

Because the RAGBRAI route missed tiny Fiscus, population 11, Fiscus came to RAGBRAI. The community built a replica of Fiscus, complete with its miniature water tower, in the back of a pick-up truck and parked it on the main route.

Each town showered the bikers with pies, cinnamon rolls, sausage, lemonade and other homemade fare. At night there were beer gardens that made mornings difficult for some bikers.

Still, what the Winchester bikers remember best are pleasant surprises and unexpected comforts they found along the way.

For Pallan, who loves hot showers, it was the pleasure of a cold shower one chilly morning. For Hewitt, it was pizza after the trip's 100-mile leg. For Wiedwald, it was the discovery of a small cafe just as all hope of nourishment was gone.

"We left early without eating any breakfast that day," recalls Wiedwald, "and after several hours we were really ready to stop, but there was nothing for miles. Then all of sudden we see this little sign that says 'Cafe.'

"Well, the place looked like it could be on Beacon Hill. They served us these huge cinnamon rolls," he continues, savoring the memory of every precious bite.

COMMENT

A popular bad idea

What's popular isn't always sensible.

According to a recent poll, 59 percent of Americans think we ought to elect the chief justice of the Supreme Court.

No doubt many fear U.S. Senate confirmation of Harold Rehnquist, the Supreme Court justice who buys property with deeds forbidding ownership by Jews and blacks.

Rehnquist is certainly unfit for the post held by John Marshall, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Earl Warren. But the court must not be turned into a political circus.

Elections would transform the court into a totally political body. Twenty years ago, candidates would have debated whether it was constitutional for the president to conduct the Vietnam War.

Today, candidates would debate abortion, aid to private schools, the Gramm-Rudman deficit ceilings and other issues. It's hard to believe this could improve the quality of the court.

Proponents of elections are dreaming. Only a bare majority of eligible voters even bother to vote in elections for president, the most powerful position in the world.

A smaller number would vote for supreme court candidates, leaving open the door for "true believers" in various causes to skew the court and consitutional interpretation in their favor.

The present system, with justices nominated by the president and confirmed by the senate, can work well. In the case of Rehnquist, the senate must demonstrate that it is still an equal partner in the process — and say "no."

Winchester Kernels

Now this is the most appropriate item ever to appear in The Kernels.

An editorial last week compared the dog hearing conducted by selectmen Aug. 4 to an old-time melodrama, with heroes, villains and audience participation.

"All that was missing was popcorn to toss at the mustachioed villain," we wrote.

You guessed it. We got one free bag of popcorn and offers of several more. Now we just have to decide who the target ought to be.

Nelson's Bakery, long a popular spot for a group of "regulars," appears often in discussion at meeting of town selectmen.

It served as Frank Sopper's unofficial campaign headquarters this spring, when it was surrounded by cars with his bumper stickers.

The bakery has been called "the surrogate town hall" on more than one occasion.

But it didn't fare quite as well Monday night when selectmen discussed filming of two portions of the TV show "Spenser For Hire." One scene will be shot at the C & G Restaurant.

"Are they going to shoot at Nelson's?" Sopper asked.

"It's not a gangster movie, Frank" Wade Welch answered.

Dorothy Moore, a Woburn resident, has been named "Volunteer of the Month" at Aberjona Nursing Home, where volunteers are a big part of the care.

Phyllis DiCico, a Winchester resident, has also been serving as a "pen pal" to Aberjona resident Irene Rice while Aberjona residents, especially Frances Martin, also passed along special get-well wishes this week to volunteer Helen McGann.

The wires at the corner of Johnson Road and Ridge Street aren't the prettiest site in town, a correspondent writes this week.

New kitty is mixed blessing

By TERRY MAROTTA

When we brought our first kitty home for the kids last winter, we thought we knew what we were getting: upholstered grace, dignity on tiny feet, poise in a pelt of electric black velvet.

We didn't know we were also getting the dark urges of a killer.

For this composed and clean puff of domestic decor is nothing less than that: an avenger, a lier-in-wait, a fleet and silent agent of death in the afternoon, who can snatch a small creature out of the skittering business of its appointed rounds and dispatch it, quick as a wink, to the Realms of Glory.

I look at this little cat and see a small rough tongue the color of raspberry sherbet; a neat triangle of jaw laid out in fine Euclidian balance; the precise and careful gait that carries her along a row of geraniums on the windowsill without once mussing a hair on their frowsy old heads.

The birds and the mice in the neighborhood see her a little differently.

They only met her a few months ago. She was new, then, to the booming world of nature.

When we let her out that April day, she was astonished. Her pointy bat-ears went flat against her head. She crept about, tummy pressed against the raw grass, ready for anything.

"Gadzooks!" the expression on her face said. "Yikes!" "What next?!" She slunk around the cherry tree in a parody of caution, her slim boneless body drawing prim parentheses against its bark.

Today the outdoors is old hat to her. Today she explores it in purposeful search of mayhem; she deals in death on a daily basis.

She lies in wait, this bundle of cunning, concealing herself in the low ground-cover just beneath the bird feeder.

Before long, the birds come along, scolding and carrying on, fighting over who'll get the perch closest to the eats. You hear them muttering; you see Kitty's glowing green eyes; then suddenly she leaps — seven feet straight up in the air — and comes down with her own favorite dish from the day's menu: a chickadee usually, or sometimes a wren.

The rest is macabre. She plays with her prey, letting it try a dozen lopsided escapes with its wounds, before pouncing on it afresh.

One weekend she killed four birds in 24 hours. One she hid behind the shrubs and plucked clean of feathers. Another she hid behind the garage and worked over.

By the time we caught up with her, she was pawing it with that cushioned fist into an upright position and batting it back over. Up and back over. She allowed it one more attempt at flight; then she flipped it again, flourished a single gleaming claw the way you'd picture an evil surgeon flourishing his scalpel, and sliced open its belly.

The children were horrified. They begged, they cried, they pulled on the very root of her tail to get her to stop. All to no avail.

I gathered them indoors until the grisly business was accomplished. The seven-year-old threw herself across her bed and wept bitter tears of disillusionment. Her older sister wondered aloud if she could love that cat again. Their toddling baby brother said, "Birdie nap! Birdie GOOD nap!"

I thought of Walt Disney and all he'd done for us in the way of skewing our perceptions of the natural world.

Maybe Mickey wears gloves. Maybe Bambi is a pacifist. They seem to be the exceptions to a larger rule. In the main, it's as the poet told us: "Nature is red in tooth and claw."

Our cat came in some 20 minutes after her hot lunch, purring and licking her paws.

She regarded us levelly. "Look folks," her cool jade glance seemed to say: "Cats like Heathcliff and Garfield are fictional. We're animals. Grant us our natures, strange as they are to you; we'll do our best to return the favor."

Winchester the Beautiful?

TO THE EDITOR:

Want an idea for a new photo identification contest with an ulterior motive?

"Winchester the Beautiful?

The attached photographs may help to start you off until your photographer starts his collection. The site is the corner of Ridge Street and Johnson Road.

The motive? Isn't it time for Winchester to have a bylaw requiring high voltage power cables and telephone trunk lines underground? Would a 10-year phase-in project get rid of our ugly spots?

Sincerely,
Richard J. Merrow

Cloud on Mt. Vernon St.

TO THE EDITOR:

Reading the July 24 issue of The Winchester Star, I was dismayed to read George Derringer's article regarding the recent appointments to our town's finance committee.

The selection of Anna Frattaroli to this committee appeared dubious, considering her recent registration as a Winchester voter on July 8 of this year and her ostensible connection to the committee to re-elect Representative Saltmarsh.

Since the previous week's meeting had not been posted, as required by law, I was pleased to learn that another meeting addressing this issue was being held on the following Monday night.

I presumed this would give the officials responsible for the Frattaroli appointment a chance to reassess their decision which encountered a great deal of skepticism from all sides, including our town selectmen. Selectman Mark Lomabrdi was quoted appraising the Frattaroli appointment as "real cozy, too cozy."

Obviously, as we know by now, Ms. Frattaroli was reappointed, neglecting what I believe was an excellent opportunity to rectify a poor initial decision.

Surely there are other capable candidates who have been registered Winchester voters for more than a few weeks and who, furthermore, have less questionable connections to our elected officials.

Perhaps in future months Ms. Frattaroli will emerge as a diligent and capable financier. But, as the situation rests today her selection is tarnished by apparent cronyism. A dark cloud lingers over Mount Vernon Street.

Sincerely,
Peter R. Ruggles

Samantha Smith one year later

TO THE EDITOR:

The Beechcraft 99 plane, Bar Harbor flight 1808, crashed suddenly as it was approaching the Auburn-Lewiston Municipal Airport for a landing.

All eight people aboard, including Samantha Smith and father Arthur, were killed. The flight originated in Boston and was bound for Bangor with stops in Augusta and Waterville that fatal night of Aug. 25, 1985.

The news traveled swiftly to residents and reporters across the state of Maine; The headlines and details of Samantha's death and the memorial that followed touched the hearts of many.

It was about midnight when Dave Medzorian, currently afternoon drive anchor at WLAM Radio in Auburn, was called and arrived at the scene.

Dave, originally from Winchester, has been employed by WLAM radio for 20 months, obtaining experience reporting and anchoring such stories as the state's ailing shoe industry, hurricane Gloria and the ever-so-tragic death of Samantha Smith, the young ambassador from Maine whose plea for peace in the world took her to the Soviet Union in July 1983.

Althouth the night of Aug. 25 was almost a year ago, it was a night few of us in Maine will ever forget. Dave and his co-workers covered the story almost from the moment the plane crashed, working around the clock, interviewing, recording, and producing live broadcasts. In addition, WLAM carried live news conferences related to the tragedy while reporters gathered material sought by over 100 radio and television stations all over the world.

Dave's voice was heard on radio stations from Holland to Russia.

Dave was heard the following morning on ABC's "Good Morning America" and several Boston area radio stations. Having followed the events from the onset, Dave and the news team managed to gather more facts and more up to date information than any other radio station in Maine. Dave had the opportunity to interview the young Samantha in Bangor just one year prior.

Dave also covered Samantha's memorial service and the events surrounding the subsequent statue erected in her honor. Her sad and tragic death created probably the biggest story ever to come out of Auburn.

I was touched by the tragedy like Mainers everywhere, and I was just as proud of my husband's dedication to the story. I wanted you to know.

Nina Medzorian

League thanks all supporters

TO THE EDITOR:

The League of Women Voters of Winchester thanks all the individuals and businesses who contributed to our annual finance drive.

Many people who are not members realize that our civic involvement continues to be our single focus.

As an organization we offer our community many valuable services not provided by other groups.

For example, in the past year, the League's activities included a "how-to" candidates' workshop on cable television, a new edition of "Inside Winchester," the "Local Aid Forum" with other Leagues to discuss tax issues, studies such as the Woburn Loop, the Middlesex Fells, our aging sewer system, research on the town warrant articles distributed by cable TV and newspapers, "Meet the Candidates" meeting before town elections and candidates' profiles in the newspapers.

To everyone who contributed — thank you! Your contribution has been greatly appreciated and we look forward to continue serving our town.

Sincerely,
Gail B. O'Reilly

Facts on salt intake

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services gives good advice in the Food and Drug Administration bulletin B4-2179 concerning salt in the diet.

Research shows that reducing sodium intake helps control high blood pressure. A person with high blood pressure, kidney problems or congestive heart failure, should limit sodium intake.

People complain that food tastes bland without salt. Although this is a temporary complaint, alternatives are available to enhance the taste of food such as spices and herbs. But, avoid all seasoned salts such as garlic salt and onion salt. Read the labels on commercially prepared mixtures of spices. Many contain a large proportion of salt. Use lemon, lime, basil, garlic, oregano, dill and pepper to season food.

The National Heart, Lung and Blood Institutes recommend no more than 2 to 3.3 grams of sodium per day. The average American consumes between 2.4 and 7.2 grams of salt daily. That is 2400 to 7200 milligrams. A milligram is a tiny fraction of an ounce, but the important thing to remember is that 1100 to 3300 milligrams of sodium per day is usually all a person needs.

A teaspoon of salt contains nearly 2000 milligrams of sodium. Monosodium glutamate, baking soda, brine and sodium-citrate are sodium containing items.

Some foods low in sodium are fresh fruits and vegetables, fresh meats and poultry, hot cereals and grains. Food that are higher in sodium include baked goods, most cheese, luncheon meats, seafoods, many dry cereals, and some canned or dehydrated soups.

Excessive salt in the diet has been linked to hypertension or high blood pressure, which in turn can result in heart disease, kidney disease, or stroke.

Home Care needs volunteers

Volunteers are in great demand at Minuteman Home Care Corporation (MHCC) and there are a variety of tasks inside the agency and outside, both in clients' homes and in the community. At Minuteman, volunteers are needed for office tasks.

A phone call to MHCC will put them in touch with Claire Griffiths, volunteer coordinator, who would schedule an appointment or provide the date of the next volunteer training workshop in Lexington. Please call either 862-6200 or 263-8720.

Class planned for new bloodmobile volunteers

Trained volunteers are a vital component for a successful bloodmobile. The Eastern Middlesex Region of the American Red Cross will offer a free, informational program for anyone who would like to become a volunteer at a community blood drive, or who would like to know more about the collection process.

The program will also include the latest information for veteran bloodmobile workers. Participants will receive a handbook and certificate upon completion of the 2½-hour course.

One session will be held at the Winchester Chapter House at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 10.

Reservations are necessary to insure adequate materials. Please call the regional office in Melrose at 665-1351 for reservations and additional dates and locations.

OBITUARIES

Lillian Dougherty

Lillian C. (Lundgren) Dougherty, 71, formerly of Winchester, died Aug. 11 at Howard County General Hospital after a lung illness.

Born in Lowell, Mrs. Dougherty was a Winchester resident for 35 years.

She was the wife of the late James J. Dougherty.

Mrs. Dougherty worked for Winchester Nursing Home.

Among her survivors are: her daughter Kathryn L. Bestany of Columbia, Md.; her son, Stephen D. Dougherty of Medford; two grandchildren, Richard and Cynthia Bestany of Columbia, Md.; and her sister, Violet Gray of Augusta, Maine.

Funeral services were Aug. 13 at the Lane Funeral Home. Burial was at Wildwood Cemetery.

Meredith Hudson

Meredith Nancy Hudson, 15, of 18 Oneida Road, Winchester, died Aug. 10 of complications following major surgery.

Among her survivors are: her mother, Nancy S. Hudson; her two sisters, Delaine Hudson of Winchester and Dawn Hudson Beach of Chicago; and her grandmothers, Dorothy Arvidson of Forestdale, and Mabel Hudson of Snow Hill, Md. She was the daughter of the late Kenneth D. Hudson.

Born in Cambridge, Meredith was a 15-year Winchester resident. She was to be a sophomore this fall at Winchester High School.

Her favorite activity was writing (books, poems and humorous phrases) and she planned to develop this into a career. Meredith was very much a normal teenager. She loved talking on the telephone, rock music, especially Duran Duran, sailing and tarveling.

While it is hard to capture her personality on paper, people will remember Meredith's active imagination, her insight, strong-willed nature, great loyalty to friends and family and occasional craziness. She will be missed, remembered and treasured by many.

Funeral services were Aug. 13 at Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church. The Rev. David A. Purdy officiated. Arrangements were by Robert J. Costello Funeral Home. Burial was in Wildwood Cemetery.

Memorial donations may be made to Division 85, Children's Hospital, 300 Longwood Ave., Boston or to Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church, 34 Dix St., Winchester.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL
Volume 12-Report No. 32
Massachusetts House and Senate
August 8, 1986

The House and Senate. The House and Senate continue to meet informally during the summer recess.

This week, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" updates legislative action on 6 bills which were approved by the House and Senate and signed into law by Governor Dukakis. All these bills came to a roll call vote in one branch only and were okayed in the other branch without a roll call vote.

Governors' Council(H 5365)- Approved by House 98-45 was a bill increasing the salary of the members of the Governor's Council from $4000 to $10,400. The Governor signed the bill on April 17.

Supporters claimed the council still serves a useful purpose and noted members have not received a salary hike since 1963.

Opponents said the hike is outrageous and argued the council was an outdated and useless body.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Divorce(S 878)- Approved by House 103-39 and signed by the Governor on July 8 was a bill reducing from one year to six months the waiting period before a no-fault divorce case, in which there is no agreement, goes to court.

Supporters, noting the one year wait discourages people, said the reduction makes the system more reasonable.

Opponents claimed the bill will force unprepared spouses to rush into court and argued it will adversely affect middle-aged women who have been married a long period of time.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Supplemental Budget(H 6031)- Approved by House 131-13 and signed by the Governor on June 26 was a $270.9 million fiscal 1986 supplemental budget.

Supporters said approval was necessary to pay some state workers and noted many controversial items are being held and may be included in a future budget.

Opponents said the package was being rushed through the legislature and questioned the process of holding some items.

A Yea vote is for the budget. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Wetlands(S 1179)- Approved by House 145-1 and signed on July 16 was the bill which would include wildlife habitat under the wetlands protection act. The measure adds wildlife habitat protection to the list of values a local conservation commission must consider when determining what conditions it may impose upon a developer building in a wetland area.

Supporters said the bill will protect wildlife and ensure that wildlife habitat protection is considered when building projects are reviewed.

Some opponents said the bill is vague. Others said it may bring construction to a halt.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Racing(H 5862)- Approved by House 84-43 and signed on July 16 was the bill making several changes in the state's greyhound racing industry. Provisions include a flat 7 percent share of the takeout for the state; 60 extra racing days for Raynham and 150 for Wonderland; and creation of a capital improvement and promotional trust fund.

Supporters, noting the bill equalizes taxation of the two tracks, said the bill will also help the tracks compete with out of state operations.

Some opponents said the bill was unfair to Raynham while others said it is simply special interest legislation for the already profitable racing industry.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

AIDS(H 5491)- Approved by Senate 21-13 and signed on July 15 was the bill prohibiting any employer from requiring an AIDS test as a condition of employment and prohibiting any health care facility or doctor from testing for AIDS or releasing a person's name or test results without first obtaining written consent.

Supporters, noting this is a personal freedom issue, said the tests are not accurate.

Opponents said the bill may endanger innocent people and said tests will protect the public.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Senator Richard Kraus voted yes.

Bloodmobiles to visit Aug. 26-27

Bloodmobiles sponsored by the Eastern Middlesex Region of the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay will visit two consecutive days in August.

They will be at Winchester Hospital from 1 to 6 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 26, and from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 27.

Parent-to-Parent to add topics for K-6 parents

Parent-to-Parent of Winchester will expand its program during the upcoming school year.

For the past five years, Winchester educators, clergy and parents of junior and senior high school students have talked together to learn ways to improve family communications. This fall, the program will be expanded to include parents of elementary school children.

"Self-esteem" will be the theme of the year's program.

Robert Brooks will open the program at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 24, when he speaks on the topic "Reinforcing Your Adolescent's Self-esteem or Who Said a Roller Coaster Ride Can Be Fun?" at Winchester High School. The program is for parents of high school students.

"Self Concept: Essential Ingredient to Effective Parenting and Schooling" will be the topic of James Garvin for parents of junior high children at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 1, at McCall Junior High School.

Elementary school parents will hear Susan Swap speak on the topic "Enhancing Children's Self-esteem: Ideas for Parents" at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 5, at Lincoln School.

There will be opportunities to register for small discussion groups and workshops during each of the large group presentations.

Supported by a grant from the EnKa Society, all programs are free and open to all parents.

'Spenser For Hire' finds a two-day job in Winchester

shot Thursday evening behind the police station and in front of Kasarjian's on Mount Vernon Street.

Friday, a boxing match will be staged in the town hall auditorium.

Alexander assured selectmen the company carries a $10 million insurance policy. "Anything that has to be taken down will be replaced. There will be no cost to the town," she said.

Trucks and equipment for a crew of 80 people will be brought to town and parked behind the town hall until filming here is complete. The company will pay for police details and janitorial services.

Town manager Chad Maurer said he told company officials work on town hall renovations would not be interrupted for the filming and no street would be fully closed.

Rent for the town hall auditorium, however, will be 10 times higher than usual. The standard fee is $100 plus $25 per day.

Rent for the town hall auditorium will be 10 times higher than usual.

Selectmen voted 3-2 Monday to charge Warner Brothers $1,000 per day.

Selectman Mark Lombardi led efforts to make Warner pay more.

"Just because somebody's a movie star, we tell them to go ahead and take the town," Lombardi said. "But if we said no, they wouldn't miss an episode."

Lombardi said local people often object to residents of other towns parking here while working in Boston but apparently welcome TV stars to do the same while "making big money."

"They're not even going to call it Winchester. They'll call it Hicksville, N.H.," he said. "But the town will be closed for two days when the town doesn't even get anything out of it."

Lombardi said the town doesn't have enough money for sidewalks but predicted DPW crews will "be down there watching" the TV crews and "will pick up every one of the barrels on the street."

The selectman also objected to learning about the TV crew's plans from a waitress at C & G. "The selectmen are supposed to lead the town, not the chamber of commerce," Lombardi said.

"We're idol worshippers," Lombardi concluded.

Selectman Bob Deering said he "heard" Lombardi's point but thought the filming "would be good for the community, to enjoy the excitement."

Frank Sopper joined Lombardi in an effort to raise auditorium rent. They said the crew's use of town parking lots should also be figured into the rent.

Deering objected. "It shows a lack of character. Just because they can pay more, we jack up the price," he said.

Lombardi said the higher rent actually shows "we have more character. It shows more class to charge more."

Alexander rejoined the discussion. "You've read how much excitement Warner Brothers has created in Cohasset, where they're filming a movie. They changed the signs but many people will know it's Cohasset. And many will know it's Winchester in this TV show."

Alexander said the filming would "promote Winchester" and "create fun and excitement" for the town. "It really will be a show and many people will be excited."

"Collecting a user fee excites me," Sopper said.

Lombardi, Sopper and chairman Wade Welch voted to charge $1,000 per day for use of the town hall. Judie Muggia and Deering voted against.

Before a unanimous vote to approve the filming, Lombardi related an earlier shooting at the Registry in Boston. "They closed two floors below the computer room and roped off the employees and the citizens. Even the people who worked in the registry couldn't get near the stars," he said.

Assessors ask higher business tax personal property tax for 25 years."

Of the personal property valuations of $21 million, about $6 million is at businesses and $15 million is owned by utility companies.

Near the end of discussion Monday night, former selectman Mike Saraco asked what was going on.

"Where's the chamber of commerce? They're always well-represented at tax classification hearings. Or did they get advance notice that you weren't going to vote tonight?" he said.

Saraco said the hearing should have been better advertised. The only advertisement for Monday's hearing was in the Woburn Times and did not run on Winchester pages there, he said.

"It wasn't in The Winchester Star at all," Saraco said. "Put a legal advertisement in the Star where people can read it."

Welch said he assumed the chamber of commerce will be represented Aug. 25, when the hearing will be continued.

"I hope we get proper notice," Saraco said. "A lot of seniors would like to attend. The time has come for residential property owners to be heard."

Welch said the hearing would be re-advertised in The Star and the Woburn Times. It will be continued at 8 p.m. Monday, Aug. 25, during the next meeting of selectmen.

Senior group sets sight on legislators

Selectmen urged to consider more affordable housing sites currently about $82,000 per unit.

After 11 p.m., Welch asked the question most people avoided.

"Are there alternate sites?" he said.

Deering, a member of the citizens advisory committee to the housing authority, said housing authority and committee members agreed they will not support any alternate sites.

"Except for me, everybody took that position," Deering said.

Deering said the town should have a back-up plan. "If the EOCD throws out one site, do you then put four units at Palmer Street and two on Lockeland Road?" he asked. Spring town meeting approved three units at Palmer Street.

"We could have another crisis without a back-up plan," Deering said.

"We could have another crisis without having a back-up plan," Deering said.

Town meeting votes this spring approved three units on Palmer Street, two on former Woburn Loop railroad property south of Cross Street, one on former Mullin Park land on Lockeland Road and one on former Ambrose School land on Cambridge Street.

Palmer Street is on the agenda for the zoning board of appeals in September. The Loop awaits a Sept. 3 hearing on whether any structure can be built on the old right-of-way.

The Mullin Park site needs approval of a bill introduced in the state legislature by Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh. Only the Ambrose School site, perhaps plagued by the worse soil conditions of the four, is relatively free of legal entanglements.

Growing quantity of trash adds to higher town costs to buy the trailers but it would be "least expensive over a long term," Serratore said.

A third plan would have the town lease or purchase five new trailers over five years. The only difference between the third plan and the second would be about $40,240 in additional interest under the latter plan.

A decision is needed soon because the current hauling contract will expire Oct. 31, before the next town meeting, Maurer said Monday that a special town meeting may be need to authorize funding before a new contract is signed.

In other business, selectmen:

• Seemed generally unconvinced they should take over ownership of Ginn Field, currently owned by the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC).

Sopper said he suspected the MDC wanted to take over a small part of Bacon Street to complete a loop around the Middlesex Fells Reservation and "open the Fells to recreation."

The question could appear on the fall town meeting warrant.

• Re-appointed Roger Berman to the town's Fair Housing Committee. Berman said another vacancy on the board exists and invited anyone, but especially those with some technical background related to housing, to apply.

• Congratulated Arthur Gallagher on his appointment as permanent building commissioner and zoning enforcement officer. He was appointed by the town manager.

A graduate of Wentworth Institute, Gallagher was an engineering assistant for the town from 1974 tro 1977 and has been the town's building inspector since 1979.

• Briefly discussed the possibility of not trading in a 1983 police cruiser but instead using it to increase security around the town reservoirs, located within the Middlesex Fells Reservation.

An article to provide funding for improved security around the reservoirs, including fencing, policing, maintenance and a direct connection between Spot Pond and the North Reservoir is also being considered for the fall town meeting.

• Learned that more money will be needed from town meeting for improvements to the Lincoln School playground.

The school department will pay $10,000 toward the estimated $15,000 cost. A 10-foot chain link fence once mentioned as an improvement will not be necessary if the field is regraded and a retaining wall built, town manager Maurer said.

Carroll back to Colgate football team

Former Sachem football standout Brian Carroll will compete for a backup position at wide receiver when Colgate University's pre-season football camp commences Aug. 23 in Hamilton, N.Y.

A sophomore at Colgate, Carroll returned 19 punts for 123 yards and one touchdown last season as a freshman on the varsity team. His touchdown came on a 42-yard return against Princeton University. He will continue as punt returner for the Red Raiders this season.

As a Sachem, Carroll earned three varsity letters at halfback and defensive back. He was captain his senior year and earned All-Middlesex League honors and played in the Shriner's Classic game as well.

This fall, Colgate moves into the newly formed Colonial League, including Bucknell, Holy Cross, Lafayette and Lehigh. Colgate opens its season Sept. 6 at William and Mary.

What To Visit

Shakers' history lives on in village

The visitor comes suddenly upon the village, which is nestled among stretches of field and wood to the south and beneath the Berkshires to the North.

Twenty buildings, some of brick, most of wood, cluster along both sides of Route 20. Dominating the village are a great round stone barn and a large brick structure that looks like an old school house, but which was, in fact, once the eating, sleeping and religious quarters for over 100 "Believers."

Hancock Shaker Village in Western Massachusetts is a restored 19th century village. It depicts farm life, customs and crafts of the Shakers, America's oldest communal religious sect.

Though the last Hancock Shakers left over 25 years ago, the village has been open to the public since 1960.

It prides itself on being a working museum, although the village is more an intact old-time community than a museum.

Village curators, including cultural and religious historians, craftspeople and farmers, have carefully preserved both general and specific elements of daily Shaker life.

Shaker recipes from old manuscripts and journals are still prepared, Shaker herbs and spices still grown, manufactured and sold. Shaker tools are still fashioned in workrooms.

In a small pasture behind the barn, visitors are greeted by a great chorus of "baaaaa..." from some 50 sheep that will be sheared, their wool spun to yarn.

Excerpts from Shaker wisdom and law posted throughout the village tell of a gentle, but strict way of life.

"No talking, laughing or playing is allowed of when going to, coming from, or at the table," admonishes one sign.

"They needed order not only because they lived communally," says curator Joan Clemons, "but because they believed, religiously, in the sanctity of order."

Shakerism began in the mid-1700s in England, when two Quakers, Jane and James Wardley, left the Quakers to form a separate sect. Apocalyptic and millenial in its beliefs, the Wardley society warned all to repent, "for the kingdom of God is at hand."

In 1758, the young Ann Lees from the English mill town of Manchester joined the Wardley society. By 1774, the charismatic Lees was acknowledged as leader of the Shakers, so called because their form of worship often induced a hypnotic, "shaking" movement.

The Shaker's official name is The United Society of Believers in Christ's First and Second Appearing.

Persecuted in England, the Shakers sailed for America in the spring of 1774 under the leadership of Mother Anna, as Lees was now called. They arrived in New York harbor Aug. 6, 1774.

Mother Anna spent the following 10 years making a place for her followers in America and winning converts throughout New England.

In 1784, Mother Anna died and leadership of the sect went to James Whitaker.

America's first Shaker settlement began in Watervliet, New York, in 1787; and 17 more Shaker communities were eventually organized.

At its height in the 1850s, the Shakers numbered 6,000 members from Maine to Ohio. Today only a handful of Shakers remain in villages in Canterbury, New Hampshire and Sabbathday Lake, Maine.

Each 19th century Shaker community was divided into families of 50 to 100 members. Families had their own livestock, crops and workshops. The high religious family usually resided in the center of the community and was called the Center Family.

Each family was governed by two elders and eldresses who oversaw the family's spiritual needs. Each family also had deacons and deaconesses who managed the practical daily affairs of each member.

"This gave them a very high standard of living," says historian Marcia Byrom Hartwell. "You had a different task to do each month and you knew your other affairs were taken care of."

The Shaker's basic tenets included celibacy, separation from the world, sharing of goods, equality of the sexes and pacifism. Upon signing the Shaker convenant, new members turned over their property, confessed their sins and considered their fellow Shakers as "brothers" and "sisters" regardless of race.

Although they believed in equality between the sexes, they discouraged contact between them. Sisters and brothers ate, slept, worked, studied and prayed either separately or on opposite sides of the room.

Though sometimes ridiculed or even harrassed because of their beliefs, Shakers were generally respected by outsiders — whom Shakers called "the world's people" — as industrious and charitable, if peculiar, neighbors.

"They provided food, shelter and work to neighbors fallen on hard times," Clemons explains. "Visitors were welcome to stay and work, but were never urged to join, though they were always welcome to join on a trial basis."

Shaker farm life rose partly in reaction to what the Shakers saw as the urban materialism of the Industrial Revolution. And yet, the Shakers always embraced modern technology when it aided them in their farming or domestic chores.

What To Visit

Hancock village, for instance, had running water and electricity before some neighbors did. The Shakers printed labels for canned, jarred and packaged goods in a fully-equipped print shop. In 1930 Shaker peddlars drove automobiles to sell their wares to brokers in Boston and New York City.

Excellent businesspeople, the Hancock Shakers developed successful markets for their medicinal herbs and garden seeds from 1820 through 1920.

By 1852, Shakers at New Lebanon, New York, produced chairs and stools prized for their workmanship.

Above everything, Shaker spirit was infused with the idea that the noblest pursuit is, in Mother Anna's words, "establishing a heaven on earth." Desire for earthly perfection affected all aspects of Shaker life and is everywhere evident in their village.

The visitor enters the village through a small grove of pear trees to the herb garden. Here are perfect rows of gold and orange calendula, thyme, chive, dill and rhubarb, the air freshened by the scents of peppermint, lavender and wormwood.

To the right is the ingenius round stone barn. Built in 1826, the three-storied barn enabled Shaker farmers to feed, milk and care for 52 cows with minimum work.

On the left lies the brick dwelling, home to 100 members of the village's Central Family. (In the mid-19th century, 200 other Shakers lived on the outskirts of the village center.)

In the kitchen, Hartwell bakes in the same huge brick oven in which Shaker sisters turned 100 pounds of flour into an army of steaming loaves every other day.

"Everything was cooked by wood fire," she says. "The kitchen was very busy, often all day with sisters baking bread, shucking corn, peeling potatos, or making sauces."

Shakers worked hard, so their meals were hearty, except for dinner, which was lighter.

"A typical 6 a.m. breakfast," explains Hartwell, "included meat, eggs, porridge, maybe fish, fruit pies, hard cidar and coffe or tea."

Noon lunch included much of the same, while dinner offered porridge, pies, berries and coffee or tea.

By the end of the 19th century, the Shaker economy teetered from outside competition. Changing attitudes towards religion and the strictures of celibacy contributed to the demise of the Shakers, whose numbers declined steadily during the past 100 years.

The curators at Hancock, however, have preserved a sense of this people, who had their hearts in the future, but were ready to account for their lives at any instant.

As Mother Anna said, "Do all your work as if you had a thousand years to live, and as you would if you knew you must die tomorrow."

Hancock Shaker Village is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Memorial Day Weekend through October 31.

Admission is $6 for adults, $2 for children ages 6-12, free for children under age 6, and $15 for families. Senior citizens and student admission is $5.50. Group rates are available.

Hancock Shaker Village is at the junction of routes 20 and 41, five miles west of downtown Pittsfield.

Festival displays Shaker crafts

Nothing reveals more about Shaker belief in creating a "heaven on earth" than the care and attention they put into their work. It was no wonder that, to knowing buyers throughout the 19th century, "Shaker made" was a synonym for quality.

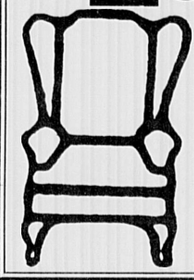

Saturday, Aug. 16 and Sunday, Aug. 17 at the Hancock Shaker Village, specialists in 19th century crafts join village craftspeople for the eleventh annual Festival of Shaker Crafts and Industries.

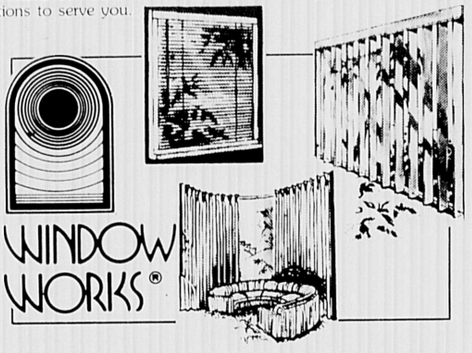

Visitors will see some 40 traditional crafts demonstrated throughout the grounds. The festival also features oxen-pulled wagon rides for children.

Other demonstrations include kitchen activities; dairy activities; medicinal and herb processing; weaving, spinning, flax preparations and dyeing; quilting; blacksmithing, metal engraving; furniture contruction; caning; carpentry; basket making; clock making; stonecutting; printing and oval box making.

Homemade breads, preserves, spices and other specialty foods will be sold in the Good Room. Reproduction Shaker furniture, oval boxes, woven items, baskets, wrought iron and other items will also be available in the Museum Gift Shop.

Admission and daily hours follow the regular schedule.

Evita is estupenda!

REVIEW

Evita, like a vintage wine, continues to grow in character and stature with the passage of time.

The national touring company that appeared at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts for far too brief a run re-fortified its stellar reputation as one of the most durable and stirring musicals ever penned.

This modern-day opera, with its haunting score by Andrew Lloyd Webber and dynamic lyrics by Tim Rice, ingenious direction by Harold Prince, restaged by Ruth Mitchell, and brilliant choreography by Larry Fuller, restaged by Kenneth Ormston, is as fresh, vibrant and dazzling as ever!

With no spoken dialogue, Evita ('little Eva') is the rags-to-riches life story of Eva Peron. The musical drama unfolds her humble beginnings and her meteoric ascent via the couch during the late 1940s and early 1950s. She rose to the most powerful woman her country and Latin America had ever known. Her saga comes to an untimely end with her death from cancer in 1952 at the age of 33.

The play opens on the chilling announcement of Eva's death and the funeral requiem, and reverts back in time to her arrival in Buenos Aires, at age 15, seeking fame and fortune as an actress, but quickly turning to prostitution as a means of survival.

A woman of driving ambition and greed, Eva moves from station to station up the military ladder, eventually cultivating the affections of army colonels, the real power behind the presidency.

When she meets Peron, she supplants his mistress. As Peron's power grows, so does Eva's as she champions labor reforms and the descamisados (shirtless ones).

In one of the many musical chair coups, marvelously executed in The Art Of The Impossible, the huge working class, at Eva's behest, comes to Peron's aid, solidifying his position in the military junta more strongly than ever. Again at Eva's prodding he runs for and captures the presidency.

Peron marries Eva and when they take residency as President and First Lady in the presidential palace, the Casa Rosada, Eva sings to her worshiping public the show's most memorable song, Don't Cry For Me Argentina.

Bedecked with jewelry, furs and designer clothes, Eva dazzles the capitals of Europe on her Rainbow Tour, besieged in Franco, Spain, a private audience with the Pope in Rome (slightly tainted . . . "someone called me a whore"), Paris and Switzerland, but dampened by a snub from England's royalty.

Back home, she establishes a social aid foundation, a combination slush fund/protection racquet, eventually blotting out the national charity run by her adversaries, the wealthy aristocrats she despises. Her body wracked with pain from cancer, she never attains her ultimate goal, the vice-presidency of Argentina.

Florence Lacey, re-creating her Broadway role, is magnificent in the title role. She is the total dramatic actress, albeit she is forced to strain in the upper register vocally.

Robert Michael Baker is an absolute standout as Che, serving as the voice of the opposition and Eva's conscience. Che never met Eva in real life but later became Fidel Castro's noted disciple. Baker's diction is letter-perfect and his rich voice abounds with resonance.

Robert Alton, brilliant vocally, portrays Peron, re-creating the role he played both on Broadway and here in the Hub in 1982. He is strong and stoic as the former Army colonel and flagrant womanizer who wins the presidency of Argentina with Eva's monumental assistance. Louis Padilla, a fine tenor, displays panache as Magaldi, a professional singer and one of Eva's early seducers, who served as the first rung on the ladder of Eva's climb to fame. And Elizabeth Bruzzese is noteworthy as the mistres of Peron whom Eva replaces.

The sparkling chorus provides yeoman service depicting the populace of Argentina, a group of English socialites, uniquely staged in group action and frocked audaciously in black and white, who serve as commentary, and a full-dress toy soldier-like marching battalion.

Staging for Peron's Latest Flame and Waltz For Eva And Che is fabulous, and the first act finale, A New Argentina, is stunning! Additional kudos go to musical director Tim Stella.

On the negative side, the shabby platforms and the manually manipulated revolving platform are a bit tacky, but, all in all, Evita is estupenda!

Friends run extended

Rave reviews and SRO houses have again struck at the Gloucester Stage Company, causing Artistic Director/Producer Israel Horovitz to extend the Lee Kalcheim comedy, Friends, for an extra week, through Sunday, Aug. 17.

The two-character comedy focuses on the friendship between two men, Harold "Okie" Peterson and Mel Simon, two Yale College roommates whose loyalty has endured 20 years since graduation.

Veteran actors Will Lebow and Richard McElvain star in this New England premiere. Lebow protrays Simon, a native New Yorker who opted to leave the city for life in a quiet Vermont town, and McElvain is cast as Peterson, the Oklahoma farmboy turned influential United States diplomat.

Friends, first staged at the Manhattan Theatre Club in New York where it enjoyed a highly successful run, takes place during the course of a weekend "Okie" spends at Mel's Vermont cabin. It focuses on the human aspects of life rather than social or political issues.

Early shows will be presented on both Saturday, Aug. 16 and Sunday, Aug. 17, with performances 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. all tickets are $12.50.

The extension of Friends postpones the opening of Horovitz's newest play, the world premiere of North Shore Fish, by one week. The new opening date is Tuesday, Aug. 19. This comedy focuses on the lives of eight women who work in Gloucester's fish plants.

"We're delighted by the response to Friends," says Horovitz, who adds, "The extra week before opening North Shore Fish ensures that the plumbing will be ready at the new theatre, as well. . ."

All performances of Friends are being held at 2 Main St., Gloucester.

With North Shore Fish, the GSC moves into its new provisional home at 267 East Main St., East Gloucester, immediately before the entrance to Rocky Neck. For further information or reservations, call 281-4099.

Season finale is Buried Child

Harvard-Radcliffe Summer Theatre's final production is Sam Shepard's Pulitzer prize-winning Buried Child, which opened this week and will continue through Aug. 23.

In Shepard's unique and musical idiom, Buried Child portrays three generations of an Illinois family in search of the values that held them together. When Vince returns home from Los Angeles, his own father fails to recognize him. Vince flees, and his girlfriend Shelley, now on her own, tries to make sense of this family as it struggles with the secret that has twisted its character — a secret hidden in the back year.

Director Marya Cohn sees Buried Child as a play of identity — of men who are invisible to one another. "Identity only comes from the family line," says Cohn. "Vince only exists if he is somewhere in the family's memory or imagination."

For Cohn, the special strength and appeal of Shepard's work lies in his language, a rhythm with both power and grace.

Buried Child is performed Tuesday through Sunday at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $5.50 for adults and $3.50 for students with ID.

The Experimental Theatre is located in the Loeb Drama Center at 64 Brattle St. in Cambridge, near the Harvard Square stop on the Red Line of the "T". For tickets and information call 864-2630.

Harvard-Radcliffe Summer Theatre also announced the final presentation of its Monday Night Series Aug. 18, when Daniel Luke Zelman directs Harold Pinter's subtle and poetic Landscape, along with Here We Are, adapted from the short story by Dorothy Parker. The presentation will also be performed at the Loeb, at 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. Tickets are $3. Call 864-2630.

From the top: Tommy Makem and Liam Clancy headline the Irish Folk Festival at Great Woods Center for the Performing Arts Aug. 23; Carolee Carmello and Bert Hilkes are still a hit in Little Shop Of Horrors at the Charles Playhouse Boston.

Born in the U.S.S.R., Nureyev made world headlines in June, 1961 when he sought asylum in the West while performing in Paris with Leningrad's Kirov Ballet.

Within a few weeks Nureyev joined the de Cuevas Grand Ballet, and in February, 1962 made his successful debut at London's Royal Opera House, Covent Garden with Dame Margot Fonteyn.

Since then he has appeared regularly as a guest artist on all leading stages of the world, his repertoire ranging from classic to modern abstract ballet, and has appeared in eight films variously as an actor, dancer and choreographer.

Artistic director of the Paris Opera Ballet since 1983, Nureyev has recently toured Japan with the Vienna State Opera Ballet, premiered his new productions of Romeo And Juliet, Swan Lake and Washington Square in Paris. He also staged Don Quixote in China with the Peking Opera Ballet.

In July, he brought the Paris Opera Ballet to New York for its first visit since 1948, and joined Mikhail Baryshnikov for an historic Gala Performance at New York's Metropolitan Opera House.

Tickets for Rudolf Nureyev And Friends are on sale at the Great Woods box office, open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tickets are also on sale by telephone charge through Ticketmaster: 1-800-682-8080 (or call: in Boston 523-6633, in Worcester 754-8800, in Providence (401) 351-1616).

Tickets for the Aug. 24 performance are priced at $23.50 and $21 for reserved seats, and $13.50 for lawn. For ticket information, call 1-800-BEETHOVEN.

Players and puppets series continues

Puppets return to Theatre by the Sea on Saturday, Aug. 16 with a performance by Poobley Greegy Puppet Theatre 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Tickets are $2.95 each for children of all ages, and are available the day of the show at the door.

The Poobley Greegy Puppet Theatre offers a brand new puppet drama this summer entitled Dynasty IV: Prime Time in Egypt.

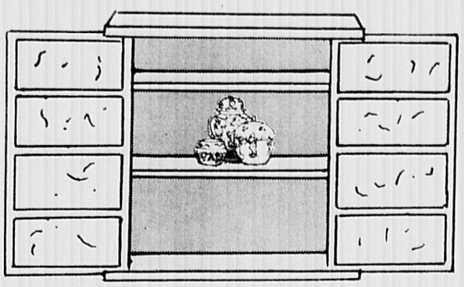

The story, based loosely on The Sorcerer's Apprentice, concerns an elementary-school class learning about Ancient Egypt and the extraordinary happenings that occur when the teacher is called out of the room. Ultimately, order is restored when the teacher returns, and a prankster's crocodile is defeated by teamwork showing that lessons of Ancient Egypt have been learned.

Mastering the Poobley Greegy puppets are Janice and Stephen Babcock who have been full-time professional puppeteers touring New England for the past ten years.

This marks Poobley Greegy's second appearance at Theatre by the Sea, located at 125 Bow St., Portsmouth, N.H. 03801.

What About Art?
By Meredith Fife Day

Strong and sensitive handling of the head's sculptural weight and active descriptive marks give Jonathan Imber's 1985 Self Portrait presence and intensity of expression.

Boston expressionists

With the summer exhibitions of winners of the 1986 Massachusetts Artists Fellowships, the competitive Mills Gallery annual drawing exhibition and the selected area painters in Boston: Painting, the question arises whether these Boston area artists either constitute or fit into a cohesive and definable movement unique to their particular milieu.

Anyone who has wondered if there is a "Boston School" of art should see the current exhibition at the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln.

Expressionism in Boston: 1945-1985 brings together 63 paintings, drawings and sculpture by 25 artists including the initial core group identified with the expressionist movement and the work of established artists from succeeding generations.

The artists and their works are grouped into three broad but distinctive categories: the Figurative Expressionists of 1945 to 1965, the Gestural Abstractionists of 1960 to 1975 and the Neo-Expressionists of 1975 to 1985.

"The work of the three groups of artists in this exhibition should not be understood as three phases of a unified, ongoing development of an artistic movement entitled 'Boston Expressionism,'" cautions exhibition consultant and catalogue essayist Pamela Edwards Allara of Tufts University Fine Arts Department.

"Expressionism has never been a coherent style; rather, it is best considered an approach which the artist takes towards the creative act."

Comparisons among the artists and their work are as unavoidable, however, as is the ultimate conclusion that there is a commonality among the works and among the three categories that forms a bond as unifying as that of other accepted traditions, movements and schools.

Another exhibition consultant and catalogue essayist, art critic Theodore F. Wolff states that the unifying strength of the artists selected for the exhibition is their resulting imagery which is "intense, mildly exotic and psychologically provocative, with a particular emphasis on sophisticated, occasionally virtuoso draftsmanship, enthusiastic brushwork, and an expressive and formal vocabulary. Their subjects always demand an intense and highly personal emotional response."

Figurative Expressionists represented in the exhibition are David Aronson, Jason Berger, Bernard Chaet, Arthur Polonsky, Mitchell Siporin, Jack Wolfe, Leonard Baskin, Henry Schwartz, Barbara Swan, Harold Tovish, Michael Mazur, and the three leading artists of the group: Jack Levine, Hyman Bloom and Karl Zerbe.

These artists' works show an influence of the Northern European tradition and subjective interpretation of the human condition.

An emphasis on humanist values anchors the artists' moral, social and political responses to the world.

The human face and form appear over and again. Victims in a world of harsh and cruel acts, as the painfully curled figure of Tovish's bronze sculpture, The Victim, and perpetrators of cruelty as Levine's puffy, hollow autocrats, are rendered with emotion-filled gesture, expressive linear activity and surfaces of movement and texture.

The Gestural Abstractionists include Katherine Porter, Gregory Amenoff, Elizabeth Dworkin, John McNamara and Roger Kizik.

While discernible figuration is painted out of the works of these artists, human presence is very much in evidence in the gesture of marks left on their surfaces.

McNamara's and Kizik's lyrical, energetic references to landscape and place, and Dworkin's and Porter's dark worlds scarred by violence and chaos are, above all, alive with feeling.

It would be quite impossible to imagine any one of the artists "filling in" areas of canvas while their minds and hearts wandered from the heat of the moment. These paintings throb with the intensity of process and feeling integrated as one.

Eloquently, succinctly, Katherine Porter says of her work: "My paintings are about chaos, constant changes, opposites, clashes, big movements in anture, short wars. I try to put everything into a picture. What you see is what you come up against in the world."

The figure reappears with personalized iconography in the Neo-Expressionist Figuration.

The paintings of Gerry Bergstein, Jonathan Imber, Doug Anderson, Rick Harlow and Adam Cvijanovic, and the sculpture of Ralph Helmick are allegorically suggestive. Narrative references are stated in imagery and form frequently rooted in the traditions of surreal and metaphysical art.

There is an edge to the wildly imaginative St. Sebastian Of The Suburbs as sure as there is an edge to Adam Cvijanovic's sequential, narrative triptych, Recognitions And A Dream. The possible changing of form and imagery into something else seems imminent, and produces an anxiety that becomes part of the content.

Finally, in relating these works of the '80s to the earlier figurative works of the '40s, Wolff speaks of the artists' shared sensibilities and "a distinct and unmistakable aura that pervaded the work of each of these artists regardless of how dramatically their individual styles and imageries may have differed."

Expressionism in Boston: 1945-1985 is on view through Sept. 7. The DeCordova Museum is located on Sandy Pond Road and is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday, and weekends noon to 5 p.m. Call 259-8355.

Guided tours of the exhibition are offered every Saturday and Sunday. Group tours may be arranged with two weeks' notice by calling 259-8821.

An extensive and informative illustrated catalogue containing biographies of the artists and essays by Wolff and Allara has been published in conjunction with the exhibition.

CHECK OFFER WITH CARE

Your home has been for sale, inspected and the latest enthusiastic prospect presents you with an "offer" to buy. Review this offer with care. It's an extremely important part of the sale.

Are all names correct? Is the property correctly described? Is the mortgage information accurate? Can you move by the possession date? Is the purchase price satisfactory? Then double check your calculations to be sure you know how much cash you will receive. If you have any doubts about points contained in the offer do not sign it until they have been completely removed from your mind.

The offer to purchase is binding on the purchaser for the amount of time stated in the offer. You can accept it without change. You can let it expire, or you can consider changes. If you change anything in the offer you are reversing the process and making an "offer to sell" to purchaser who then has the same options.

Before you sign, be certain that it clearly states all the points of agreement because the sale will be according to the letter of that script.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

TAKE—BACK MORTGAGES

When mortgage money is hard to get from other sources, a motivated seller may agree to "loan" an otherwise qualified buyer a large portion of the money needed to purchase the seller's property. The practice is commonly referred to as "taking back a mortgage." The instrument used is known as a purchase-money mortgage. Take-back mortgages generally provide short rather than long-term financing. It usually is for no more than five or ten years, but with payments based on a 25 or 30-year amortization schedule. The buyer makes a cash down payment and signs a promissory note for the balance of the contract price. At the end of the loan term, the buyer negotiates a new loan with the seller or finds new financing else-where.

A "take-back mortgage" is as binding as one issued by a bank.

Board rules security sign in violation

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Residents who display yellow security signs on their property will soon receive a letter in the mail from acting building commissioner Arthur Gallagher.

The letter, said Gallagher, will inform homeowners the sign, given to them by American Alarm and Communications Inc., is illegal. The town will request removal of them.

The zoning board of appeals voted unanimously Tuesday night that the sign in front of 8 Sheffield Road, the home of Dick Sampson, violates town by-laws and must be removed.

Gallagher previously denied Sampson's request to keep his sign and the board agreed with Gallagher's decision.

According to Gallagher and Sampson, about 100 yellow signs are scattered around the town displaying street numbers in large print and the name of the company, American Alarm and Communications Inc. Sampson is one of the owners of the company.

Town by-laws stipulate signs in front of single residences may display only street numbers and/or the name of the occupant. Advertising signs are illegal.

Sampson argued Tuesday night that the signs serve a functional purpose — to deter crime.

Sampson's sign was the subject of Tuesday's public hearing.

"The sign helps public safety officials to arrive at their destination faster because the sign carries my house number," Sampson said.

Chairman pro tem John F. Looney said, "Then we could have a 40-foot billboard in the center of town saying the town is protected by the fire department."

Sampson said Winchester is in the minority, citing several towns in the surrounding area that have no objection to the use of these signs.

"I'm appealing to you to preserve the right to use benefits of a security alarm sign. The sign just doesn't prevent crime on my property. The presence of a few signs protects the entire neighborhood," said Sampson.

Sampson gave the board one example of a young woman who wanted her aging mother to have a sign posted in front of her house. The mother, Sampson said, is one of his customers.

Sampson said he told the woman he couldn't comply with her request. He added that in towns like Belmont, Wayland, Lexington and Weston, the signs are legal.

Looney reminded Sampson on several occasions the subject was his sign, and not all the signs in town.

"You have to stick to the case. The topic is 8 Sheffield Road," he said.

Member Virginia Hoefling asked Sampson, "Is it a sign that calls attention to the premise?"

Sampson said, "I'll leave that to your judgement."

"I haven't been convinced that it's anything but an advertising sign," said Looney.

> "The sign just doesn't prevent crime on my property. The presence of a few signs protects the entire neighborhood," said Sampson, owner of American Alarm Communications

Sampson argued, "The motive is not advertising."

Sampson repeated, "The signs have a function. The overriding factor is that crime is a problem. It's not something to be ignored or treated lightly."

Alternate board member Robert H. Oppenheimer asked neighbors' reactions to the signs.

Sampson replied, "I have had no complaints. One sign in the neighborhood benefits the whole neighborhood," he said.

Gallagher said, "I had a number of complaints and so did the police department."

Neighbors opposed to the signs were not at the public hearing Tuesday night.

Noreen Acari, chairman of the Government Regulations Committee suggested drafting a warrant for fall town meeting to change the present town sign by-law.

One of the committee's responsibilities, Acari said, is to help citizens draft town by-laws whether the committee favors a change or not.

Looney said, "It is not our (the board's) role to interpret the generic rule."

Gallagher said any resident interested in appealing his decision is welcome to present their case to the board.

Sampson's next step, Gallagher said, is to appeal to superior court.

'Spenser' was worth the wait

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

More than 500 residents packed the downtown area to welcome star Robert Urich and the cast of "Spenser For Hire" last Thursday.

Residents waited close to 10 hours to catch a glimpse of stars Robert Urich and Avery Brooks of "Spenser."

Cheers rang through the center by late morning, anticipating the arrival of Urich. Rumor had it Urich and the cast were en route to Winchester.

Fans bombarded police officers with, "When are they coming?" But noone seemed to know what was keeping the cast.

The cast, due to arrive around 7 a.m., drove into town hall parking lot about 4 p.m.

Teenagers lined up outside C&G restaurant, with their faces pressed up against the windows.

Residents scurried back and forth across the street, equipped with paper and pens, anxiously awaiting Urich, who plays detective Spenser, and Avery Brooks who plays Hawk.

Scores of children blanketed the Main Street's curbs indulging in slushes from Woolworth's and ice cream cones from Brigham's and Baskin-Robbins.

"It's been busy today. We've sold more slushes today than we have all week," said Barbara Davis, a Woolworth's employee.

The crowd's cheers lost momentum as the afternoon dragged on and there was no sign of Urich. Fans grew weary and started to scatter and head home.

Children were not "Spenser's" only dedicated followers. Adults and seniors crowded the area as well.

Town employees enjoy the show

Winchester residents can see their town and maybe themselves on "Spenser For Hire" Oct. 4.

Town manager Chadwick Maurer said the town received $2,000 for the general use of the town, town hall and town hall parking lot.

Maurer said the money will be used for affordable housing program.

Usually the town rents out the auditorium for $125 a day. But Maurer said the town received more money due to the extenuating circumstances.

"It had a positive effect on the town," said Maurer.

Maurer said the production company will also pay for personnel costs.

Eight police officers were on special detail for the filming Thursday and six extra police officers were on duty Friday. Workers from the Department of Public Works and two firefighters also worked extra detail.

Winchester police officer Eric S. Benson was specifically assigned to Urich Thursday.

He said he spent most of the day walking Urich to and from his trailer between scenes.

"He was a nice guy," said Benson. Benson said Urich signed autographs after scenes but was to busy concentrating on his lines to stop on the way before scenes.

Local merchant gets a taste of Hollywood

"Spenser For Hire" was scheduled to begin filming at 6:30 a.m. last Thursday at C&G Restaurant on Main Street.

But on Wednesday night C&G owner Chris Varetimos received a call at home from a location manager saying filming would be postponed due to a backed up production schedule. According to a crew member for Spenser, delays are expected in the business and not unusual.

It was 8 a.m. Thursday and Varetimos was pacing the sidewalk talking to local police officers, and patiently waiting to turn his restaurant into a Cornwall, N.H., downtown diner.

"They told me to get everyone out by noon," said Varetimos. "I can't afford to close for the day and kick out my customers. But I think it's good publicity," he said.

Church neighbor complains parking will be a problem

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Preliminary plans to convert part of the First Baptist Church into 11 condominiums sparked concerns from a 32-year Washington Street resident.

Tuesday night the zoning board of appeals heard a preliminary site plan review from attorney Paul Amico, who represents the church.

Mary Pronski of 128 Washington Street, who has there for 32 years, voiced concern about the present parking and traffic problem that would be compounded by adding 11 condominiums.

Town meeting on May 22 voted 120-13 in favor of re-zoning the part of the church building. At the time, some neighbors opposed the move because of the problem of parking spaces in the area.

The purpose of the preliminary site hearing, chairman pro tem John F. Looney said, is to flag potential problems and question the plans and make recommendations.

The board cited two major concerns, parking and noise level.

Looney asked Amico what impact condominium parking would have on church traffic.

Rev. William Huegel of the church said, "The church presently has a declining enrollment." Sunday morning attendance, he said, is less than 100 people. About 25 years ago, he said, the turnout was closer to 200.

Huegel said he doesn't forsee a sharp increase in enrollment in the next few years.

"I don't think an increase will impact the parking," he said.

Pronski said, "The parking is a mess as it is." She said phone company employees are using the lot to park. The condominiums will send employees of the company, abutting the property, out onto Washington Street to park.

Pronski said the area is dangerous.

"It is almost impossible to see the traffic," when a person drives out of the lot and onto Washington Street, "It's extremely dangerous," she said.

Pronski suggested converting the park across the street from the church on South Border Road as a solution for additional parking.

The plans call for the planting of several shrubs near the parking lot entrance.

Looney asked Amico to consider rearranging the bushes to create better visibility for traffic.

Entangled duck rescued Friday

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

After two weeks of entanglement, a duck who makes his home at the pond across from Purity Supreme, is free.

Nancy McIntyre, a Winchester Savings Bank employee and an animal lover, said the duck was entangled in a plastic six pack container for almost two weeks.

"I tried to save it last week but it ran into the water," she said.

McIntyre, five Winchester Savings Bank employees and Brenda Currier, a local resident, spent their Friday lunch break chasing the duck.

The six holed plastic device wrapped around the duck's neck and mouth prohibited the duck from flying. McIntyre also said the duck had trouble eating.

McIntyre, along with Pat Hoyt, Tara Newman, Cynthia Whetstone, Phil Morson, Charlie Urquahart and resident Brenda Currier cornered the duck before it scurried into the water.

With help from her colleagues, McIntyre, who organized the outing, cut through the plastic with a pair of scissors, freeing the duck.

McIntyre said she had called several animal rescue shelters, to no avail.

Currier said the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals sent out a person to catch the duck but the trip was unsuccessful.

> The six-holed plastic device wrapped around the duck's neck and mouth prohibited the duck from flying.

Currier said the society told her, "the best thing is for local people to catch them because they always feed her."

Currier, an animal lover, feeds the ducks often in the summer but feeds them more often in the winter time when people are less likely to brave the cold weather.

Currier is concerned about the litter at the ponds in Winchester.

"It's a tremendous problem, they (animal rescue leagues) get calls like this all the time," said Currier.

Thanks to Winchester Savings Bank employees, a duck resumes normal activity after two weeks of being wrapped in a plastic six-pack dispenser at the pond across from Purity Supreme. (Maureen Quinlan Photo)

New dump site proposed: town to pay

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Winchester and 59 other communities could face a big sewage bill in the future.

Frank Sopper, a selectman and also a member of an advisory board to the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA), said the authority is considering a proposal to send sewage from 60 communities including Winchester to be dumped in deep seas off the New Jersey coast instead of continuing to dump in Boston Harbor.

This, Sopper said, would cost about $3 billion, a bill all 60 communities would have to foot.

The proposal, Sopper said, is not something the authority will act on quickly. He said it is in the discussion stage.

Winchester's sewage is shipped to Deer Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

The plant is currently faced with an overload of sewage because of problems caused in Winchester and other local communities, Sopper said.

Another proposal MWRA is considering is building a new plant.

Sopper says this would compound the problem. He said reducing the amount of sewage shipped to the plant should be the focus.

The MWRA reported recently the major focus in communities should be

PRIVATE MORTGAGE INSURANCE

Private mortgage insurance is coverage purchased by the home buyer for the benefit of the lender. It insures the lender against possible losses if the home buyer defaults on the mortgage. It allows lenders to make the sometimes riskier low downpayment mortgages.

Homeowners usually have only one direct dealing with private mortgage insurance, when one year's premium is due at the time of closing. After that, private mortgage insurance usually disappears into the maze of monthly escrow payments made to the lender, who generally pays it after that.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board stipulates that this insurance is needed when the down payment is less than 10%. However, since so many loans are sold on the secondary market, they are also subject to even stricter regulations. The two most dominant forces in the secondary market are Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. They require private mortgage insurance whenever the down payment is less than 20%.

State Representative Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh, second from right, watches Governor Michael Dukakis, center, sign new legislation for organ donations. Also present were, left, Dr. Alfred Frechette, former commissioner of public health, Representative Athan Catjakis from Springfield, and Representative John C. McNeil, from Malden.

Saltmarsh endorses organ opportunity

State Representative Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh announced the signing of a new state law to encourage organ donation.

Saltmarsh worked closely with the Health Care Committee for passage of the legislation.

The law, which will take effect January 1, requires Massachusetts hospitals to implement a policy for informing families of the opportunity to authorize an anatomical gift upon the death of a family member.

Saltmarsh, a sixth-term member of the House of Representatives, said he worked on this legislation to increase the availability of organs for transplantation in a sensitive and systemic way.

"Through correspondence with my constituents and articles in the news, I became aware that our current program of donor cards on drivers' licenses was just not working. Yet all the polls on the subject seemed to indicate that if people were asked they would probably donate," Saltmarsh said.

According to the New England Organ Bank, about 600 New Englanders are waiting for a kidney and there are usually five to ten waiting for hearts or livers.

The Organ Bank estimates that in only 2 percent of Massachusetts deaths are families asked about donation.

Saltmarsh said, "The most important aspect of this law is that it presents an opportunity for grieving families to realize some good out of an otherwise sad situation."

Library offers tips to college bound students and adults

School begins soon, and with it, the college application season. The process of choosing an appropriate school can be overwhelming, but Winchester Public Library has a variety of resources which can make the search for the right college easier and less confusing.

The library's most current college and career materials are located in the reference room. There, students and parents will find several different guides to schools on all levels, from secondary schools to professional and graduate programs.

The volumes, including Peterson's, Barron's and Lovejoy's guides, list institutions alphabetically by state and index them by majors. The guides also give basic information on student body composition, costs and admissions standards.

Guides are available for graduate programs, professional schools, two year schools, and study abroad programs as well as four year institutions. Other books in the collection give information on scholarships, fellowships, grants, and loans available to students.

The library's collection of college catalogs is also located in the reference room. Catalogs come in two forms, paper and microfiche. Most Massachusetts schools and some from out of state provide paper catalogs, and the library has purchased a complete collection of New England college catalogs on microfiche. The fiche can be read on microfice readers in the reference room, and copies can be made on the library's reader/printer.

on local industries. For example, if industries modify their equipment and manufacturing processes within their factories, it would reduce wastewater contamination, the MWRA reported.

Winchester and other local communities need to purify the sewage before it is shipped to the plant. Because of the amount of sewage shipped in per day, the plant is failing to purify all of it.

The first step in reducing wastewater contamination started in April with a house-to-house sump pump search.

Sopper said a number of businesses and local homeowners use sump pumps after major rainfalls to drain water out of their basements. The water was being pumped into the sewer lines.

The search for sump pump users is still in progress, said Sopper.

Sopper said the next step to be taken by the town will be to check all sewer lines.

Sopper said some are allowing groundwater and rainwater into the pipes causing an overload of sewage material sent out daily to Deer Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

Television cameras will be needed to go inside sewer pipes to identify the problems and necessary repairs.

Sopper said he did not know when the town planned to undertake the project and Dom Serratore, director of public works was unavailable for comment.

"I'd like to see them (the state) take on this problem and help us out a little bit," said Sopper adding that the state's surplus could be used to defray some of the costs if the proposal is enacted.

TRAVEL UPDATE

Josephine Vitello
BREATH-TAKING BONAIRE
For the water-sport enthusiast, Bonaire, in the Caribbean, is a paradise. In fact, this island is one of those rare places that is better known underwater than it is ashore. This fact is a testament to the island's magnificent living reefs and windowpane water. It is a mecca for scuba enthusiasts from all over the world. Ashore, nature displays pink flamingos and hundreds of other kinds of birds in an extensive bird sanctuary. Hotels cater mostly to divers, and have the most modern services and equipment. Other water-related activities are available for non-divers. Many of the reefs are so close to shore, however, that even the least avid snorkler would fine them hard to resist.
Whether you'll be off to a Caribbean Island this winter or up in the Swiss Alps skiing, let the professionals at FAIR WINDS TOURS, LTD. take care of all your travel plans. We still have several dates open for the special discounted sailings on the Royal Caribbean Cruise Line ships. Also, we have secured new dates for 1987. Couple donate gift

The Winchester Scholarship Foundation received a gift from John F. Murphy Jr. and his wife, Mary E. Murphy, of Winchester. The gift establishes a nw scholarship fund.

The income from the new "John F. Murphy Jr. and Mary E. Murphy Scholarship Fund," will be used each year to award one or more scholarships to students who are Winchester residents pursuing secondary eduation in a college or university leading to a baccalaureate or equivalent degree.

The Murphys also made an additional substantial gift to enable scholarship aid to be given this year.

The Murphys, who are well known in Winchester, have specified in their gift that students receiving scholarships be evaluated more by reference to their financial need and characteer than their scholarship achievement and preference be given to students from the Winchester neighborhood where Mrs. Murphy grew up.

The neighborhood is the area north of Lake Street, south of Border and Cross Strets, between Loring Road and its side streets on the east and Wildwood Cemetery on the west. Scholarship awards will be made each year by the committee of the local scholarship foundation.

"Through their gift, the Murphys have ensured that present and future generations of deserving Winchester young people will be assisted and encouraged in furthering their education after high school. We hope that the Murphy's example will serve as an inspiration to these students and others in the town," Mortensen said.

For more information about the new fund, contact chairman of the committee, James A. Bowers, or the guidance department at Winchester High School.

Winchester Scholarship Foundation received a major contribution from John F. and Mary E. Murphy Jr. of Winchester. Left, Murphy and his wife give a check to establish a new scholarship fund to David S. Mortensen, president of the foundation and Ed Goodwin, member of the foundation's fund-raising committee.

WHS Class of 1976 plans 10th reunion

The Winchester High School Class of 1976 is planning a 10th-year reunion Saturday, Nov. 29, at the Burlington Marriott.

RESTRICTIVE COVENANTS IN PLANNED COMMUNITIES

If you are considering a house in a planned community, be sure you understand the ground rules set by the owners' association. These covenants can cover a wide range of subjects, including exterior paint jobs, where campers may be parked, where you can walk your dog, and what kinds of shrubs or flowers you may plant in your front yard.

These covenants have their attractions for many purchasers. You don't have to worry about your neighbors doing some types of things that you might find offensive. At the same time, however, they could cramp your style if you're an individualist and wouldn't appreciate possible comunity interference in plans for your home. If you're buying in a planned community, make your offer contingent on your seeing and approving any neighborhood rules and regulations. For professional service in buying or selling real estate, contact Bixby & Portr Company Realtors. Call us at 729-7000 or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester.

Kids' Corner serves children, parents

Find your way into one far corner of McCall Junior High School any afternoon after school.

Instead of deserted corridors, visitors hear the busy hum of kids involved in building geometric structures with toothpicks or mixing up a new recipe for cookies.

From across the street come the shouts of children playing Capture the Flag or on their way to check out signs of spring at the duck pond near the library.

The bright red sign outside the door announces this beehive of activity as the Winchester after-school program, Kids' Corner.

Kids' Corner prides itself on being more than just a place for kids to go after school. The program offers a variety of educational and recreational activities geared to individual age groups.

Says head teacher Trevor Loucks, "We're continually working to make sure children here are happy, safe, and continually learning in a relaxed, camp-like atmosphere."

Each day, 75 children are transported from the five Winchester elementary schools to the program. After kids settle and have a snack, they meet to discuss the day's happenings and sign up for activities and projects.

Projects run until about 5 p.m., when children have some free time to play together or do homework. The program's day ends at 6 p.m.

The after-school program for first, second and third graders has included soccer, and the Capture-the-Flag, plus sledding in the winter. Arts and crafts projects range from batiking to weaving to cooking. One cooking group wrote and published its own cookbook of favorite recipes.

First and second graders attended a gymnastics class, while third graders participated in a drawing and painting workshop. Another group of second and third graders has been visiting the Aberjona Nursing Home once a week to share knowledge of arts and crafts with folks there and to play the game that leaps any generation gap — bingo.

Children in fourth, fifth, and sixth grades (known as O.K.O. — Older Kids Only) have spent three days a week in specialized mini-courses. O.K.O. has taken typing classes, karate lessons, pottery classes, computer lessons, and a video production classes. Follow-up activities have included trips to the Computer Museum and to Winchester Cable TV.

After the drawing and pottery class they had with Dudty Fletcher, children visited the DeCordova Museum to view an exhibition of realism and to take part in a hands-on workshop.

They concluded a study of China with a visit to the China exhibit at the Science Museum, and after touring the Museum of Our National Heritage's quilting exhibit, made quilts of their own.

The kindergarten program at Kids' Corner runs two sessions, 8:30-11:30 a.m. or 12-3 p.m. The program combines educational and social activities for pre-schoolers. Kindergarteners this year have taken field trips to Wilson's Farm, Mahoney's Rocky Ledge, and WMUX in Boston.

To increase their community awareness, children have toured Purity Supreme and ridden the train from Winchester Center to Wedgemere Station.

> Kids' Corner prides itself on being more than just a place for kids to go after school.

Roller skating lessons, bowling, and spending the day at Arlington playground have provided new kinds of run as well as develop motor coordination. Kindergarteners participate in arts and crafts and cooking projects with all other children.

On the once-a-month early release days, Kids' Corner takes advantage of extra hours to go further afield. Children have visited the Coca-Cola plant, gone apple picking, roller-skated to their hearts' content, and visited Stone Zoo. During the February and April school vacations, Kids' Corner has taken day trips to Mystic Seaport, the Worcester Science Center, the Higgins Armory Museum, and to Boston Garden to see "Magic Kingdom on Ice."

The Winchester After School Program was founded three years ago by a group of Winchester parents to provide for consistent, quality care for school-age children while parents worked or furthered their education.

The non-profit organization negotiated a lease with Winchester schools for the McCall space. From its modest beginning, the program has grown to an enrollment of 90, with a staff of a full-time director, four full-time teachers, and four assistant teachers.

Director Betty Wolsky is always on the lookout for new activities and mini courses to catch kids' interest and develop their skills. She taught art in New York City and Maryland public schools and, before becoming director at Kids' Corner, was director of special educational projects at the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln.

She brought in artist Dudty Fletcher to teach workshops in various art media. Local soft-sculpture artist Nadine Suhrbier has also come in to assist children in making their own versions of her delightful creatures.

The program seems to have succeeded on many levels: meeting a continuing need for quality after-school care, offering a variety of enrichment programs, and providing an example of cooperation between public and private sectors in Winchester.

"Kids' Corner has been a Godsend for me," says one working parent. Another parent comments with a wry grin, "My son often gets so involved that he doesn't want to leave."

The best endorsement of all comes from a six-year-old: She smiles, "It's fun. Want to see what I did today?"

A touch of Hollywood

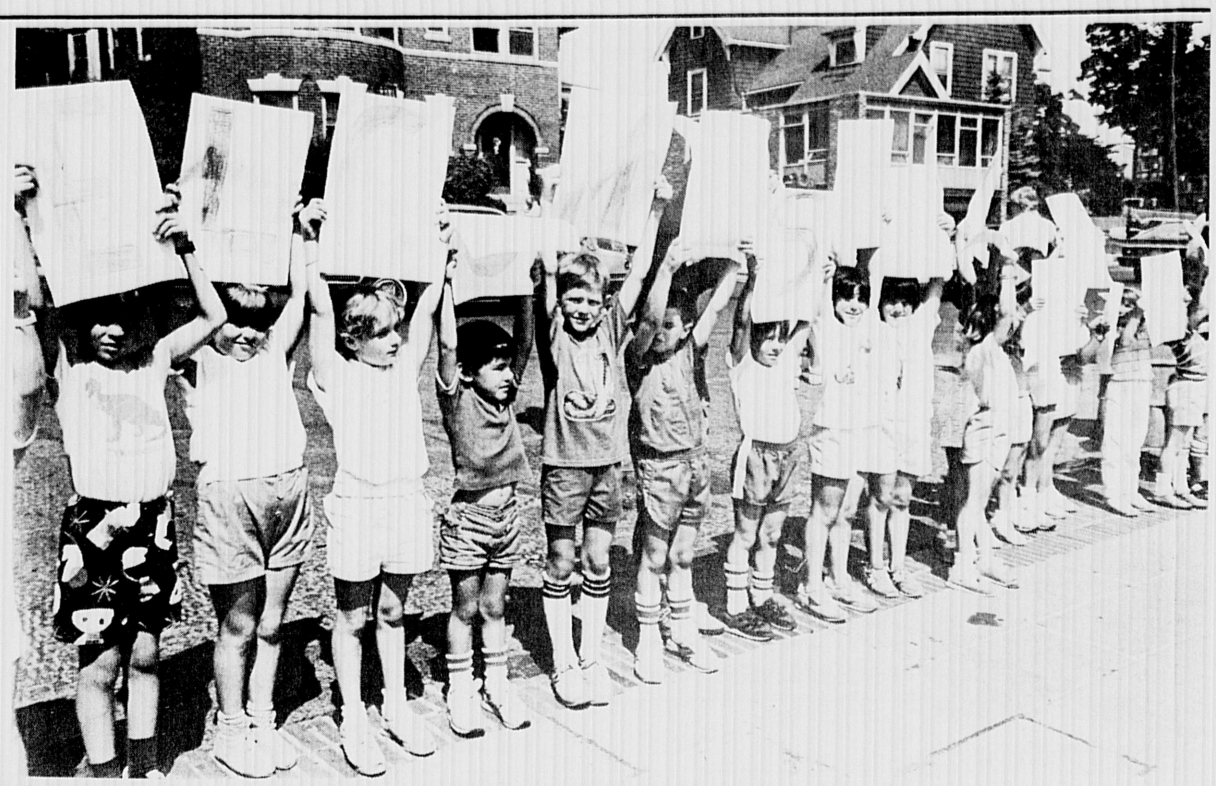

"Spenser For Hire" spent several hours filming a boxing match at Town Hall last Friday. The show's production crew spent Thursday afternoon and Friday building a boxing ring in the auditorium. From the top, spectators are Winchester residents who served as extras in the show; Robert Urich as Spenser and Avery Brooks as Hawk watch the action at ringside; local residents react to the fight; and actress Page Hannah encourages her boyfriend in the scene to beat the "10 count" and stay in the fight. (Wes Schmale Photos)

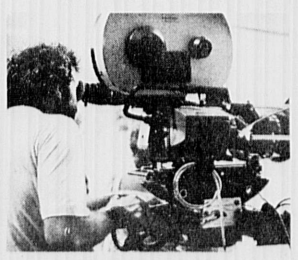

Photos by Wes Schmale and Paul Drake

Winchester residents, young and old, crowded the downtown area to watch their favorite stars on camera. Robert Urich, 'Spenser,' signed hundreds of autographs in between shoots all over town. Winchester will air on "Spenser For Hire," Oct. 4.

COMMENT

Self-expression has no age limit

By TERRY MAROTTA

There's no doubt, I think, that people feel freer about expressing themselves today than they once did.

Where once folks were expected to act their age and know their place, these days the idea of shaping behavior according to years or station in life seems as antiquated as the tintype.

People now march more to the beat of their own drummers. They do what they feel like doing, without reference so much to age or gender.

You see women studying auto mechanics; men taking aerobics; teensy old folks ambling around the shopping malls in running shoes and sweat suits.

I wonder if my own Baby Boom generation didn't set the stage for this great cultural permission. Demographers call us the Pig in the Python—the many millions born in the years between 1946 and 1964. We're a great outsized bubble slowly working our way through life.

By virtue of our numbers, we've been trendsetters. When we were little, we made millionaires of the producers of Ovaltine and Davy Crockett hats. Later, we took the Beatles to our hearts and transformed them into megastars.

Raised on the gentle precepts of Spock, fired by gains in the civil rights and women's movements, we were encouraged to experiment and speak out. We did just that.

Because there were so many of us, our behavior became the norm. And so a certain gleeful iconoclasm, a kind of free-wheeling appetite for improvisation is now standard in people of every age.

Even the airwaves are filled with the spirit. Turn the dial on your radio. What do you hear on station after station but songs called Oldies, Easy Favorites, Classics?

What they are really of course are rock tunes, from the years when we Baby Boomers were hanging out at the high school dance.

Most of us are nearly 40, and we still listen to rock 'n' roll, that subtle promoter of unholy gyration and what parents used to call direct disobedience.

Tunes like "Wake Up Little Susie," "Hand Jive," "Louie Louie," all reviled by the grown-ups of that era, will probably be piped in for state dinners at the White House by the president at the turn of the century.

Elton John will be the ambassador from Great Britain. Reagan's welcoming the Beach Boys a few summers ago was merely the first step in this direction.

It's OK, too. It's sort of healthy. Be who you are, is the prevailing wisdom; you're as young as you feel.

The other night we went to a little urban coffee house to hear a concert by a man who does ballads, blues, and the best yodelling this side of the Matterhorn.

The place was jammed with an audience in their late teens and early 20s. "We're the oldest ones here," my husband observed, searching for crow's feet. "No we're not," I added, nodding stageward. "The performer's got us beat by a decade."

Society's less hierarchical now. Distinction based on all accidents of birth are fewer than they once were. Ageism is out, along with most of the other ugly isms having to do with gender, race and religious background.

Caroline Kennedy married a Jewish man recently. Everyone was delighted.

My mom, born in 1907, attended a nuclear freeze rally last fall with a friend of the same age.

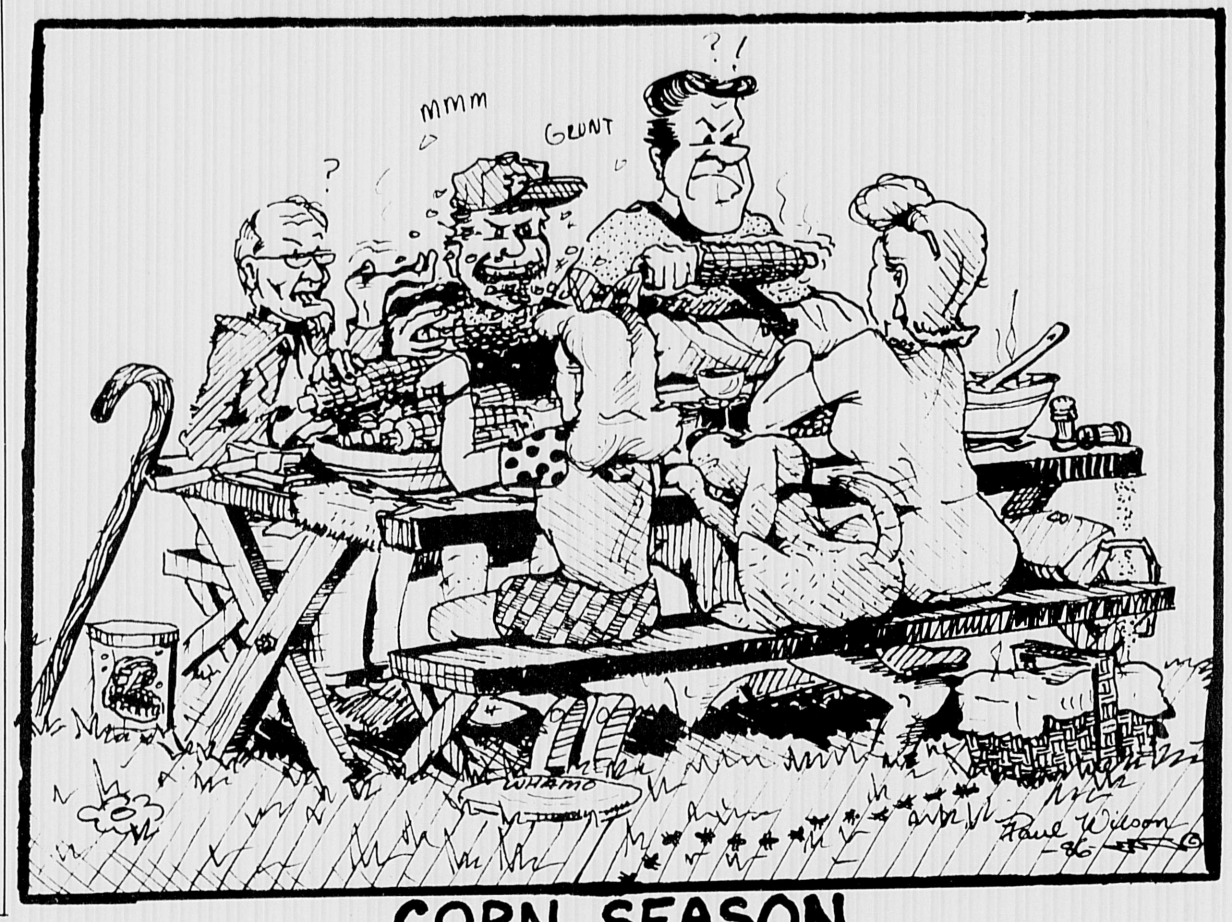

Two of my under-10 kids spent the summer studying Bach and Vivaldi at singing camp.

Express yourself, is the message.

I saw two women at the playground the other day. It was late afternoon, that dead hour when it's too early to start supper and too late to start anything else. They had grey hair, sneakers, and a baby apiece, reposing in strollers.

Were they comparing rheumatisms? Exchanging recipes? Not at all. Soberly, expertly, with the rhythm that comes of steady custom, they were taking turns shooting baskets.

Now is this a great country to live in or what?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Woman thanks dog owner

TO THE EDITOR:

Sherlock Holmes is an excellent example of what comfort and happiness an animal can bring to people confined to nursing homes.

His owners, Lester and Edith Godwin of Winchester, kindly allow him to visit my mother at the Bear Hill Nursing Center in Stoneham. Having previously owned a Weimaraner, it means a lot to her when the dog comes for a visit.

Sherlock seems to sense that he is on an errand of mercy. He allows anyone and everyone to touch and make of him in their own way. When I am pushing my mother in her wheelchair, Sherlock walks beside her like a protective soldier.

His excellent behavior makes him a very welcome visitor.

I am very grateful to the nursing home for allowing him to visit. Animals definitely have a therapeutic effect on sick people.

Sincerely,
Martha H. Kozlowski

Citizen challenges board's behavior

TO THE EDITOR:

I continue to read with great amusement the actions of certain members of the Board of Selectmen.

At a selectmen's meeting recently, when approval was sought for the filming of ABC-TV's "Spenser for Hire" in Winchester, selectman Lombardi stated that the "classy" thing to do be to increase the fee charged individuals to utilize the town hall in an effort to "squeeze" more money out of the production company.

Sherlock homes, owned by the Godwins of Winchester, provides comfort and company to patients at Bear Hill Nursing Center.

To me, this shows a total lack of class. The classy thing, to me, would be either to negate the fees altogetheer, or charge the standard fee rather than to set a precedent by setting fees on a sliding scale based on ability to pay, especially since it was the intention of Warner Brothers to make a sizeable donation to the town, regardless.

Lombardi further stated that because these people are stars, they should not be given a full run of the town. Would not the more neighborly stance be that of selectman Deering who stated that filming in town would be good for local merchants and bring a concomitant excitement? Shouldn't we welcome these individuals to our town? Selectman Sopper stated that what "excites" him is money. He should be excited, as more money was "squeezed" out of the production company.

Even after approval, it was most amusing to view the antics of Lombardi and Sopper on Main Street last Thursday was they argued with police about the legality of temporary signs utilized by the film company in order to make it easier for police officers on detail to control parking in the areas to be used by the film company.

Subsequent taunting by Lombardi from his office window on Main Street to police officers below likened itself to an elementary school playground. Quite a welcoming committee.

Lastly, the issue of recognition of the town was raised. Winchester will be depicted as a small New Hampshire town on air. It is my feeling that residents of Winchester past and present watch with pride and even excitement as their town is shown off nationwide.

Sincerely,
Eric S. Benson
59 Johnson Rd.

Correction

Comments regarding the existence of toxic materials at the former Hudson Industries site were credited to the wrong selectman in a story in last week's issue.

Robert Deering should have been quoted as saying that toxic materials in the area, which is a proposed site for condominium development, are above background levels.

The Star apologizes for its error.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

The House and Senate. The House and Senate continue to meet informally during the summer recess.

This week, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" updates legislative action on 6 more measures which were approved by the legislature and signed into law by Governor Dukakis. All the bills came to a roll call vote in only one branch and were approved in the other branch by a voice vote.

Legislative Committees (H 5600) — Approved by House 114-27 and signed by the Governor as part of the fiscal 1987 budget on July 10 was an amendment hiking from $30,000 to $90,000 funding for expenses of legislative committees to sit and travel during legislative sessions and recesses.

Supporters said the increase was necessary for the efficient functioning of these committees.

Opponents said a $60,000 hike was outrageous and unnecessary and was simply a waste of taxpayers' money.

A Yea vote is for the $60,000 hike. A Nay vote is against it. Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Registry (H 5600) — Approved by House 126-11 and signed by Dukakis as part of the fiscal 1987 budget was an amendment increasing funding for the Registry of Motor Vehicles by $400,000.

Amendment supporters said the hike was necessary to improve the operation of the Registry.

Opponents said the hike was unnecessary and noted the Registry's budget has already been substantially increased in this year's budget.

A Yea vote is for the $400,000. A Nay vote is against it. Saltmarsh voted yes.

Certified Specialists (S 496) — Approved by House 131-13 and signed by the Governor on August 14 was the bill providing reimbursement by insurance companies and others for services performed by certified clinical specialists in psychiatric and mental health nursing.

Supporters said third party reimbursement is warranted for these professionals.

Opponents said this is simply another special interest bill which hurts the quality of the health care system.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it. Saltmarsh voted yes.

$5 Million Loan (H 5926) — Approved by House 130-1 and signed on July 1 was a bill authorizing a $5 million interest free loan for the city of Chelsea.

Supporters claimed the city is in deep financial trouble and needs the money to pay bills.

Opponents said the legislature should not be in the business of granting interest free bail out loans.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it. Saltmarsh voted yes.

Collins (H 6126) — Approved by House 147-0 on July 2 were the resolutions expressing the House's deep confidence in Amherst Representative James Collins as Chancellor of the Board of Regents of Higher Education.

Supporters said this will send the Governor a message that the House supports Collins and the method used to select him.

The resolutions are only to express the opinion of the House and were not acted upon by the Senate or Governor.

A Yea vote is for the resolutions. Saltmarsh voted yes.

Campaign Funds (H 5960) — Senate 30-5, refused to table a bill raising the amount of a contribution which must be individually reported by candidates for state legislative office from $15 to $50 and for county and statewide and U.S. House and Senate candidates from $25 to $50. The bill would require that only the names of supporters contributing over $50 be included on the list of contributors which candidates must file. The measure also requires candidates to keep records of contributions under $50.

Supporters of the bill said it will eliminate unnecessary and cumbersome bookkeeping, keep pace with the economy and strengthen finance laws.

Opponents said the bill actually dilutes the reporting laws and leaves the door open for abuse. A similar version of the bill was signed by Governor Dukakis on July 23.

A Yea vote is for tabling the bill. A Nay vote is against tabling. Senator Richard Kraus voted no.

Bone marrow registry funded

The American Red Cross recently launched the nation's first central bone marrow registry. The Office of Naval Research awarded a $3.5 million contract to the program.

Administered by the American Red Cross in collaboration with the American Association of Blood Banks and the Council of Community Blood Centers, the program will serve thousands of patients who could benefit from a bone marrow transplant but do not have an eligible related donor.

Individuals with leukemia, aplastic anemia, and other serious blood disorders often require bone marrow transplants. The National Bone Marrow Donors' Registry will initially involve the bone marrow donor files of 31 Red Cross blood regions and 23 non-Red Cross blood collection organizations and hospitals. In total, these groups have already identified 55,000 potential bone marrow donors.

"The registry has the capability of greatly increasing the number of bone marrow transplants now being performed," said Dr. Alfred J. Katz, vice president for research and development at the Red Cross national headquarters.

For more information, contact the American Red Cross, Cambridge Region, 9 Waterhouse St., Cambridge, 02138 (phone: 354-7800).

SENIOR NEWS

Jenks expansion program is in full swing. Construction should be completed by the end of 1986.

The addition to the Jenks Senior Center should be completed by the end of the year, weather permitting.

Expansion update

All constructional underground unknowns have been cleared up such as tapping into drains to save costs, placing electrical power lines, straightening out the Metropolitan District Commission's line between the Jenks Center and the pond and getting approval from the State Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Planning for gas lines, telephone wiring and sewage conduits and obtaining approval from the Town on all conditions have also been completed. The building management team is hopeful for completion by the end of 1986 weather permitting.

The foundation wall is in place and the lower level floor slab is beeng laid. The old heater has been removed which means that a new boiler must be operating in October to maintain a warm temperature.

Dr. Richard Norberg met recently with town officials to ask for help in eliminating the delay in construction. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh, a longtime friend of seniors, spent a considerable amount of time in expediting the continuation of the work. Getting the utilities and MDC to arrange for connections to the expansion project and complying with all regulation pertaining to underground connections presented several problems.

Appreciation is extended to Whip Saltmarsh for his valuable assistance.

Movie set for Sept. 19

Movie of the month will be "The Yearling," Friday, Sept. 19, from 1 to 3:40 p.m.

Majroie Kinnan Rawlings' sensitive tale of a boy, played by Claude Jaman Jr., emotionally attached to a young deer, was exquisitely filmed on location and in technicolor with memorable performance by Gregory Peck, Jane Wyman, Chill Wills, Henry Travers and June Lockhart.

Jenks seeks musicians

Among Jenks seniors are many who have played instruments through the years as soloists, in ensembles, and in orchestras, or just for personal pleasure.

There is nothing more relaxing than having the opportunity to produce the music of the masters, or that of lighter popular tunes. Uniting talents in the accomplishment of orchestral performance is a thrilling experience with all players giving their best in creating a harmonious whole.

The center plans to organize a Jenks Senior Center orchestra in the fall. Townspeople are invited to join the group regardless of age. Needed will be a conductor, stringed instruments, brass, woodwinds, and percussion.

When the new wing is dedicated, a Jenks Senior Center orchestra should be ready to make the joys of having a new addition to the center resound throughout the community on this most momentous occasion.

Please call the center reception desk at 721-7136 to sign up for the orchestra.

Jenks offers rug hooking

Sept. 9 at 10 a.m., Mathee Hodge will offer a course in rug hooking and braiding.

There will be a limit of 12 members. Sign up early.

Visit Lowell National Park

Lowell, Mass., on the Merrimack River, is now the site of a National Historic Park. The Winchester Seniors Associaiton's education committee scheduled a trip Thursday, Sept. 18, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. to view the historical landmarks of the first great industrial city in Massachusetts.

See the mills, enjoy trolley and bus rides, and take a boat trip through the canal and lock system that maintained the industry.

There will be only about 500 feet of walking on the tour.

Thirty-five people can be accommodated.

Bowling league seeks members

The Winchester seniors bowling league is an active group that meets every Friday at 9:15 a.m. at the Woburn Bowlerdrome a block from Woburn Center.

New members are invited to join.

Shoes are provided to seniors at no cost. The first date of the season is scheduled for Sept. 26.

Call the center at 721-7136 for more information.

Jenks hosts luncheon

Sept. 17 there will be a soup and sandwich luncheon with soup, roast beef sandwiches, coffee or tea and dessert. Two dancers will entertain with a demonstration of ballroom dancing.

Jenks hosts day trip

Sept. 24, a day trip is planned to Averof Restaurant in Cambridge on Massachusetts Avenue, Porter Square. A belly dancer will provide the entertainment.

The bus will leave at 10:45 a.m. and return at 3:30 p.m.

There is a choice of baked lamb with tomato sauce or fish of the day with salad and pastries.

Care program seeks volunteers

The Senior After Care Program (SAC) is pilot project of the Winchester Council on Aging.

The program assists seniors who are newly discharged from hospitals and day surgery treatments.

The goal of the program is to help patients sort out what they need and to learn of resources. Since there are gaps in these resources, this role is filled by June Hall, SAC Coordinator based at Jenks Senior Center.

The Senior After Care coordinator accepts referrals from seniors, relatives, friends, or community agencies to visit homes of Winchester seniors who have been discharged from hospitals and are home alone or with frail relatives.

Senior volunteers are an important part of this valuable support service. The SAC coordinator trains and supervises volunteers who help newly discharged patients with simple tasks and provide social support on a continuing basis at home. Plant and pet care, letter writing, newspaper reading, and friendly relationships complement the professional.

From March to July, 35 people have served with June Hall, SAC Coordinator and the trained volunteers.

New volunteers are invited to become a part of the fall program when another training period will be held.

Volunteers are seniors who are experienced nurses, technicians, business managers, wives and parents with a variety of hobbies and social skills.

The main qualifications for volunteer is commitment, good judgment, and the art of establishing friendly relationships.

Call either the COA administrator, Barbara Ciampa at 721-7136, or June Hall at the Jenks Senior Center for more information.

Consumer Guide newly published

The Massachusetts Consumer Resource Guide tells more than where to complain if a new toaster won't toast.

Unlike the telephone book, the guide doesn't assume consumers already know the office they should contact for information. Instead, this directory includes a comprehensive index in which listings are arranged according to problem, not solution. To complain about a foot-deep pothole, look under "potholes," rather than "City Clerk's Office."

Specific guide listings contain not only the name and address and telephone number of an agency but a brief description of each organization's purpose and jurisdiction.

To order a copy, send one dollar to "Massachusetts Consumer Resource Guide," P.O. Box 70, Essex Street Station, Boston, 02112-0070 or pick one up at one of the following Better Business Bureaus: Boston, Lawrence, Hyannis, North Dartmouth and Framingham.

Customers can trust Stormtite for quality workmanship and attention to detail.

Stormtite, located at 170 Belmont St., Watertown, began as a manufacturer of aluminum storm windows and doors in 1953. Its founder, Harry Karnik was soon joined by his son John in 1959, his daughter Nadia in 1964, and most recently his granddaughter Linda in 1984.

Over the years the siding division has played an ever-increasing role in Stormtite's business. At Stormtite, the installation of siding is viewed as a total and complete process. They employ seven siding crews, a roofing crew, two window installers, and one full-time painter.

Each installation is carefully planned and supervised. Employing this range of crews is a convenience to customers while enabling Stormtite to control quality, making sure all work meets its high standards.

"Our work is of top quality," explains John Karnik. "Our mechanics know their business, however I still do periodic checks," he adds. "Our customers trust us and we do everything possible to retain this trust. "Our work is of top quality. Each house is handled as if it were our own."

This care and attention to detail and quality workmanship has resulted in a unique customer relationship which has continued through-out the company's existence. Customer referrals play an important part in Stormtite's sales, and customer satisfaction is so evident that payment for work is generally accompanied by a 'thank you' note. This customer relationship has contributed to the business being better in recent years than any other time in the company's history.

The primary areas serviced by Stormtite includes Arlington, Belmont, Lexington, and Winchester.

Frank White

Former Arlington resident Frank X. White, 66, a retired senior vice president of Business International Corporation of New York, died Aug. 17 of an apparent heart attack at his home in Bronxville, N.Y.

Born in Buffalo, Mr. White grew up in Arlington and attended St. Agnes School. He graduated from Arlington High School in 1937, Harvard College in 1941 and Harvard Law School in 1949.

A member of the Naval Reserve from 1942 to 1946, he served aboard amphibious craft in the Pacific and later was assigned to the US Office of Military Government in Berlin as chief of the supply control staff, supervising relief shipments for the German population.

He later worked for the Department of Defense and again in Germany as a foreign service officer for the State Department. In Bonn, he was third ranking economics officer of the Combined Embassy and Marshall Plan Mission.

In 1954, Mr. White joined American Machine and Foundry Inc. as assistant to the chairman of the board. From 1956 to 1964, he was president of AMF International and was the subject of a major Life magazine photo essay on the then "new kind" of postwar American international businessman.

He later became vice president in charge of corporate staff for Amax Inc., and later vice president in charge of international operations for Joy Manufacturing Co.

From 1973 until his retirement this year, he worked for Business International Corp. and was in charge of worldwide client relations for the firm, which is engaged in international publishing research and consulting.

A member of the Massachusetts and New York Bars, he also was a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and the Harvard Club of New York.

He was formerly director of the American Management Association, a vice chairman of the U.N. Association of the United States, a director of the International Marketing Institute, and director of Calvary Hospital, the Bronx. He had written many articles for periodicals on international business.

He leaves his wife, Louise (Gedanie); two daughters, Gretchen Maloney of Sudbury and Patricia Maloney of Croton-on-Hudson; a son, Frank X. White 3rd of Bronxville; a sister, Patricia Harrington of Winchester; two brothers, Marc A. of Ithaca and Washington, D.C.; and Thomas R. White of Honesdale, Pa.; his mother, Marie J. White of Winchester; and a granddaughter.

A funeral mass will be said this morning, Aug. 21, at 11 a.m. in St. Paul's Church in Cambridge. Burial will be in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society or Calvary Hospital in the Bronx, N.Y.

Arrangements were handled by the Lane Funeral Home in Winchester.

Spenser comes to town

"I'm what you call a fan," said Winchester resident Diane Strain. Strain was still walking along Main Street five hours later.

"It wouldn't have been worth it to go home and miss seeing him. I'm a real fan," she said.

A group of Winchester High School freshmen boys sat across the street from C&G.

"I'm here to see Hawk. I want to see his glasses," said Daniel O'Grady.

Steve Snyder's favorite is Urich.

"We'll wait all day. We came here to see him and we'll see him," he said determined.

Teenage girls came with cameras around their necks hoping to snap a close-up shot.

Around 4 p.m., rumor had it the stars, extras and crew had just arrived at town hall and were eating a late lunch.

Yellow police lines at town hall kept residents from running into star's trailers but didn't stop screams of excitement.

Chanting began. "We want Spenser, we want Spenser."

A production crew member questioned the crowd, noting he thought Winchester was an affluent town. Why were people acting like this, he asked.

As trucks and trailers pulled out of town hall lot and heading for their shooting location, hundreds of spectators raced back to Main Street to see Urich film.

The crowd seemed to quickly forget the endless day-long wait, when Urich emerged from his trailer.

Town

A fellow told Benson that Urich said he was impressed with Winchester and was sorry he hadn't seen the town sooner. Urich recently bought a home in North Andover.

Winchester Lt. Det. Joseph N. Perritano was specifically assigned to Urich Friday from 7 a.m. until after midnight.

"I found him to be a very personable guy. He was great with the kids and anyone who wanted his autograph, he was more than accomodating," said Perritano. "It was great for the town," said Perritano.

Filming was completed around midnight Friday. The production crew was back Saturday morning to clean up. Maurer said the crew was back again Monday to take down the bleachers used in the boxing scene Friday night.

Merchant

Varetimos stayed open for breakfast Thursday morning serving his usual morning crowd and others that hadn't hear about the show's delay.

C&G was closed for lunch and dinner Thursday but reopened Friday for breakfast. When filming got underway Friday, C&G closed again for lunch and dinner.

Varetimos will be reimbursed for lost business from the production he said, but does not know how much.

What To Do

Audubon Society celebrates

By Cathy McCarron

Snorkeling on Martha's Vineyard, digging during an archaeologist's weekend, and tidepooling along a rocky coast seem to be unlikely activities for the Massachusetts Audubon Society.

Then again, two Boston socialites seem to be unlikely founders for North America's oldest conservation society.

Massachusetts Audubon Society owes its 90 year existence to two such women, Augusta Hemenway and Minna B.Hall.

In fact, ruffling the feathers of a few society women was the first step towards organized conservation in America.

In 1896, the ecological concerns stemmed from somewhat different sources than those causing the acid rain, water pollution, and endangered species of today.

The Massachusetts Audubon Society was born of Hemenway's and Minna's concern for the egret population, since the birds were being slaughtered to decorate hats.

Audubon's history began in true Brahmin fashion as the women, working from their Newbury Street office, urged their peers to boycott the plumed hats.

Hemenway and Minna hired world-reknown ornithologist, William Brewster and named the society after the century's foremost naturalist painter, John James Audubon.

Of Mass. Audubon's genteel beginnings, only its name and philosophy remain unchanged.

Audubon insists that the time has come, "when the responsibility for preserving the environment has clearly passed from the government to individuals."

Mass. Audubon has evolved into an ecological conglomerate, fusing education, research, and conservation to maintain a successful coexistence between humans and wildlife.

Offered in Mass. Audubon's anniversary year are programs geared to anyone with a sense of adventure.

Public relations director Eleanor Perkins notes, "with membership growing larger every year, Audubon is on the cutting edge of widespread appeal."

The 31,000 families and 90,000 school children who come in contact with the Audubon Society each year know that Audubon is not just for bird watchers.

The birdwatching stereotype is one Eleanor Perkins is hoping to shed. "Some people still think of us as a bunch of Ranger Ricks and do not realize the extent of our research facilities and nature programs," she says.

Audubon is, in essence, a futuristic society. Perkins says of the society's land conservation efforts, "We have worked very closely with the state house to help pass legislation on acid rain, on fining polluters, and on an act to clean up Boston Harbor.

"Everyone who cares about the water they drink, should have an Audubon membership sticker on the back of his car."

A family membership costs $25. The rate for individual membership is $20, and student membership is $12. With a membership comes free admission to any of Audubon's sanctuaries and a discount on every program.

Audubon's line-up offers exciting, reasonable alternatives to help beat the end-of-summer doldrums.

Besides visiting any one of Massachusetts' 17 wildlife sanctuaries, there are special day trips, weekend trips, and even week long programs.

Flowers

The Ashumet Holly Reservation and Wildlife Sanctuary hosts a Country Flower Arranging workshop Aug. 21. The cost is $8 for members, $10 for non-members.

National Geographic devotees will revel in John Gavin's course in nature photography Aug. 27 at the Endicott Regional Center. Call 927-1122.

If vacation falls after Labor Day, return to Eastham for the Coastal Ornithology Field School. The Sept. 13-20 date falls on peak autumn migration season. The $275 member and $325 non-member fee includes dormitory style accomodations, and exposure to nesting birds and seabird biology.

Sanctuaries

An alternative to the didactic nature of the workshops can also be found at any of Audubon's sanctuaries. For those who wish to experience nature in the wake of American Transcendentalism, many sanctuaries offer enough peace and solitude to please a modern day Thoreau.

Day-long passes to any of the natural habitats are between $1 and $4. And while the tours are there for the asking, a visitor is free to roam the grounds alone.

Each habitat has its charms, and of the three closest to Boston there is hardly a common thread.

Drumlin Farm Education Center and Wildlife Sanctuary in Lincoln is the perfect place to introduce a child to life on the farm. The 220 acres of pastures, woods, barns, and the animals who live in them, are reminiscent of a New England of a different century. Cost is $3 per adult, $1.50 children and senior citizens.

Specials

Special programs include a summer camp for children, and classes and courses throughout the school year, including school vacation weeks. For adults, there are annual barn dances, harvest days, and a bird seed day. Call 259-9807.

On the banks of the Charles in South Natick is the 577-acre Broadmoor Wildlife Sanctuary. The habitat provides an ideal cross of woodland, marsh, fields, and pond. The sanctuary has its own sawmill, gristmill, and nine miles of marked trails.

Children can participate in Discovery programs as well as in a festival for a landscape project, on Columbus Day, Oct. 13, 11:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. This celebration, for all ages, features food, music and tours.

Broadmoor's Birdfeed Pick-up Day, Nov. 1, is a birdseed sale and Broadmoor fundraising event. Birdseed must be pre-ordered by Oct. 10. Order forms may be picked up at any sanctuary.

Admission to the sanctuary is $2 for adults, and $1 for children and senior citizens. For more information call 655-2296.

Located in Milton are the Blue Hills Interpretive Centers. The 5700-acre reservation includes both the Trailside Museum and Chickatawbut Hill.

Beaches, downhill and cross country ski trails, hiking and bridal paths are all found in this environmental panorama.

Adults pay $1 and children and senior citizens pay 50 cents to roam the habitat and/or participate in the lectures, tours, exhibits, and nature courses.

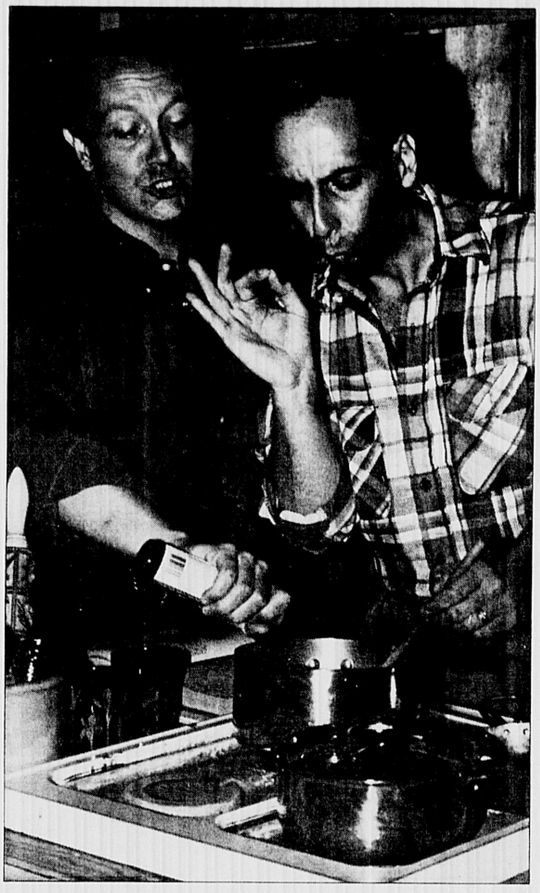

The counterpart to the museum is Chickatawbut Hill's environmental education center. Its extended learning program is offered to organized groups and advance registration is necessary. Call 333-0690.

Lebow, McElvain Shine in Friends

REVIEW

If you can beg, borrow or steal a ticket, go see Friends!

At the Gloucester Stage Company through Aug. 17, this two-character play by Lee Kalcheim is heartwarming and touching, comic and gripping as it focuses on the friendship between two men, former Yale College roommates, whose loyalty, love and devotion has endured twenty years since graduation.

Friends stars William LeBow and Richard McElvain who create an unbelievable intimacy as they play off one another, parading naturalistic acting at its zenith.

It is directed with keen insight and sensitivity by Tom Bloom and it is written with total realism and sincerity by Kalcheim.

There is no fourth wall here. Each member of the audience becomes one of the players, albeit silent, viewing the action in the cramped cottage (great set by James Fenhagen) with its ingenious collage of clutter that Mel Simon (LeBow) has leased for two years.

It is here that Mel has found temporary escape, surrounded by the ladder leading to the bunk in the loft with a TV set at its foot. Below lies a Fibber McGee closet, a drawing board, a sink-range-bar set-up, an ancient frig, a couple of odd bar stools, a well-worn couch, a threadbare easy chair, a battered coffee table, and obviously slipshod housekeeping.

Mel, a bachelor, is a native New Yorker who has opted for life in a quiet Vermont town and for an opportunity to find himself ("the Manhattan kid that's become a Green Mountain boy!").

He's held down a number of jobs — comic strip artist, Village Voice cartoonist, pastry chef and prep school teacher. He has little interest in money and his social life has been nil. Mel has always been overshadowed by his brother, a successful Bel Aire plastic surgeon, and agonizes over the fact that he was never able to please or satisfy his father.

A farm boy from Oklahoma, Harold "Okie" Peterson (McElvain) has always succeeded in everything he has set out to do — senior class president, star halfback on the Yale football team, diplomatic service in the State Department, and now leading candidate for the post of Ambassador to the United Nations.

Bright, wealthy and influential, reserved and controlled, Okie married his college sweetheart and they are now the parents of two young daughters.

Okie has requested the weekend visit, not having seen Mel in two years, and upon his arrival in a new Mercedes, the two balding and graying men renew their relationship. Slowly, their innermost feelings and problems rise to the fore. There is only Mel's yapping dog Clipper to break the mood.

Okie broods over the move from Virginia to New York City, while Mel jokes that when Okie becomes president of the United States he should appoint Mel Secretary of State only so that he can give the command, "Get out of Nicaragua!"

To ease the tension, Mel arranges for dates with two local women. The buddies choke down cheap wine that "has an expiration date." They play at word games. And things get mean when Okie pressures Mel into calling the only girl he ever loved.

Okie is troubled; he doesn't want the UN position. Mel learns that Okie was in an accident recently, cracking up his car. Mel reflects, "Leave it to the Germans to wipe out half of Europe, then invent a car that no one can die in!"

Okie reveals that his life has been one of constant pressure, fulfilling the expectations that everyone anticipates, everyone making demands of him, tearing him apart bit by bit, to a point of breaking. Okie is losing control and now he wants only to be free. While Mel sleeps, he takes the hunting rifle and disappears.

Friends is Mel and Okie's story as they face the vulnerability of mid-life crisis and the iron bond that links the two irrevocably.

Anthony Newley returns

Stop The World I Want To Get Off, the unconventional musical fantasy, starring Anthony Newley in his original Broadway role, runs for eight performances through Sunday, Aug. 24 at the Wang Center, 270 Tremont St., Boston.

Stop The World I Want To Get Off is the futile cry of Littlechap, played by Anthony Newley, an Everyman-type character who goes through Shakespeare's seven stages of man in a single evening. The concept of this musical was invented by Leslie Bricusse and Anthony Newley, who together wrote the book, music, and lyrics. This current production is directed by Newley as well.

Newley, as Littlechap, plays a man whose increasing disappointment with the world around him prompts pleas of "Stop the world" sporadically during his life. As his career rockets, his personal life is ripped apart by his own affairs.

The musical originally opened in London in July, 1961 and became an overwhelming success. It opened on Broadway Oct. 3, 1962 with Anthony Newley repeating his starring role. In Febrary 1964 this show went on a long tour. Boston audiences last saw Newley 22 years ago.

Performances are Thursday, Friday and Saturday, 8 p.m.; Sunday, 7:30 p.m. Matinees are Wednesday, Saturday, and Sunday 2 p.m. Tickets are $10 to $27.50. For more information and charge tickets call Ticketmaster at 800-682-8080 or 523-6633.

Performers assemble for Grasshopper Ball

More than 100 merchants and over 50 performing arts groups will join ARTS/Boston in celebrating the 10th anniversary of Faneuil Hall Marketplace on Sunday, Aug. 24, with The Grasshopper Ball, a "creative" black-tie affair featuring live performances, dancing, refreshments and special surprises.

Proceeds from the event will support ARTS/Boston, the nonprofit arts service organization which works with 172 area performing arts organizations and museums to build audiences and income for the arts.

From 8 p.m. to midnight Faneuil Hall Marketplace will be transformed into a "garden of earthly delights" with hundreds of fresh plants and a sensational display of roses. Adding to the ambiance will also be five special neon installations from Alejandro and Nora Sina.

Over 35,000 invitations have been sent throughout Greater Boston to the $50 per person affair, making this one of the largest fund-raising events ever.

Included in the ticket price is a 170-foot grand buffet throughout the Food Hall titled A Taste of the Marketplace. Foods will range from hors d'oeuvres to pastries prepared by many of the Marketplace merchants and surrounding restaurants.

The Count Basie Orchestra provides music for dancing under the stars while three stages of entertainment present some of the best performing artists in Boston.

Studio Red Top and Mae Arnett Quartet play jazz in the Alexander Parris Room, while on a second stage dance performances will be given by the Boston Ballet, Performing Arts Ensemble, Impulse Dance Company and the Beverly Richards Dancers.

A third stage will host Improv-Boston, Wild Rose, The Odyssey Mime Theatre and The Publick Theatre. Guest emcees will be Frank Avruch (WCVB-TV), Ron Della Chiesa (WGBH-FM) and Uma Pemmaraju (WLVI-TV) and Joanna DiRusso (Neighborhood Network News).

What To Visit

Newport Jazz Festival returns

David Sanborn, George Howard, Stanley Jordan, Natalie Cole, Michael Franks and John Scofield appear at the 1986 JVC Jazz Festival Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 23 and 24 at Fort Adams State Park in Newport, R.I., 11:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Also on the bill are veterans Miles Davis and Gerry Mulligan along with fusion pioneers Wayne Shorter and Al DiMeola.

David Sanborn has come into his own as an internationally recognized solo performer and composer. He began playing in the Paul Butterfield Blues Band, then went on to work with Stevie Wonder, James Taylor, David Bowie and Bruce Springsteen, to name a few.

The critically acclaimed live album Straight To The Heart captures Sanborn's his richly textured sound and melodic nuance. Sanborn headlines the JVC Jazz Festival in Newport on Sunday.

George Howard is the new promoter of the soprano saxophone, following in the footsteps of John Coltrane and Wayne Shorter. His expertise has led him to play with Grover Washington, Jr. and on to a stunning solo career with four albums and the chart-topping hits Dancing In The Sun and Love Will Follow. George Howard will take the Newport stage Sunday also.

Stanley Jordan brings ambitious guitar experiments to the Newport Festival Saturday. His revolutionary two-handed tapping technique incorporates a pianistic approach on the guitar fretboard to create dense orchestral textures that have, until this point, only been possible on a keyboard. This will be a solo performance.

Natalie Cole is back with a fresh new musical direction. She is a performer and artist in her own right, apart from the fame of her father, Nat King Cole. She performs Sunday.

Drawing from his "subterranean river of inspiration," songwriter/performer Michael Franks continues to explore original avenues of expression. A state-of-the-art performance will be in store when Franks appears Saturday with his combination of modern musical technology and timeless musical aspects.

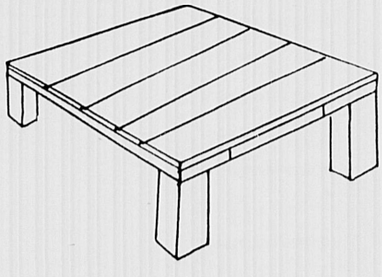

From top: Fort Adams State Park is a pleasant setting for outdoor jazz performances. Jerry Mulligan performs Aug. 23.

The JVC Jazz Festival is a Newport Jazz Festival produced by George Wein. JVC, the Festival's sponsor, is one of the world's largest manufacturers of high quality audio and video products.

Tickets for the JVC Jazz Festival in Newport are all general admission for lawn seating and are on sale now at all Ticketron outlets. They may be charged by phone to a major credit card by calling Concertix at 876-7777 in Boston, or Teletron (800) 382-8080 outside Massachusetts. Instant Polaroid help

Photographer's Magazine

Instant photographs delight the photographer and the photographed (unless the subject is a tree, of course); Polaroids seem to capture the moment and the image magically. Thirty-seven years ago, instant photography achieved quick success with shutterbugs, and it has become a medium everyone from amateur to artist can enjoy.

Today's enthusiasts can increase their enjoyment of instant images by joining the Polaroid Photography Club. Members receive discount on film, developing, copies, enlargements and photo accessories; access to a toll-free hot line for questions and problems, and Instants, a quarterly magazine devoted entirely to helping Polaroid buffs improve their picture-taking skills.

Each issue of the 36-page magazine offers travel articles, profiles of famous photographers, a photo contest and tips on how to take better pix. Printed in glossy, gorgeous color to display the advantages of using Polaroid film, the publication has a professional, well-proportioned look and covers its subject thoroughly and beautifully.

If you're a fan of the instant picture—or if you want to become involved in instant photography—pick up this freebie and start shooting.

What About Art?

By Meredith Fife Day

The windows and gondolas of Venice provide a point of departure for Sandra Kautz's Venetian Series, Works On Paper.

Kautz looks at Venice

Sandra Kautz draws inspiration from familiar Venetian motifs in the work she exhibits at Boston University's Geroge Sherman Union Gallery through Aug. 29.

The graceful curves of gondolas and ornate windows take on festive airs in most of Kautz's mixed media works. Lines escape from contained shapes, leaving color, energy and exuberance in their paths.

White outlined gondola-like shapes surround a central larger similar shape with blacks and yellows and purples pushing against the metallic gold ground in Unleashed/Untiled.

In her works, Kautz combines complementary wet and dry mediums of pastels, oil stick and her own mixture of metallic powders in oil and wax.

The lively and colorful surfaces that result are at their best in two works entitled Histories Of The Lagoon I and II.

Here, the golds shimmer, reds glow and whites crackle with life that is sometimes muffled by the profusion of surface activity of some other works in the exhibition.

Repetition of shapes, with some variation, sets up visual rhythm that is ordered without being rigid.

In some works, that rhythm is lost as shapes veer in unrelated directions and are interrupted and crossed by confusing lines and textures which stop and start at random.

Even when Kautz's works do not gel into completely unified wholes, and spatial concept gives way to surface bravado, there are buoyant moments of color and movement and a sense of exhiliration in the making of these pictures.

Kautz lives in Cambridge and received her education at the Silvermine Guild of Artists, New Canaan, Conn., Pennsylvania State University, and Tyler School of Art of Temple University.

This is her first solo exhibit.

The George Sherman Union Gallery, at 775 Commonwealth Ave., is open weekdays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday noon to 5 p.m. Call 353-9425.

Mass. Fellowship winners

The exhibition of recipients of 1986 Massachusetts Artists Fellowships continues through Aug. 22 at the Federal Reserve Bank Gallery at 600 Atlantic Ave., Boston.

The 33 artists in the exhibition were chosen by panels of artists and arts professionals from nearly 3000 applicants.

Each winner receives $7,500 and the opportunity to exhibit their work in the highly regarded annual exhibition.

For the first time in its 13-year history, the Fellowship Program exhibits the eight categories of recipients together. In previous years the works of fellowship winners were shown along with those of finalists in exhibitions of the separate categories.

The only disappointment of combining all categories into the one exhibit is that the fellowship finalists, who each receive $500, are not included in the show. The quality, vitality and ambition of their work usually rank on a level equal to the winners.

Nevertheless, this year's exhibition is varied and exciting. The range of media and concept give a view of the breadth and depth of endeavors in the visual arts throughout the state.

Fellowship recipients in the respective categories are:

Artists Books — Bonnie Donohue, Cambridge.

Interarts — E. Vincent Grabill, Concord in collaboration with Paula Josa-Jones, Carlisle; and Ralph Paquin in collaboration with Ann Stoddard, both of Dartmouth.

What To Do

Recruiters from many of Greater Boston's business firms will be at The Job Connection at Quincy Market, June 10, to interview candidates for hundreds of secretarial and office job openings.

Job Connection draws job-seekers

By Diane Broncaccio

Faneuil Hall Marketplace has another big attraction, but this time, it's not a new restaurant or a fancy boutique. It's The Job Connection, a job fair where job-hunters with secretarial and clerical skills can casually meet representatives of 40 to 50 big companies that are looking for office workers.

The next Job Connnection fair at Faneuil Hall Marketplace takes place Sept. 9, 11 a.m. - 7 p.m., in the Quincy Market rotunda.

Because past job fairs have been so successful, Job Connection is scheduling several more job fairs in suburban locations.

Job fairs, also open 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., will be held Sept. 8 at the Ramada Inn, Woburn, and at the Crown Plaza in Natick. The Holiday Inn, Dedham, is also the site of a Sept. 9 Job Connection job fair.

Since the first Job Connection, in March, 1985, well over a 1,000 job-seekers have been hired by more than 120 area companies during the past seven job fairs.

"The Job Connection," says Clark Willmott, Job Connection president, "was born of the belief that the process of finding employment is not fun. For the typical applicant, it is one in which there is a lot of discouragement and inefficiency. And so, the idea is that if, on a given day, you put 40 to 50 companies in one location and say to the applicant, 'all you have to do is show up if you're looking for these kind of jobs,' then it just opens the doors. It makes the process a lot less cumbersome for both the employers and the applicants."

Here's how the program — the first of its kind for office personnel — works: interested companies set up booths at the job fair and pay an entrance fee of $2000 to $2500. When interested job-hunters sign in, they are given program guides that describe the firms and the positions they have available. Job-seekers may then spend from 15 minutes to several hours briefly meeting company representatives and passing out their resumes.

At the end of the fair, companies are given a complete set of resumes of all the consenting attendees, and they are free to hire as many people as they want with no contingency fees or time limits.

Sandwiches and soft drinks are provided, which even makes lunch-hour job-hunting more convenient to downtown Boston secretaries.

Helen Basilesco of Somerville found her present job, as a part-time senior secretary at M.I.T., through a Job Connection last April. Although already employed fulltime as a senior secretary, Basilesco wanted a good, flexible position to enable her to go back to graduate school.

"I thought people at the Job Connection were very helpful," she said. It's better than the want ads, because I can ask questions and learn about the companies at the same time I'm looking."

Another Job Connection attendee, Janet Tosi, was hired by Hill Holliday Connors Cosmopoulos, Inc., Advertising for her present administrative assistant position two months after meeting Hill Holliday people at the job fair.

"A company may get anywhere from six to 100 excellent people in one day," she explained, "but they may not have openings for them right away. What I found with Hill Holliday was that as soon as there was a position open in which they could utilize my skills, they called. They also had a number of other positions that they were interested in having me apply for. In other words, they thought I was good and they were going to get me in here no matter what department it was going to be in."

Participating companies also feel that the program is a bargain.

"For employers," Job Connection's Willmott explained, "the cost of finding people has gone up very dramatically. Typically, if you hired anybody through an employment agency at a salary of $20,000, the employer would be charged $4000. That's expensive. What the Job Connection affords is an opportunity, at the cost of $2000 to $2500 per fair, for companies to hire as many people as they can. One company, John Hancock, hired 27 people at one fair — so that dramatically reduces the cost per hire."

Susan Boulay, human resources representative for The Boston Company, said that her firm has hired well over 100 persons through the Job Connection.

"Most people have resumes," Boulay said. "They come prepared, they are aware of the positions that are available, so they really come with a mindset. This is not 'gee, what am I here for, gee, what's available' — that type of thing.

"What I try to do is quickly identify people whose skills are strong for certain positions that I have open. So, it gives me an opportunity to meet that person head-on."

Boulet, who, incidentally, found her present position while networking through a Job Connection, feels the program is a bargain for everyone concerned.

Who goes there?

Approximately 90 companies are expected to participate in the four Job Connection fairs held Sept. 8 and 9.

PRICE IT RIGHT

Human nature is predictable and there is a better than even chance that you'll put the wrong selling price on your home if you set the price on the property yourself.

You may price it far above its fair market value because of sentimental attachment, expenditures you have made, or heeding a well-meaning friend's advice. A home remaining on the market for months due to over pricing frequently becomes a White Elephant, it eventually sells for a much lower figure than it would have brought originally, had it been priced realistically.

On the other hand, you might under-price it because of your unfamiliarity with the local market. That would be financial folly. Your safest bet is to list your home with a realtor who will help you price it correctly from the start and sell it for the highest and best price with the least amount of inconvenience to you and your family.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

LEVERAGE

One of the best reasons to borrow as much as possible is that a better home can be purchased. The principle of "leverage" allows one to get the most house from a down payment. Leverage allows one to buy something with a small amount of cash by borrowing a large amount of money, for example, if one can by a $200,000 home using only $40,000 of one's own money as a down payment, the leverage factor is four to one. That is, for every dollar that is put down, four can be borrowed. Leverage is a principle that can provide for the enjoyment of life (in a larger home). It also allows one the opportunity to realize great profits on a well-considered home purchase, while risking only a percentage of one's own money.

Audi Remanufactured Parts.
Built Like New.
Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit — alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts — is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.

Town to tax all at equalized rate

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Residences and business properties will again be taxed at level rates this year, selectmen decided Monday night.

The board rejected the recommendation of assessors and former selectman Mike Saraco, voting 4-1 to assess taxes for all property at 100 percent of their new valuations. Frank Sopper cast the dissenting vote.

The three-man board of assessors unanimously recommended taxing business and industrial property at 115 percent of its current valuation. Charging different tax rates for different kinds of property is called "tax classification."

The effect of the assessors' recommendation would have been to increase the new tax rate from $13.30 per $1,000 valuation to $15.34 per $1,000 for commerical, industrial and personal property.

Residential rates, meanwhile, would have fallen from $13.30 per $1,000 valuation to $13.16.

The new tax rate has not been adopted by selectmen, however, and property owners should check their new valuations, recently approved by the state, to determine the amount upon which their taxes will be calculated.

Assessors have valued the entire town at $1,549,408,100 for fiscal 1987, which began July 1. Winchester's 1986 "in-house" revaluation by assessors was the first to be approved by the state department of revenue.

Tuesday, selectmen continued a public hearing about tax classification they began two weeks earlier.

Saraco was the main speaker in support of charing business property owners more.

Looking at others in the crowd, Saraco said the chamber of commerce appeared well-represented.

"I've always supported the chamber, but I realize it's the duty of the chamber to oppose tax classification," Saraco said.

Saraco argued that homeowners, particularly those on fixed incomes of whatever amount, can not absorb tax increases as easily as businesses.

Owners of commercial property can absorb tax hikes either by viewing them as increases in operating costs "or writing it off as a business loss," Saraco said.

"The residential homeowner can't write it off," he said.

Recalling 1985, when the town abandoned a three-year experiment with tax classification, Saraco asked if the savings to commercial property owners were passed on to tenants or buyers. He said they were not.

Saraco said more than $15 million of Winchester's $21 million in personal property valuation is owned by utilities.

"Cable TV is $1.125 million," Saraco declared. He criticized the company for charging $3 per month for remote control boxes, against the wishes of selectmen and the cable TV advisory committee.

"If they can increase the rental of the remote boxes, they'll find a way to pay increased taxes (under classification)," Saraco said.

Saraco also said other utilities did not lower their bill to consumers when tax classification was dropped in 1985.

He had special criticism for Boston Edison, noting the company paid $224,967 in taxes in fiscal 1981 and only $209,162 in fiscal 1985.

Saraco cited other towns which have adopted tax classification, including Concord, Andover, Bedford, Lexington and Westwood, among others.

"I urge the board to give homeowners a little tax relief. That's all they're going to get," he said.

"If you don't adopt classification, it's not the little shopkeepers who will gain. Only a small percentage of the

First-graders to be test case for new report card

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

First graders and special needs students townwide will be bringing home brand new report cards to their parents this fall.

After brief discussion, school committee members voted unanimously Tuesday night to revamp the grading system for first graders.

At the committee's last meeting in June, the proposal to change the grading system townwide for all primary grades was rejected after lengthy and intense debate.

Last June, pro tem chairman Michael Ronayne and member Edward F. O'Connell voted against changing the grading system for all primary grades. Member Donna Brandt Landry proposed that night a recommendation to field test the new system townwide with only first graders. Her proposal died on the table as a two-thirds vote was required.

In June, Ronayne called the new system, "arbitrary and difficult to understand." Tuesday night Ronayne had no comment and voted in favor of field testing the system with first graders and special needs students.

O'Connell said, "I am prepared to support the recommendation largely to give it an opportunity to fly or fall on its face. I have a little bit of reservation whether all teachers are enthusiastic about it. I see it as quite a task. What starts out as a passion may become an obligation and then a burden."

> The new system would require teachers to evaluate students much more extensively.

The new system, as outlined by primary report card task force chairman Joanne Martignette in June, would require teachers to evaluate students much more extensively.

The new system works on a N, G, O scale rather than the current A, B, C scale. "N" stands for needs improvement, "G" for performing at the expected level of a majority of Winchester students and "O" for outstanding performance.

At the committee's June meeting, Martignette said there will be an extensive breakdown of subjects. A student will no longer be given a B for his achievements in language skills.

The language curriculum will be broken into 16 different parts, a total of 72 different "subjects."

The board will expect a report next May from the administration on the progress and success of the new grading system.

In other action, the committee skipped one item on Tuesday evening's agenda.

Election of a permanent chairman was again postponed due to the late arrival of member William Dervey. Jervey arrived 10 minutes after the meeting began. Ronayne chose not to return to the agenda item.

The school system received a grant from the Massachusetts Board of Education for $69,770 to fund the new K-1 readiness program. Superintendent Charles Mitsakos received the news earlier that afternoon.

Because the money was allocated in this year's budget, Mitsakos asked the board to approve hiring a new elementary school instructional aide.

New community arts idea wins selectmen's approval

A new "community arts program" under the aegis of the Winchester recreation department got the go-ahead from selectmen Monday night.

Recreation director Ken Cereghino told selectmen the program will raise its own funds, starting with an auction of goods and services Oct. 18, during the October Arts Festival planned in conjunction with the library.

If the goal of $15,000 is met, Ellen Knight, coordinator of community arts programs, plans an ambitious schedule.

It would include the summer concerts at Mill Pond Park, a summer theater program, summer arts classes for elementary-age children, a Falls Arts Festival with an auction, concert and community dance, and a winter concert series in February.

Also included would be field trips and lectures, occasional arts lectures in town and publications about local arts.

Selectmen noted that contributions to the recreation department are not tax deductible. They encouraged Cereghino to work with a local service organization for a "flow-through" program that could make them tax deductible.

Questioned carefully by selectman Wade Welch, Cereghino said the community arts program would not require any additional staff.

Welch said he had heard the same story before.

Cereghino repeated that no additional staff would be necessary but cautioned "where that ends up two or three years from now, I don't know."

Welch grinned.

Selectman Judie Muggia, however, said new programs often attract many people. Such crowds demonstrate that the need really did exist, she said.

Selectman Bob Deering wondered if expanded programs already in existence which, he said, apparently were not properly staffed this summer. Deering said he based his comments on phone calls he has received.

Two conditions were agreed before selectmen gave a unanimous go-ahead to the project: all gifts must be accepted through the selectmen and no money can be spent until it is raised.

In other business, selectmen:

- Issued a license for the Winchester High School Friends of the Band for the chuck wagon at home football games.
- Approved a Sept. 6 block party at the end of Maxwell Road at Lloyd Street, as requested by Richard Malmquist and Catherine G. West.
- Issued a permit for the third annual Labor Day fireworks display at the Winchester Boat Club.
- Approved an agreement between the town and the state for a Wedge Pond diagnostic/feasibility study under the Clean Lakes and Great Ponds program. Funding of the $80,000 study is 70 percent from the state and 30 percent from the town.
- Decided to follow the regular hearing process for a gas main across Skillings Road to the Jenks Senior Center, where a major expansion is underway. Since the area is not going to be repaved in the current project, selectmen saw no need to bypass the regular hearing process.
- Accepted the resignation of Ralph Johnson from the Wildwood Cemetery advisory committee. Johnson was recently appointed to the finance committee. Selectmen Wade Welch said Johnson had done "a tremendous job" on the cemetery board.
- Learned of new appointments by town manager Chad Maurer: Margaret J. Walsh and Donna M. Puma as school crossing guards, Gerard J. Smith as public safety

Hospital explains $3.2 million project

Almost anything in the maternity department takes nine months.

Plans for a $3.2 million renovation of the Winchester Hospital maternity department, scheduled to begin in January and last nine months, were presented to selectmen Monday night.

Hospital officials said the project will respond positively to the demands of expectant mothers for modern care. The project will fall into three areas, including renovation of the labor and delivery area, the nursery, and the post-partum mothers' beds area.

Mothers' rooms will be modernized and made more like hotel rooms than hospital rooms while labor and delivery, formerly two separate areas, will be combined.

With the exception of a 2,000-square foot addition on an existing rooftop, all of the renovations will take place within the walls of the present structure.

There will be no outward change in the hospital building, except perhaps some new windows. All of the work will also be on the second floor.

Charlie Briwa, speaking for the hospital administration, said his negotiations with neighbors to reach a "statement of understanding" are nearly complete.

The architect will retain an "audio consultant" to monitor construction noise. The agreement will also cover the construction period, traffic concerns, parking for construction workers, cranes and dumpsters, Briwa said.

Blocked streets will be kept to a minimum, he added.

Other plans of the hospital include a $200,000 renovation of the coffee shop and gift shop, to begin sometime after Jan. 1, and $80,000 replacement of the boiler, which will require use of a crane.

Some annual projects also have some impact on the neighborhood, Briwa said. They include testing a fire pump, which results in street flooding, and sweeping and striping the parking lot.

Selectman Frank Sopper, following up an earlier request of his, asked if the town would send its own representative to "keep a close eye" on the construction project.

Several weeks ago, Sopper said the town should monitor all construction projects more closely.

Selectmen agreed to make Sopper's request an item on the agenda for a future meeting.

Waste-to-energy plant to explain operations and cost hike causes

By GEORGE DERRINGER

What happens to Winchester's trash after it goes to the transfer station off Swanton Street?

And why does it cost so much a special town meeting will be needed to appropriate more money?

Residents of Winchester and 21 other communities served by the North East Solid Waste Committee (NESWC) trash-to-energy facility in North Andover can find answers during an open house at the plant.

The facility will be open for inspection from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 7, with formal dedication of the $210 million plant scheduled at 1 p.m.

Visitors can find the plant by taking I-93 north to the Route 125 exit, driving through North Andover on Route 125 and turning left at the "Signal-Resco" sign just before the AT&T building.

Each day, the plant burns about 1,500 tons of trash above a natural gas flame. Electricity produced by the fire is sold to New England Power for the price it would have cost the utility to produce the same power by burning oil.

Each town, however, may pay its own cost of transporting trash to North Andover and pay a "tipping fee" once there for the privilege of unloading.

Winchester delivers about 13,500 tons of trash yearly to the huge installation, although the town will produce about 14,300 tons this year if the current pace continues.

The price for disposal of the trash compacted at Swanton Street will rise dramatically this year, however, and a special town meeting has been called Thursday, Sept. 18.

The town currently pays a tipping fee of $32 per ton. Soon the fee will be $48, thanks in part to the diminished price of oil.

In addition, transportation costs will rise from $11 to $26 per ton, even using the lowest bidder, BFI Inc.

For fiscal 1987, which began July 1, Winchester has budgeted $418,969 too little, according to the estimate of Dom Serratore, town public works director.

Sally Kincaid, Winchester's representative to NESWC, said residents should "take advantage of the Sept. 7 opportunity to see a modern waste-to-energy operation."

Further details are available from the town manager's office or from Kincaid, who may be reached at 729-6444.

Town meeting to deal with trash Sept. 18

Town meeting members will gather at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 18, to decide how to handle ballooning trash disposal costs.

Without dissent or lengthy discussion, selectmen voted Tuesday to call the meeting in time to purchase trailers to haul trash from the town transfer station to the disposal facility in North Andover, if town meeting so wishes.

Town manager Chad Maurer said the special town meeting is necessary because both components in the town's trash disposal budget will have a shortfall without new appropriations.

Estimated "tipping fees" at North Andover will be $48 per ton, up from an estimated $32 provided in the budget.

In addition, the estimated hauling costs of $11 per ton will rise to $26, even using the low bidder, Maurer said.

Higher tipping fees are needed by the North East Solid Waste Committee, which oversees the waste-to-energy plant for 22 towns, primarily because the electricity produced is worth less than originally estimated.

Maurer said the plant planned to sell its electricity to New England Power for 7.05 cents per kilowatt hour but the depressed price of oil, to which the waste-to-energy price is tied, has caused the price to fall to only three cents per kilowatt hour.

Town meeting members will have several options. They can simply appropriate around $418,000 more to cover increased costs without making any change in the present operation.

The town might also buy five new or used trailers and contract with a trucker to haul them to

Markey offers fall internships

Congressman Edward J. Markey is recruiting local college students to participate in his fall volunteer Congressional Internship Program. Markey has a limited number of internships available in his Boston office.

"A congressional internship provides students with an inside look at the legislative process," Markey says, "It is an invaluable experience and I strongly encourage any interested students to contact my Boston office."

As a congressional intern, students will work with members of the staff to assist constituents with the problems they are experiencing with different federal agencies.

Those interested in the programs should contact Marie Carbone at 565-2900.

The Sub Station on Cross Street has filled their Jimmy fund can in less than two weeks. Winchester police distributed about 75 cans to local merchants in mid July. The Sub Station was the first business to fill their can and the only business to match any donations made. Safety officer Kevin Mawn, left, takes the store's first can. Elders warned of Medicaid discrimination practices

Secretary of Elder Affairs Richard H. Rowland has alerted elders and their families to be aware of the possibility of Medicaid discrimination when applying for nursing home placement.

Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti has announced the filing of consent judgments against several nursing homes. The homes were permanently enjoined from discriminating against Medicaid recipients in their admission practice and policies and agreed to pay fines and the costs of the investigation.

"Elders and their families need to know that, while Medicaid discrimination is against both federal and state law, it still happens. We need to recognize this type of discrimination when it is affecting us or our families," Rowland said.

The attorney generals office has prepared the following list of conduct which may be criminal under Massachusetts and federal laws, and other conduct which may give reason to suspect discrimination:

It is a criminal act for nursing homes to willfully charge, solicit, or receive from a Medicaid recipient's family any gift, money, donation, or other consideration as a precondition of admission to the nursing home.

It is a criminal act for a nursing home to require a Medicaid recipient or person eligible for Medicaid benefits to waive Medicaid benefits and pay the private rate to the home for a period of time before seeking Medicaid benefits as a precondition of admission

It is a criminal act to refuse or delay a person's admission to a nursing home solely because that person's care is to be paid for by the Medicaid program.

It is a criminal act to move or transfer a patient residing in a nursing home from one setting to another (i.e., from a private or semi-private room to a ward) solely because the person's source of payment has changed to Medicaid.

Winchester police offer safety tips to drivers

Children in Winchester return to school this week. Police chief John P. McHugh and safety officer Kevin P. Mawn have joined AAA Massachusetts in urging motorists to drive carefully.

"Many children in kindergarten and first grade will be coping with traffic on their own for the first time," said Mawn. "They may not be aware of pedestrian safety rules."

McHugh said, "Safe driving is a year-round responsibility, but it's even more important as schools open. Keep alert and always obey the posted speed limit, but especially in school zones. That will make it easier to come to a quick, safe stop if a child darts into your path."

Motorists should also be aware of school buses transporting children. The police department will watch for school bus violators.

As part of its annual "School's Open" safety campaign, AAA Massachusetts and Winchester police are distributing free bumper stickers.

For more information, call Mawn at 729-1212, ext. 318.

ROLLOVER AND FIXER-UPPER

I'm sure you are familiar with the rollover rule for deferring capital gains tax if you buy and move into a new home within two years after you sell your primary residence. Basically, you don't have to pay any gains tax at the time of the sale as long as the new home is equal to or more expensive than the old house.

Let's change the scenerio a bit. Say, you buy a fixer-upper a year before the sale of your present home with the intent to sell your primary residence and move into the renovated home. How much time would you have to get the job done and move in? The answer is three years from the time you buy the replacement home. The law states that you can defer paying gains tax as long as you move into your new house during a period lasting TWO years BEFORE and two years AFTER the sale. That actually gives you a four year time period to work on the new house if you purchased it even two years before the sale.

An artist's conception of the new headquarters of Geotechnical Engineers Inc. at 1021 Main St. in Winchester.

Local engineering company plans new, expanded offices

Geotechnical Engineers Inc., a Winchester-based consulting engineering firm, will lease 14,000 square feet in a new office building under construction at 1021 Main St.

The new space, adjacent to GEI's present corporate hedquarters at 1017 Main St., was acquired to accommodate the firm's rapidly growing staff.

Many of the current eighty staff members, including principals Ronald Hirschfeld, Daniel LaGatta, Steve Poulos, Gonzalo Castro and Richard Murdock, are Winchester residents.

GEI has also opened two branch offices since 1984, one in Concord, N.H. and another in Denver.

GEI was founded in 1970 as a specialty consulting firm, providing geotechnical services primarily to other civil engineering firms. It quickly evolved into a nationally recognized geotecnical and geohydrologic consulting organization whose services include dam design, earthquake engineering, building foundation design, construction consultation, groundwater protection and hazardous waste contamination evaluations. The firm also has complete rock and soil laboratory testing capabilities in Winchester.

GEI has completed a wide variety of projects (over 2,000 to date) for governmental agencies and private companies in the United States and abroad and has collaborated with many of the country's leading architectural and engineering firms. It has played a prominent role in the National Bureau of Reclamation's Dam Safety Program and has completed such prestigious building projects as Boston's Exchange Place for Olympia and York Developers.

Much of GEI's recent growth, however, has been fueled by demand for its environmental services, particularly from landowners, developers, and litigation attorneys for industrial companies. The demand is in part a result of new laws which make property owners responsible for the cost of cleaning up any contamination discovered on their property.

GEI developed extensive experience in groundwater studies on the many nuclear power station projects the firm completed in the 1970s. Since then, public concern over the vulnerability of groundwater to contamination has grown steadily.

GEI has become increasingly involved in groundwater quality assessments and subsurface contamination studies for both municipalities and private interests. As part of the comprehensive package of services GEI offers to clients involved in land use, acquisition and development, the company has added environmental site evaluations and risk assessments.

If contamination is discovered on a site, GEI can investigate the source and evaluate the extent of the problem and implement remedial measures. The firm is also currently providing litigation support services on environmental issues to many of the top law firms in Boston, representing a spectrum of public and private clients.

Three seek conservation appointment

Three candidates for the town conservation commission were interviewed by Winchester selectmen Monday night with more interviews scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 2.

Elaine Vreeland of 11 Clematis St., an assistant lobbyist with the Environmental Lobby of Massachusetts and an attorney, said she has used her legal skills in the area of environmental law.

"I could help with more technical problems, especially in acquiring easements," she said.

Vreeland has also applied for the newly created post of town conservation administrator. The position was created by the spring town meeting.

Walworth B. Williams of 15 Ledgewood Road, a resident since 1946, previously served on the conservation commission for more than 18 months and worked on creation of the town's open space and recreation plan.

"I've seen Rockingham County (N.H.) grow helter-skelter," he said. "Winchester is a lovely town and we want to keep it that way."

Williams said his re-appointment would serve the town better than that of a new person, who would need time to learn the details of the job.

Roger Wilson of 81 Irving St., now a magazine marketing planning and operations manager, was previously employed by the Conservation Society of Southern Vermont.

"I feel the next few years will be critical for Winchester," he said. "The economic pressure is severe."

Wilson said it is important for the town "to act conservatively" in environmental matters.

Sopper says newspapers misrepresented his vote on rental for 'Spenser'

Two newspapers which cover Winchester affairs were criticized Monday by selectman Frank Sopper at the conclusion of a selectmen's meeting.

Using what he called a "point of personal privilege," Sopper said he realized he would be subject to criticism after his election in March.

He said he must respond, however, to "untruths, misquotes and wrong information."

Specifically, Sopper objected to articles in The Star and the Woburn Times about his vote Aug. 11 to charge the producers of the TV show "Spenser: For Hire" $1,000 per day to use town facilities.

He also objected to a letter to the editor in last week's Star from police officer Eric Benson. "Every statement there was untrue," Sopper said of the letter.

Sopper said he would show a videotape of the Aug. 11 meeting "to clarify and correct the record."

The Times, Sopper said, wrote a headline saying selectmen increased the rent for town hall "1,000 percent."

The Star's "insert" in a story read "Rent for the town hall auditorium will be 10 times higher than usual."

Sopper refuted both statements, saying the increase from $100 per day to $1,000 per day was meant to cover not only the town hall auditorium but also parking spaces behind the town hall, behind the public safety building and on streets.

Denying several statements by Benson, including one that Sopper and Lombardi "argued with police," Sopper said Benson was paid $277.50 for his services during the TV program's visit and, as a non-resident, wasn't qualified to criticize. "He benefited from" the show, Sopper said.

Sopper put a copy of The Star, opened to Benson's letter, in the wastebasket "where it belongs."

Just before the videotape was shown, selectman Bob Deering excused himself. He said he "objects to videos" and has expressed the same view during previous meetings of selectmen.

Most of the tape was shown in "fast forward" but Sopper stopped to show himself saying the $1,000 fee would include more than the town hall auditorium's rent.

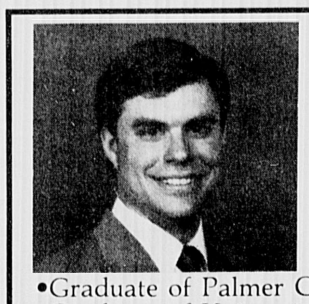

(Within The Star's story Aug. 11, one paragraph stated: "Frank Sopper joined Lombardi in an effort to raise auditorium rent. They said the crew's use of town parking lots should also be figured into the rent.")

The Times' Winchester editor, Chris Connelly, had left Monday's meeting before Sopper's comments began. The Star's editor, George Derringer, remained.

After showing part of the tape, Sopper asked Derringer, "Did you hear that, George?" Derringer gathered his papers and stood up.

"Good night, George," Sopper said.

"Good night, Frank," the Star editor said as he walked out.

Bartlett School to open for 54th year

The Bartlett School on 40 Samoset Road in Winchester will begin its 54th year Monday, Sept. 8, following an open house Sept. 2-4.

Bartlett School was opened in 1933 by the mother of the present director and was located for many years on Bartlett Avenue in Arlington. The school moved to Winchester in 1977 and added classes for grades seven and eight.

The school now has classes for students four years old through eighth grade.

Director Norine Casey hold a bachelor's degree from Wellesley College and a master's degree in teaching from Radcliffe College. All other staff members hold bachelor's degrees and many hold master's degrees, Casey said.

School inquiries are welcome any time, not just during the open house, she added.

Community open gym to resume program Sept. 15

The Winchester Community Use of Schools Open Gym program will begin its 14th season Monday evening, Sept. 15.

As usual, the gym will be open Monday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m. for adults only, 18 years and older. The program is open to all residents who want to keep fit, to exercise for health and enjoyment, to meet new townspeople, to get more use from tax dollars or simply to enjoy themselves.

The admission fee is $1 for Winchester residents with positive identification and $2 for non-residents.

The weekend schedule will go into effect Saturday, Dec. 6. From that date they gym will be open Saturdays and Sundays from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. in addition to the Monday and Thursday evening schedule.

During the weekends the program is open to students in the seventh grade and up, including adults. Families are also invited to use the gym, but youngsters below the seventh grade must be accompanied by an adult. The fee is $1 for non-adults.

The program offers many features but the main game is basketball. No courts are reserved, and all games are on a first-come, first-play basis.

A volleyball group meets regularly on Monday evenings and welcomes new faces. In addition, there is a weight room for those familiar with the sport.

The program also offers paddle ball and provides paddles, but players must bring their own paddle ball or tennis ball.

Winter joggers often use the gym when weather conditions prohibit outdoor running. Eleven and one-half laps equal one mile.

No locker rooms, showers or telephones are available, so participants should come dressed appropriately and make transportation arrangements before arrival at the gym. During school vacations the gym will be open its regularly scheduled hours only. If school is cancelled due to inclement weather or any other reason, the gym is also closed.

The only entrance to the gym will be from the Nelson Street area, where parking is provided in the rear lot.

Many residents say they appreciate being able to use the gym and they enjoy seeing a town building being fully utilized.

"We look forward to another successful year of providing a necessary service to the residents of Winchester," said spokesman Mike Marino.

Winchester women finish triathlon, to take Hawaii

By DAVID MOORE

This fall, three Winchester women will celebrate their accomplishments in New Hampshire with a trip to Hawaii.

Sunday, Aug. 17, Roseann Innes, Patty Lavin, Noreen Arcari and Ann Howell completed a triathlon in the hilly region around Peterborough, N. H.

If things work out as the four Winchester women have planned, they'll celebrate their triumph in Hawaii this fall.

The idea to compete in a triathlon came two years ago as an incentive to help Innes recover from a back problem and to keep the rest of them in shape.

"What we really wanted to do was stay fit," says Howell. "We thought training to compete in an actual triathlon would would spur us on. Somewhere along the way someone said, 'Hey, if we really do it why don't we reward ourselves with a little trip to Hawaii. We can watch the Ironman Contest?'

"Well, we did it and we're planning the trip right now."

Innes, a teacher at Winchester High School, will not join them.

The Ironman Contest is among the most grueling, competitive triathlons in the world. It consists of a 2.4-mile swim, a 112-mile bicycle ride and a 26.2-mile marathon.

Ironman contestants are a lean, sinewy lot with fanatical devotion to fitness and incomprehensible endurance. Howell and her friends seem happy to be spectators.

"Peterborough was our first triathlon, except for Patty. She's done several before," explains Howell. "I'm really not sure we'll do another one. We probably don't need to."

Peterborough is a scaled down version of Ironman and consists of a ¼-mile swim, an 18-mile bicycle ride and a four-mile run.

The women trained individually, each according to her needs.

Arcari, who along with Howell had to learn how to swim for the triathlon, swam several times weekly in addition to daily running.

"It was very difficult for me to get into the water and swim for 35 minutes," she says. "I let people go ahead of me so I wouldn't be kicked in the face.

"Ten minutes before the swim, people were out in the pond trying to catch a big snapping turtle," laughs Arcari.

Innes, coach of the Winchester High School girls' tennis team, swam a mile each day before and after the tennis season. With some encouragement from her family, she took up riding and biking, as well.

"I'm not a natural runner," says Innes. "I'm going to to enter a 10-kilometer race in Bedford Glen with my husband and son, but after that I'm through.

"It was fun having a goal to work for and the race was easier than I thought it would be."

Oliver wins research grant

Noelynn A. Oliver, Ph.D., of Winchester was recently selected to receive a cancer research grant from the American Cancer Society's Massachusetts Division, according to Dr. David S. Rosenthal, division president.

The grant is part of $411,500 awarded to cancer researchers by the Massachusetts Division for 1986.

Oliver, an assistant professor at Tufts University School of Medicine, will receive $25,000 for her research into the way cells produce fibronectin, a protein that helps cells adhere to one another. When a normal cell becomes cancerous the amount of fibronectin in a cell decreases greatly, which may make it easier for the cancer to spread.

"The Massachusetts Division of the American Cancer Society is committed to funding imaginative projects and young scientists to gain new insights about cancer," Rosenthal said.

Oliver teaches anatomy and cell biology, and holds degrees from Stanford University in California and Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y. She has performed research at several institutions, including the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research in Cambridge.

Colonial Travel Can Customize A Vacation To Fit Your Wants And Needs.

Whether your vacation takes you across the state, across the country, or around the world, whether your needs are more toward the economy vacation, or money is no object, or whether you prefer the excitement of the fast lane or serenity of seclusion, Colonial Travel, located at 564 Main st., Winchester, can customize a vacation to fit your wants and needs.

With more than 27 years of experience as travel agents between them, Colonial's co-owners Elaine Mahoney and Tony Sampson have tailored vacations for thousands of satisfied clients to all corners of the globe.

"What many people don't realize is travel agents don't charge a service charge," explains Elaine. "Our fee does not affect the price our client pays.

Instead, booking through a travel agent is not only easier, but it can also be cheaper. With access to plane fares, hotel rates, and car rental fees at their fingertips on computer, Tony and Elaine can assure you the best rates and can book a reservation simultaneously.

In addition to helping you get the best rates, Colonial can make your vacation more pleasant by meeting your needs with corresponding accommodations ranging from standard to deluxe or superior.

"Some people prefer to travel alone, while others want the security of a group," explains Elaine. "Some travelers want a more free schedule while others prefer a guided tour. In any case we will make the arrangements to fit their needs."

Some other benefits of booking through travel agents include their knowledge of special discounts, their awareness of the atmosphere, weather conditions and economic state of the place you are traveling to, and their ability to assist you in planning and getting ready for your vacation.

Tony and Elaine can assist you with passport needs, rate of exchange, and will make you aware of any other necessary information to make your trip easier and more enjoyable.

Has Colonial Travel seen any effects on European bookings as a result of the situation abroad?

"Bookings to Europe are down," explains Elaine, "but that has led to a noticeable increase in bookings to places like Hawaii, the Carribean, Bermuda, cruises, and U.S. destinations."

In any event people are vacationing and the smart ones are letting Colonial Travel find them the vacation they desire at the price they want to pay.

To have Colonial Travel arrange and fit your vacation to your needs, call Tony or Elaine at 729-4700 or visit their office at 564 Main st., Winchester. White Street residents ask street paving

White Street residents think the town has delayed long enough without paving their street.

John J. Murphy appeared before selectmen Monday to ask action from the board.

Speaking as precinct chairman, Murphy said the town promised to repave the street three years ago, after the street "put up with" a 25-ton dozer traveling the road during Swanton Street bridge construction.

"We were promised White Street would be paved when the bridge was done," Murphy recalled. It wasn't.

The following year, residents were told there wasn't enough money in the public works budget for the project but perhaps in the third year.

But last year, Murphy said, neighbors brought their concerns to selectmen privately and were asked not to bring up the issue at a meeting. But still the street was not paved.

"Today we were told the street project is not in the budget for the next three years," Murphy said.

Murphy said he had come as precinct chairman but other area residents would be willing to come to a selectmen's meeting if necessary.

"It's become a personal battle between the neighbors and the DPW (department of public works)," Murphy said.

Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, promised an answer within a week.

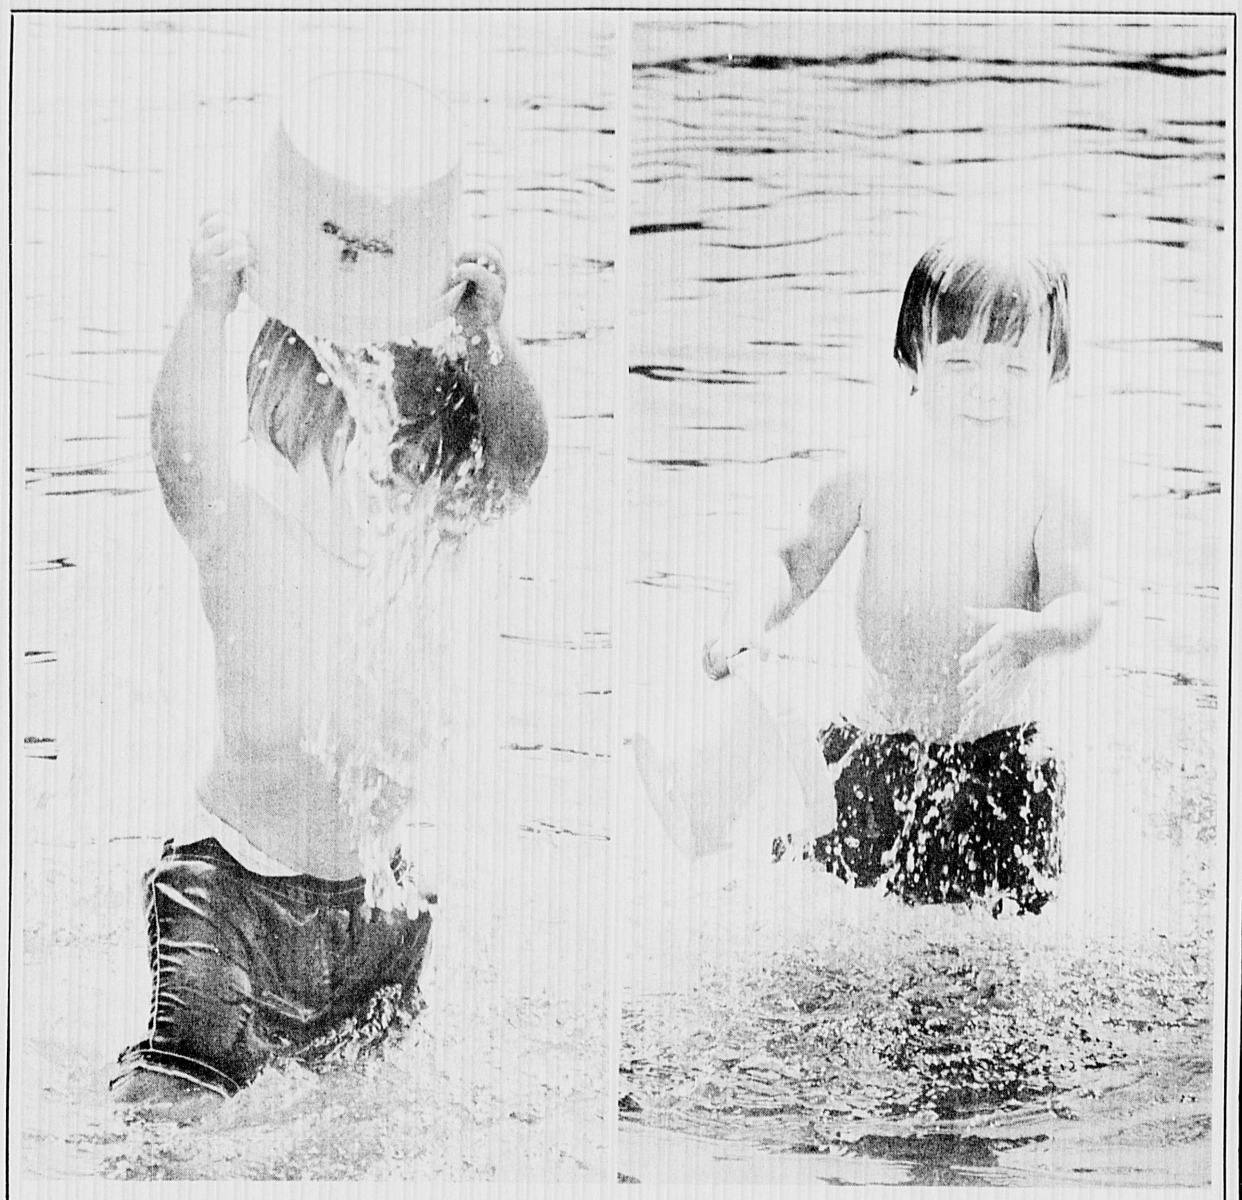

Chorale invites all area singers

All singers are invited to join the Chorale of the Philharmonic Society of Arlington for the 1986-87 season.

Rehearsals will begin at 7:45 p.m. Monday, Sept. 8, at St. Paul Lutheran Church, 929 Concord Turnpike, Arlington, and continue Mondays.

Continuing its long association with conductor John Bavicchi, the chorale will rehearse Beethoven's Mass in C Major, Schumann's Beim Abschied zu Singen, Mozart's Vesperae Solemnes de Confessore, and a newly commissioned work by Frank Warren, Gloria, for its December concert.

No auditions are required to join the society. For more information, call 648-8585.

State certifies town's updated assessments

The Winchester Board of Assessors announced the state-mandated updating of the town's assessments is completed and received preliminary certification from the Massachusetts Department of Revenue.

For the past year, the board analyzed the relationship between the current property assessments and the selling prices of real estate over the past two years. Based on this analysis, residential property values were adjusted by neighborhoods.

Commercial property values were adjusted on the basis of changes which have taken place since the last revaluation in market sales, rental income and replacement costs. Commercial properties and personal property values were adjusted by Real Estate Research Consultants, Inc., under contract with the Town of Winchester.

The new property values will form the basis for fiscal year 1987 tax bills which will be issued during the latter part of September.

Property owners who wish to examine the new property values may do so by visiting the Assessors' office during the week of Aug. 25.

After this disclosure period is completed, and the tax bills are issued, those who wish to appeal their new property value may do so by means of the usual abatement process.

During this disclosure week, the office will be open every day, including Wednesday from 8:30 am to 4:30 pm

Town meeting called Sept. 18 to discuss soaring trash costs

North Andover. Costs for hauling alone are estimated at $6 per ton, according to public works director Dom Serratore.

Bids for trailers will be opened Sept. 4 and are expected to be about $200,000.

A halfway measure would be to buy five trailers over the next five years. Costs of the trailers could rise in the interim, however, but even if they do not, the town will pay about $40,240 more in interest, Serratore estimates.

The current hauling contract expires Oct. 31.

The town could also face an additional problem of increased trash. If trash is produced at the current rate, Winchester will send 14,300 tons of trash to North Andover this year, about 800 tons more than planned.

Temple offers special needs program

Temples Emunah and Isaiah of Lexington will hold B'Yahad: A Community Special Needs Program. B'Yahad will be partially funded by the combined jewish philanthropies for the 1986-1987 school year.

The program provides a jewish education for any child whose needs cannot be met by his or her host synagogue.

B'Yahad stems from a cooperative venture begun in 1976. The reform and conservative congregations of Lexington recognized a need for a program to meet the needs of their learning disabled children. The program has experienced several changes and much growth since its inception.

Next fall begins the fifth year that the Lexington Special Needs Program will be open to the jewish community.

The B'Yahad class is staffed by a certified special needs teacher and two aides. The program is for students in the elementary grades up to the pre bar bat mitzvah level.

As of September, 1986, there will be two components to the B'Yahad program. Students will be enrolled in one of two classes. Class placement will be determined by the students' individual learning style and specific needs. An individualized educational plan will be prepared for each student in an effort to provide a supportive, positive learning experience.

A visit by the special needs coordinator for the purpose of discussing the B'Yahad program with parents, teachers and/or community members may be arranged. Inquiries should be addressed to Marcie Greenfield Simons coordinator of special needs program, Temple Emunah, 9 Piper Rd., Lexington 02173, 861-0303.

Saltmarsh says district will receive record state funding

An analysis of State budget allocations, including local aid and special programs indicates "a record high year in state aid for Winchester," according to State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh.

"Not only are the towns of this district scheduled to receive a total of more than $10 million in local aid, but we have built in a system guaranteeing state help in fiscal 1987 to allow communities to cope with anticipated cuts in federal programs," Saltmarsh said.

In the local aid category of the state budget, Winchester is scheduled to receive $3.7 million.

"These local aid items represent the largest single category of state aid for communities," Saltmarsh, a ranking member of the House Rules Committee, said.

With the prospect of cuts in federally funded local programs, Saltmarsh was one of the leaders in an effort to provide supplementary state funding to assist communities.

Governor Dukakis had proposed $49 million in pick-up funding. The Saltmarsh-backed amendment increased the local aid offset fund to $59 million.

Locally, Winchester will receive $84,643 in extra state aid.

Saltmarsh also pointed to fiscal 1987 "cherry sheet" increases over estimates originally sent to local communities in the spring.

Winchester's numbers reflect boosts in actual disbursements compared to original estimates. Aid to Elderly Persons was increased $11,339 to $30,838. Public Library Aid was set at $16,108, an increase of $5,757. And additional assistance climbed by $56,429 to a total of $1,444,969.

Saltmarsh said another major long term benefit to local communities came via legislation appropriating $353 million to fund the State Pension Reserves Investment Management and Trust Funds.

"This funding is critical in maintaining the fiscal soundness of the retirement system, and it will help every community, Saltmarsh said.

He also cited several specific funding items of benefit to the district.

Budget money was set aside for dredging and erosion control for the Aberjona River and Wedge Pond totalling $250,000.

M.D.C. patrols were approved for the Middlesex Fells during high fire-risk periods, a budget item worth $60,000.

Chapter 90 highway funds were set at $60,334 for Winchester.

The 1985 transportation bond issue is used for local road resurfacing projects and allocates $82,106 for Winchester.

The Massachusetts state scholarship program was increase to $75 million with a recipient pool of 52,000 students. Sharing in this legislatively increased growth were 197 students. Sharing in this legislatively increased growth were 197 from the Stoneham-Winchester district, with scholarships totalling $227,450.

"The scholarship aide program is one of the best investments the state makes," Saltmarsh said. "We are literally investing in the future leadership and growth of the Commonwealth."

A state supplemental appropriation for the Title III Older American Acts Program for fiscal 1987 designates $36,700 to the Mystic Valley Elder Services program providing both transportation and home-delivered meals to the elderly.

"I think the record high levels of state assistance to our communities, and to the cities and towns of the Commonwealth, reflects the legislature's desire to share its good financial situation with local government," Saltmarsh said.

"Our economy is strong; our tax revenues have been strong; and we did accumulate an ample surplus of state funds," he said. "Our decision was to share a great part of those funds, both through direct tax cuts to taxpayers and through increased aid to cities and towns.

"I believe the fiscal 1987 state budget and our actions on various tax-cutting proposals indicates a positive commitment to local taxpayers and local government," Saltmarsh said.

Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh attends the ceremony as Gov. Michael Dukakis signs the fiscal 1987 budget that will give Winchester and Stoneham record state funding.

Town promises to keep empty lot clean

Winchester selectmen promised to keep the town way behind 742-750 Main St. much cleaner in the future as a result of their meeting with Cosmo Pasciuto Monday night.

Notified in June that he had cleaned up and paved an area that is officially a town way, although no street was ever built there, Pasciuo attended Monday's meeting to negotiate with the board of selectmen.

Town counsel Doug Randall said Pasciuo must have permission for anything he does on the property since it is officially a town way. Randall admitted, however, the area "is in a much improved condition" now.

Selectmen need to decide if they wish to maintain the town way or to dispose of it, not necessarily to Pasciuto. But paving the area, though done without permission, "is not inconsistent with any use of the town way in the future," Randall said.

Pasciuto said he cleaned the town's area, which begins only three feet behind his building, just to get rid of junk, barrels filled with chemicals, discarded garage oil, and other debris. He used a bulldozer to clean the area and landscaped it. Railroad ties he installed are "to stop traffic" of dumpers, Pasciuto said.

He said the area is not used for parking, although a dumpster about 10 feet from his building is in the town way.

Selectman Mark Lombardi objected. He said a boat is parked in the area and a scull-maker works there. He noted that paving an area within 100 feet of a waterway requires permission from the town conservation commission as well, even if it is privately owned — which the town way is not.

"The underlying issue here was trash on town property," selectman Bob Deering said. "I'd be willing to let it go back to its original state, less the trash."

Pasciuo said he doesn't use the area for parking anyway but instead rents 12 spaces from the Lane Funeral Home.

"You want the area clean. The town could accommodate you," Deering offered. "The solution, if people are dumping there, is not conveying the property to Mr. Pasciuto."

Deering said the town should police its own property.

Selectman Judie Muggia said the department of public works and the conservation commission should be asked for opinions about how to light, police and mow ther area. A response should arrive within two weeks, she said.

Lombardi said he made the same request two weeks ago. He hinted he and selectman Frank Sopper might ask to show their "film" at a later meeting.

"He put railroad ties there so cars wouldn't roll into the river," Lombardi said.

"If we don't anything in two weeks, I'll ask Mr. Sopper if we can show the film," Lombardi said.

Pasciuto's suggestion that he buy or lease the land from the town met with little enthusiasm from selectmen, who hesitated to rent or lease town ways for much more than a block party.

"Sure, I'll buy the street in front of my house too," Lombardi said.

SELLING A FIXER-UPPER

Has your house seen better days? Does the toilet sound like the Fountain of Rome? Does plugging in your toaster save you a trip to the hairdresser's for a new perm? Have termites been picnicing on the support beams in your basement? If you're trying to sell this type of handyman's special, read any purchase offer very carefully before signing.

Most standard contract forms have clauses describing the condition in which you must convey your home at settlement. If you've accepted a price that reflects the "needs work" condition of your home, you might want to insist on selling it "as is," removing any clauses that require the appliances and mechanical systeems to be in working order. If your buyer brings in an offer calling for VA or FHA financing, be certain that the buyer will pay for any work required by these agencies as a condition of granting the loan.

If you're thinking of a move, call the professionals at Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Call us at 729-7000 or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester.

COMMENT

Winchester Kernels

The excitement of "Spenser" is over. Well, almost.

Several people called during the past week to tell us the show featuring Winchester in its new disguise as Cornwall, N.H., can't possibly be scheduled for airing Oct. 4. "That's a Saturday," the callers point out.

That's right, fans. But network executives, in their infinite wisdom, believe in shuffling the schedule regularly. In another month, unless the executives change their collective mind, "Spenser: For Hire" will become a weekly show Saturday nights.

And nothing in broadcasting is ever sure. In theory, you can see Winchester on TV Oct. 4. But if you don't, just keep watching.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Arts program expansion welcome

TO THE EDITOR:

This summer a delightful series of concerts by the Mill Pond gave pleasure to many townspeople. They were arranged by Ellen Knight of the recreation department and received funding from the Winchester Arts Lottery Council and the EnKa Society.

Ellen Knight has also contributed to the community by publishing the Culture Calendar, a monthly newsletter devoted to the arts in Winchester. She has brought together representatives of arts organizations in town for shared planning and communication and is currently organizing an Arts Festival scheduled for mid-October.

The recreation department's addition of arts programs to this schedule of activities is a welcome contribution to Winchester, which I hope will continue.

Sincerely,
Corie Nichols

BEACON HILL

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL
Volume 12-Report No. 34
Massachusetts House and Senate
August 22, 1986

The House and Senate. The House and Senate continue to meet in informal sessions during the summer recess.

This week, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" previews the eight ballot questions which will appear on the ballot in the November election and reviews local legislators' votes on the six which came to a roll call vote. The other two are non-binding advisory questions which were approved without roll call votes.

Question #1-Abortion- On April 30, House approved 102-51, Senate approved 21-18, a proposed constitutional amendment stating "no provision of the Constitution shall prevent the General Court from regulating or prohibiting abortion unless prohibited by the U.S. Constitution, nor shall any provision of the Constitution require public or private funding of abortion, or the provision of services or facilities therefor, beyond that required by the U.S. Constitution. The provisions of this article shall not apply to abortions required to prevent the death of the mother."

Supporters said the amendment will let Massachusetts join the federal government and the 36 states which do not use tax dollars to pay for elective abortion. They claimed abortion is murder and noted the amendment will eventually allow the legislature to enact tough anti-abortion laws.

Opponents defended "pro-choice" and argued abortion is a private matter for an individual to decide. They said that passage of the amendment is designed to give state legislators absolute power and eventually ban all abortions except to save a woman's life.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Senator Richard Kraus voted no.

Question #2-School Aid On April 16, House approved 83-72, Senate approved 24-15, a proposed constitutional amendment permitting state and local communities to provide aid to private school students within the limits of the U.S. Constitution.

Supporters said the amendment will simply allow, not mandate, aid to private schools and claimed it does not violate the separation of church and state. They argued it will allow the lending of textbooks to non-public school students.

Some opponents said the proposal violates the separation of church and state. Others said this will cost millions of dollars to pay for private education and claimed the money will have to come from an increase in taxes or a reduction in other programs.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Kraus voted no.

Question #3-Tax Limit- On May 6, House rejected 93-49, an initiative petition sponsored by Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT), limiting state tax revenue growth to the level of growth in state wages and salaries and requiring any revenue raised above the limit to be returned to taxpayers. The Senate never voted on the initiative petition itself after it was defeated by the House, but on May 19 the Senate 26-10, defeated an amendment to strike a senate ways and means version of a tax cap and insert the language of the CLT petition. Despite the defeat, proponents gathered additional signatures to get the question on the ballot.

Supporters said this will finally limit state taxes and would have returned $450 million to taxpayers this year.

Opponents said the cap is too restrictive, inflexible and dangerous. They noted Massachusetts state taxes are now 10 percent below the national average and many said they supported milder caps now being worked on by the legislature.

A Yea vote is for the proposal. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Kraus voted no.

Question #4-Hazardous Waste- On May 5, House 145-0, approved an initiative petition requiring the state to identify and clean up hazardous waste sites within four years. The Senate did not act on the petition but proponents gathered additional signatures to get the issue on the ballot.

Supporters said approval will mean that 2000 potentially toxic sites wll be investigated within four years and the dangers at all sites will be controlled within four years after they are found.

Opponents said the proposal is seriously flawed and contains provisions which undermine its effectiveness, compromise its workability and unnecessarily inflate costs to the public.

A Yea vote is for the proposal. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Question #5-Seat Belts- On October 16, 1985, the House approved 85-66, Senate approved 24-13, the mandatory seat belt law which is now on the books. The law includes a $15 fine for violators but allows the fine to be imposed only if the violation is found after the vehicle is stopped for another violation.

Supporters said the law will save lives, prevent injuries and lower auto insurance rates.

Opponents said it restricts personal freedom and choice and is another example of intrusion by government into people's lives. Some opponents noted that seat belts often cause injuries or deaths. After Governor Dukakis signed the bill into law, opponents gathered enough signatures to put the issue on the November ballot.

A Yea vote is for the seat belt law. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Kraus voted yes.

Question #6-Mail In Voter Registration- On May 6, the House 93-56, rejected an initiative petitio providing a system of voter registra tion by mail. The Senate did not ac on the proposal since it was already defeated in the House, but proponents gathered sufficient signatures to place it on the ballot.

Supporters, noting the system has worked well in other states, said the measure contains many safeguards and will increase registration among many groups.

Opponents said it will result in abuse and fraud and noted current laws provide for late night and weekend registration sessions for anyone who cannot register during regular hours.

A Yea vote is for the proposal. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Question #7 is a non-binding public advisory on a national health care plan. Question #8 is another advisory on a national acid rain control program. The legislature did not hold roll call votes on either of these two questions.

Dog days are hard on the faint-hearted

By Terry Marotta

Fainting weather is here again.

Fainting weather can come anytime, really, but most often it comes around now, when we're nose-deep in the fur of the dog days, and swimming through air thick enough to part down the middle.

I mark its onset as carefully as any old farmer would do to his almanac. Why? Because, like the good girl I've always been, I do what's expected of me: in fainting weather, I faint.

This began when I was no more than a small fluff of humanity, bumbling around the backyard in red overalls and Howdy Doody boots. I staged my early faints on mornings not much different from this one, in fact -in public- at occasions of some pomp and ceremony.

I fainted in church from 1953 right on up past Vatican Two.

At first I thought I was having visions. I saw myself as set apart by God — singled out for some great challenge, perhaps. I'd picture myself as one of those child martyrs, collapsing beneath a pile of pagan bullies in the schoolyard; or like the young St. Theresa, ascending into heaven smiling sweetly and clutching floral arrangements. It made an appealing daydream.

I'd wobble, famished by fasting, on the rocky kneelers of childhood chapels, chewing the corners of my prayerbook and watching the lights dim eerily as consciousness ebbed.

Then I'd wake a moment later to find two ushers dragging me out like a bag of laundry, their pink and astonished fingers grasping me tightly beneath the armpits.

I fainted like clockwork through an entire girlhood of summer services. Once I fainted at the altar rail, just as the priest came at me with Communion:

"The body of Christ", he intoned.

"Wham!", my skull answered, bouncing like a coconut on the marble floor.

"Yiiiii!", screeched a Greek chorus of waiting communicants.

Then the armpit men descended, and dragged me out to recover, lying face-down on the sidewalk. A knot of idlers always gathered. Sundays were never dull when the Little Swooner came to call.

Unfortunately, the problem has persisted for me, long after the years of the hot and hungry Masses.

A pattern has emerged by this stage of life, and I know now pretty much under what circumstances I'm likely to lose consciousness.

I faint when slyly smiling dermatologists approach me chanting liturgies of wart-removal and waving Q-tips that steam with chemicals.

I faint when I've rushed around too much in the heat; I went down like the Andrea Doria in a tangle of neckties one steamy summer day, in the middle of the men's section of a department store. They dragged me behind the counter and went on with their selling.

I even started to faint at my own wedding 16 years ago.

"David!" I hissed to my groom from my spot at the altar, sweating like a mollusk suddenly, and weaving in my lace, "I'm going to pass out!"

"Don't you dare!", he hissed back, and gave me a good hard punch in the thigh.

It worked. I didn't pass out. The wedding went off without a hiccup.

I do have to be careful, though, even now.

I went to church last weekend. Not a breeze was stirring. The stained glass windows began to throb and bloom in the old weird way.

"Beam me up, St. Theresa," I thought as of old, "I'm coming home."

"Short of that, thanks, Lord, for the kind firm grip of those ushering strangers."

David Landry earns award

David H. Landry of Winchester Boy Scout Troop 507 received the second annual Junior Leadership Award from the Edward S. Reynolds Memorial Fund recently at the Winchester Public Library.

The award is made annually to a Winchester boy scout or girl scout in recognition of ability and desire to serve the community and to provide leadership in scouting organizations.

Landry, who is a first class scout and a patrol leader, has been recognized by his scout leaders for his demonstrated leadership and advancement potential.

He plans to use the award this summer to partially defray his expenses in attending a scout training camp at Parker Mountain and a canoe trip on the Sacco River sponsored by the Winchester Recreation Department.

Grant winners are nominated by their scout leaders and selected by the Edward S. Reynolds memorial committee, a group of former scouts and leaders from Winchester scout organizations. Chairman of the committee is Harry Boodakian.

The award was presented by Daniel P. Holmes, Esq., a member of the fund's memorial committee; Holmes is also an Eagle Scout and a former member of troop 507

The presentation ceremony was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Landry; Archie Gordon, scoutmaster; and William J. Mallio, troop treasurer. Other members of the committee were: Alfred E. Fernald, treasurer of the memorial fund; Walter J. Farrell Jr.; and Winfield G. Knopf.

Scout David Landry is the third recipient of an award from the fund.

The fund was established with contributions by scouts, parents, community leaders, and former associates of Reynolds, as well as significant contributions by community organizations, including the ENKA Society and the Rotary Club of Winchester.

The committee will publicize the availability of awards at the beginning of the scout year. Scoutmasters, scouts and supporters of scouts will be requested to assist in publicizing these awards through distribution of a brochure to be made available this fall by the Edward S. Reynolds Memorial Committee.

More than 250 family members and 120 residents attended a 10th anniversary celebration Aug. 20 at the Winchester Nursing Center on Swanton Street.

Richard Salter, administrator, discussed plans for the center, including complete renovation, additional health care services, a meal service more like restaurants than hospitals, and more interaction between residents and the larger Winchester community.

The center already provides a van for residents to travel to malls for shopping, go on fishing trips, visit local restaurants and take other excursions.

"Our goal at the Winchester Nursing Center is to assure residents the best quality of life possible," Salter said.

Special recognition was given to Edna Chesley, the oldest resident at 101.

Runner-up is Emily Carly, who turned 99 Aug. 22.

Five women have lived at the center since its purchase from Winchester Hospital in July 1976. They are Emily Carly, Eva Gales, Susan Hodge, Mary Joyce and Ann Sanka.

In addition to the administrator, the Salter family was represented by Gershon Salter.

Staff members hosted the celebration, which included hors d'oeuvres, crabmeat croissants, Swedish meatballs, stuffed shells, a watermelon fruit basket, brownies and eclairs.

Alma Mattucci and Bobby Theriault from the center's recreational services department made special efforts and the buffet meal was prepared by head chef Fred Scholl and his staff.

We at the Massachusetts State Lottery are very proud of this list.

We're proud because we started the Lottery with the intention of bringing more money into Massachusetts' cities and towns without having to resort to huge tax increases. And we accomplished just that. In fact, in fiscal year 1986, we put over $375 million† back into our neighborhoods. That represents $1 out of every $5 in local aid received by your community.

These revenues continue to increase year after year. From 1985 to 1986, revenues in nearly all of the 351 communities in Massachusetts showed a significant gain.

Clearly, The Massachusetts State Lottery has been very successful at running some very lucrative as well as wonderfully entertaining games.

So, remember, when you play Megabucks, The Numbers Game, or The Instant Games, you're not only taking a chance at winning some great cash prizes. You're also helping out good 'ole MA.

Robert Q. Crane

STATE TREASURER AND CHAIRMAN OF THE LOTTERY COMMISSION

THE LOTTERY

†Proceeds are distributed in two ways. 1. Revenue for the Weekly Game, Instant Games and Daily Numbers Game is distributed twice yearly, directly under G.L. c10 sec. 35 (c). 2. Revenue from Megabucks (Arts Lottery) is distributed to the State Arts Lottery Fund and the Local Aid Fund under G.L. c10 sec 35 B (b). The figures for cities and towns are derived from the direct distribution and the Arts Lottery contribution to the Local Aid Fund. Totals are determined by local aid figures for each city and town as calculated by the Department of Revenue divided by the percent contribution provided by the Arts Lottery revenues.

SENIOR NEWS

The building expansion fund at the Jenks Senior Center continues to grow with the generosity of young and old participating in the project. The following pepole have donated through Aug. 15 and the fund-raising committee extends sincere appreciation to:

Mr. and Mrs. Constantine Alexander; an anonymous donor; Steve and Diane Boettcher; Joanne F. and Thomas J. Brady; John J. Camuso; Rocco J. and Teresa M. Carzo; Mr. and Mrs. Nat Caruso; Robert B. and Lucile R. Cavanaugh; Harry E. Chefalo; Richard and Jane D'Entremont; Ernest and Harriet Dieterich; Nobert De Amato; and Clark R. and Sarah A. Egeler.

Also, Ruth R. Emery; Joesephine Ferraina; Jay M. and Sally S. Finn; Arlan F. and Alice M. Fuller; George B. Hughes; Aram and Gertrude Johnian; Rober H. Johnson; Robert D. Keefe; Kathleen Lambert; and Gladys E. Lockman.

Also, David and Marilyn McMillan; Beatrice E. Matthews; Louise A. and Francis J. Mazzucotelli; Theodore P. Messer; Jean B. and David S. Mortensen; Patricia M. and Edward F. Norberg; Jane Opel; Mr. and Mrs. Anthony P. Rapallo; Roland V. and Mary J. Robinson; Rolland V. and Mary J. Robison; and Dr. Howard S. and Mrs. Judith Rubenstein.

Also, Mary V. Simeone, Drories K. and Elizabeth J. Sorger; Kenneth D. and Wendy K. Stuart; Fred F. and Barbara M. Tilden; Joseph J. and Lorraine Tozza; Dorothy A. Wadsworth; Richard A. Wickerson; and J. Hyatt Wight, III.

Every Wednesday afternoon at 1 p.m., a group of men gather at the center to enjoy a game of cribbage.

Anywhere from four to ten players accept the challenge of the game. John Giuliani, who keeps the interest high, is eager to add more players.

Instruction will be given to those who do not have a knowledge of the rules of the game.

Visit Jenks crafts room

A long time ago, Clarence Borggaard made bookshelves for the craft room to hold current magazines and paperbacks of interest to seniors.

It is kept stacked by Borggaard and others. Magazines include National Geographic, Fortune, Harper's, Atlantic Monthly, Harvard Magazine, Discover, Scientific magazines, Political publications, Regional such as Alaska, Arizona, Time, Newsweek and others.

Readers are invited to help themselves.

Fiesta Fair set for Oct. 1

The tenth annual Fall Fiesta Fair is one of the biggest events of the year at the Jenks Senior Center. This year, more than any other, requires the best financial intake because the extended building will be in operation shortly after the New Year.

In 1976, when a name was being considered for the fair, people were asked to submit titles for the first fair under the direction of Hilda Hope, R.N.

Bertha Blanchard's title was chosen.

Ann Ciampa, R.N. and fair chairman, gathered an active committee to plan for the two-day fair to be held on Oct. 1 and 2.

The public is cordially invited to come, browse, and buy. Aprons made by Irma Ganchi are always popular gifts. The best cooks in town will supply the bakery table with mouthwatering delicacies under the direction of Sylvia Saslow and Marjorie Blomquist.

Mary Collins and Miriam Durant are planning for games, dolls and toys.

The gift shop will have choice items, headed by Pauline McGuigan. Costume jewelry by Ruth Ayres is a booth that always claims the attention of buyers. May Hambly hopes for hand-made items such as sweaters, mittens of all sizes, scarves, hats and stocking caps.

Everyone rushes for the white elephant department to pick up interesting oddities.

The popular Italian dinner will be held again this year at the Knights of Columbus Hall from 5 to 7 p.m., Oct. 1. Appreciation is extended to the Knights for their courtesy in making their hall available to seniors and the public.

The public is cordially invited to come and enjoy the dinner. Tickets are available at the Jenks Senior Center. Harry Chefalo is ticket chairman.

Raffles are the "in-thing" again this year with a hand-stencilled quilt, a $100 bill and a hand-made afghan. These items will be distributed to the holders of lucky tickets on Oct. 2.

At a mini fair Dec. 6, a beautiful Bengali rug, gift of Koko Boodakian Inc., will be drawn.

The Fall Fiesta Fair is a good place to begin holiday shopping in a comfortable, relaxing atmosphere.

Kay Morris observes the results of her flower arrangement created at the summer workshop at Jenks Senior Center. The workshop was directed by Grace Dignam and Elaine Delaney.

Choate-Symmes provides dinner to seniors

The Choate-Symmes supper club had a successful opening earlier this month.

Coordinated by the Choate-Symmes Center for health care and development of the older adult, the supper club has become a popular place for older adults to dine and socialize. The Club offers a tasty, nutritious meal in a healthy setting at a low cost.

The supper club is Tuesdays and Thursdays at Choate Hospital and Mondays and Wednesdays at Symmes Hospital.

Each week, a Choate-Symmes registered nutritionist is available to answer diners' questions about nutrition and eating habits. The club will also provide meals for individuals on special diets, such as diabetics, low-sodium, low cholesterol, and/or low fat.

Older adults don't have to make reservations to enjoy the supper club which is open from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. A la carte menu selections include soup, salad, an entree, vegetable/potato, bread and butter, dessert, and unlimited beverages (non-alcoholic).

For more information, call 646-1500, ext 1441.

"Wally" is the senior mini-van driver who checks the roster for senior riders every Friday. The service is door-to-door. On the second and fourth Fridays of the month, three trips are scheduled to and from the Burlington Mall.

Molly

Dog visits homebound seniors

Molly, a beautiful 6-year old Golden Retriever, well-mannered and friendly, accompanied by her mistress, Ann Bonner, visits homebound seniors who love animals.

June Hall, SAC coordinator (Senior After Care), says that there is an important relationship between people and animals.

Studies have shown that animals help to improve the mental health of patients since contact with pets has therapeutic value.

MBTA offers ride program

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) is expanding "The Ride" program to Bedford, Burlington, Concord, Lexington, Lincoln, Wilmington, Winchester and Woburn. Eligible residents may take advantage of MBTA's door-to-door paratransit program, Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Eligibility is granted to residents of the eight communities who, because of physical or mental disability, are unable to use the MBTA. Registration is done through the MBTA's office of special needs.

Reservations, scheduling and dispatching of vehicles will be carried out through Share-a-Ride, Inc. of Lexington. The fare is 75 cents for each one-way trip. Additional information on "The Ride" program will be given at the MBTA office of special needs, 722-5123.

The service is, as of May 12, 1986, on a six-month trial basis to establish the degree of need. If it is not used, it will not be renewed.

Town adopts equalized tax rate for all property

businesses (in town) own their own buildings," Saraco said.

Representing the chamber of commerce, Allan Eyden said the question of tax classification was more properly, "Do we encourage people to continue to do business in Winchester? We ask level taxation."

Marcia Saltmarsh, also representing the chamber, noted that 91 percent of property is residential and only nine percent industrial and commercial.

"Whether the individual who owns a piece of property lives in town is not the question. It would seem to me the question is evaluation of property. And it seems one single class is the way to go," she said.

Saltmarsh said townspeople think it would be good to expand the tax base. "And businesses are likely to require fewer services than more homes," she said.

Later speakers pointed out that businesses do not cause additional school costs. Homes do.

Selectman Bob Deering asked if the 115 percent recommendation of assessors was based on "supposed increased costs" to the town caused by businesses.

Frank Mahoney, chairman of the assessors, said it was. He said he and town manager Chad Maurer had calculated costs of about $200,000 a year in extra police protection, snow removal, trash collection and health and fire inspections.

Mahoney said 115 percent tax classification would transfer about $250,000 of the tax burden from residential to commercial property.

Later, however, Maurer said he had made his $200,000 estimate only after the 115 recommendation of assessors was submitted. Asked directly if he favored classification, Maurer said no.

Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, said businesses in Winchester had historically been overvalued by roughly 115 percent.

"So although classification wasn't in effect, the assessors used a weighted system," Welch said. He called the system, used until the late 1970s, "de facto classification."

Saltmarsh said she didn't believe tax classification, first allowed by the state legislature in 1978, "was intended for residential towns."

Maurer said the extra $200,000 in services provided to businesses could be demonstrated but also said the number could not necessarily be used to justify classification.

"You could use the library or recreation department budgets (in the reverse direction) because they primarily serve residences," he said.

Other speakers said the residential and business communities must work together for Winchester.

Eyden said he didn't see the groups in "an adversarial relationship. I see lots of cooperation."

Selectmen Mark Lombardi and Deering moved in favor of 100 percent classification for all property.

"They say unless you labor and experience anxiety, you're not doing your job," Deering said.

Judie Muggia also spoke in favor of equalized taxation, making the outbome of later discussion a foregone conclusion.

She said other tax breaks are available for persons on fixed income who are unable to pay taxes on their homes. "State law allows a total tax abatement to those who qualify."

"I still have a problem making an objective judgment," Sopper said, referring to a campaign promise not to vote on the issue until he studied it thoroughly. "But I'll accept the judgment of the assessors, the experts."

Welch spoke at length, citing a long history of opposition to tax classification.

He moved the question. Only Sopper voted in opposition to an equalized tax rate.

New report cards to be field tested

The board voted unanimously in favor.

Winchester will also receive a $18,787 "excellence in education" grant which will provide a teacher the time to work toward fusing reading and writing across the curriculum.

A $18,519 grant from the New England office of Apple Computer will provide funds for high school history students to incorporate computers into their curriculum.

Jervey reported that the task force on cultural, racial and ethnic awareness will meet for the first time Sept. 22.

He told members concern was raised over the lack of diversity in the force's membership. The task force plans to seek additional members, Jervey said.

The group plans to meet eight times over the next eight months and report to the school committee frequently.

The board approved a request from the school improvement council at Lincoln School's for about $4,100. The money will be used to pay a artist-in-residence, Doug Lipman, to spend time with students and teachers in January.

Lipman is a professional storyteller and musician.

Winchester High School principal Vincent Larocco plans to retire in 1989. Supt. Mitsakos asked the board to approve longevity pay. The board voted unanimously in favor.

Mitsakos requested a moment of silence to mourn the deaths of three people who worked for the school system. They were:

- John Ciampa, a former custodian for the system.
- Dr. Robert Copeland, a former English teacher.
- Eileen Hartwell, a former elementary teacher.

Mitsakos asked the board's acceptance of a $100 gift from Dr. Richard Chambers to the Lynch Library. The board accepted the gift.

Mitsakos commended and congratulated Helga Stanley, a senior clerical worker, for her work in hiring teachers for the 1986-87 school year.

What To See: The art of old Boston
What's On The Boards: A muddled mystery
What About Art: Cambridge then and now

What To See

Bostonians: A range of subjects from a golden age

The Bostonians: Painters of an Elegant Age, 1870-1930, an exhibit of works by distinctive Boston artists of the late 19th and early 20th centuries is on view at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, through Sept. 14.

The exhibition features 112 noted works, including Childe Hassam's Boston Common at Twilight, Edmund Tarbell's New England Interior, and William Paxton's New Necklace.

"The exhibit offers the first major re-examination of Boston art during its richest and most complex period," says Trevor Fairbrother, assistant curator of American paintings, Museum of Fine Arts, and organizer of the exhibition.

Works by William Morris Hunt, Joseph DeCamp, Lilian Hale, Charles Hopkinson, Frank Benson, Maurice Prendergast, William Paxton and others whose contributions were vital to the vigorous cultural climate in Boston are presented.

John Singer Sargent, the city's favorite "expatriate" artist is represented with special emphasis on his portraits painted in Boston.

These works by over 40 artists evoke a highly distinctive Boston sensibility, independently formed yet influenced by Millet and Monet, as well as Vermeer and Valazquez.

"The exhibition and the accompanying catalogue offer a definitive exploration of the heyday of the Boston art world," says Fairbrother.

Pivotal figures whose works are emphasized include William Morris Hunt, who stimulated Boston's love of French art in the 1860s. His works in the 1870s, such as Gloucester Harbor, embody the impressionist and tonalist concerns that soon dominated much of the Boston art.

Sargent, in the late 1880s and '90s, revitalized the grand portrait tradition and reinforced the local taste for Claude Monet with his own Impressionist works. At this time Sargent also began his first mural decorations for the Boston Public Library.

Of importance both as artists and instructors at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts were Edmund Tarbell, Frank Benson, Philip Hale, Joseph DeCamp and William Paxton.

"A favored subject of these Bostonians was the graceful young woman at leisure in a luxurious, art-filled interior," says Fairbrother.

Several of these works were conscious modern emulations of Vermeer, such as Paxton's Tea Leaves. This Bostonian art was distinguished by its refined subject, subtle use of color and warmth of spirit.

A wide range of subjects is present in the exhibition. Regal portraits include Sargent's portrayal of Henry Higginson, founder of the world-renowned Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Intimate interior scenes of figures enjoying various aspects of gracious living include Tarbell's Breakfast Room.

Landscapes suffused in light — the products of North Shore and Cape Cod summers — are featured along with elegant city scenes of familiar views of the Back Bay and other Boston settings.

Many delightful floral still lifes are also on view.

Most works featured are oil on canvas, although important watercolors by Winslow Homer, Dodge MacKnight, Hassam, Sargent and Prendergast are included. Noteworthy, too, are Lilian Hale's highly-worked drawings, and the pastels of Laura Coombs Hills and J. Appleton Brown.

Decorative arts objects are also part of the exhibition.

Paintings of handsome interiors were the most characteristic and best loved subjects of the Boston school of painters at the turn of the century.

The exhibit celebrates the distinctiveness of these interiors by including actual decorative arts objects that were painted in key pictures by John Singer Sargent and Edmund C. Tarbell.

The exhibition offers a rare first-time opportunity to view the two six-foot porcelain vases depicted in John Singer Sargent's painting, The Daughters of Edward D. Boit. The vases are displayed alongside the large group portrait, which is one of the Museum's masterpieces. The Japanese export ware vases are decorated with birds and flowers in underglaze blue. They were made in the city of Arita, presumably in the 1870s.

In Sargent's 1881 portrait, they assume a presence which is both beautiful and haunting, marking the entrance into the cavernous black room behind the four girls.

Other decorative arts objects in the Bostonians exhibition include a New England maple gateway table (c.1700) and a late 17th century Chinese covered vase. These objects were featured in several of Edmund Tarbell's paintings, most notably in The Silver Screen.

The table recalls the Colonial Revival and the antiquarianism prevailing in Boston. The vase suggests two different traditions: the love of Oriental art shown by Impressionist painters, and the much older New England enthusiasm which developed from the China Trade.

All of the items Tarbell painted came from his own collection, and the rooms he depicted were actually temporary arrangements of these objects in his studio.

Tarbell, a Museum School teacher and member of the American Impressionist group, The Ten, led Boston's painters of domestic interiors. He took his precedent from the 17th century Dutch artist, Vermeer, (who was represented locally in the collection of Isabella Stewart Gardner).

Composed with the same harmony and love of subtle sunlight effects associated with Vermeer, Tarbell's pictures show young women sewing or reading in rooms which are decorated with proper Bostonian taste and restraint.

Recurrent items include Old Master paintings or copies after them, Japanese prints, fine oriental screens, porcelains and textiles, American furniture from the Colonial and Federal periods, and colorful still-life arrangements of fruit or flowers.

The exhibition and catalogue are made possible by grants from Shawmut, the Luce Fund for Scholarship in American Art, and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Following the Boston presentation, The Bostonians: Painters of an Elegant Age, 1870-1930 travels to the Denver Art Museum and the Terra Museum of American Art in Chicago.

The Museum of Fine Arts is located at 465 Huntington Ave. in Boston.

Museum notes

Although The Bostonians: Painters of an Elegant Age ends Sept. 14, the Museum of Fine Arts still offers plenty to see and do.

Carved in Marble: American Sculpture, 1830 — 1880 is a continuing exhibit featuring works in marble that were carved in Italy by American expatriate sculptors of that era. Sculpted pieces include works made by Haratio Greenough and Chauncey Bradley Ives.

The Museum of Fine Arts is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday through Sunday; and 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesday. In addition, the West Wing is open Thursday and Friday until 10 p.m.

General admission is $4, $3 during hours when only the West Wing is open, and $3 for the elderly. The museum is free to all Saturday morning, 10 a.m. to noon.

Rhyms With Evil disappoints

Review

It's always fun to look forward to a spine-tingling mystery. But sometimes, the anticipation is more exciting than the actuality.

Such is the case with the American Stage Festival's premiere of Rhymes With Evil, and just about all the problems can be found in playwright Charles Traeger's script. For the ASF to mount such an elaborate production was far too premature.

Catagorizing the play as a mystery is a misnomer; if anything, Rhymes With Evil is a modern-day Greek tragedy.

Further, the spine of Traeger's script is not nearly developed enough and cries out for a secondary plot, red herrings, a mysterious neighbor, more suspects and suspense.

The first act is almost devoid of build and the dialogue is often stilted and artificial. Indeed, Traeger flashes his hand almost immediately. If there is new wrinkle, it is that we normally witness a female in the aftermath of a tramatic experience, whereas here we encounter a male who has lived through a devastating tragedy.

The production is not without merit.

The preformance of Richard Backus, in the very trying role of Lathan Kane, is illustrious. Here is a fine portrayal of a man wracked with mental anguish and pain, an individual crazed with guilt who escapes into a land of fantasy and illusion. Backus is deeply submerged in this role and emerges with a solid, convincing and touching performance.

But Traeger has concentrated so heavily upon the development of Lathan, the central character, that the remaining roles are little more than angular caricatures with synthetic dialogue.

There is no serious flaw in Larry Carpenter's direction other than a youngster directing most of her lines upstage. Technically the production is marvelous: the interior and partial exterior of the Kane family home are by Mark Wendland; costumes and fantasy are by John Falabella; lighting is by Marcia Madeira; music is by Andrew Howard; and puppets and fantasy are by Bart Roccoberton.

The stage is loaded with intrigue—the living room and the stairway leading to the second floor all punctuated with gingerbread and extraordinary depth of vision. The set dressing would make even F.A.O. Schwarz envious: it's literally a children's toy museum with animals and dolls stuffed into every nook and cranny, puppets everywhere, masks and wall hangings, the talking devil Mr. Pipp, the grotesque spirit Snevil, and a Punch and Judy theatre.

Lathan is a fired school teacher and a man of many hats.

His wife Sara (Julia MacKenzie) has been absent for some time, recovering from some frightening ordeal. After living with her sister Agnes for awhile, she moved East and into the world of fashion. Now she has returned home, to this isolated house in the country in the Midwest, to this place, this maze, that she hates.

Sara seeks a divorce from Lathan and is accompanied by her lawyer and boyfriend Jim Braddock.

Lathan is a Norman Bates-like character with a seemingly Svengali hold on Sara, but Sara is determined that this will be their final confrontation.

Rhymes With Evil continues at the Milford, NH playhouse through Aug. 30.

Splashy Broadway opens Shubert season

The splashy new musical Singin' In The Rain opens the Hub's fall theatre season at the Shubert Theatre, starting Tuesday, Sept. 2, and continuing through Sept.20 for a limited engagement as part of its national tour.

Based on the classic 1952 MGM film, Singin' In The Rain is a brand new touring version, mounted under veteran Broadway and television director, Lawrence Kasha and Tony Award-winning choreographer Peter Gennaro.

Starring Donn Simione, Cynthia Ferrer, Brad Moranz and Jennifer Smith, the Broadway hit features some of the most popular songs ever written, like Good Mornin', You Are My Lucky Star and the title song, all penned by the composer/lyricist duo of Nacio Brown and Arthur Freed, with the book written by the Tony Award-winning team of Betty Comden and Adolph Green.

The production boasts a 32-member company, a lavish set design, costumes, and a genuine rain shower for the title tune.

Donn Simione portrays Don Lockwood, Hollywood's top leading man of the 1920's and Jennifer Smith is Lina Lamont, the queen of the silent screen. When the team is forced to appear in "talking pictures" during Hollywood's frantic transition from silent films, ingenue Kathy Selden (sung and danced by Cynthia Ferrer) along with comic side-kick Cosmo Brown (Brad Moranz), come to the rescue and help Don and Lina save their new film from being shelved.

Donn Simione comes directly from the Broadway company of Singin' In The Rain and has appeared on Broadway in A Chorus Line and Dreamgirls.

Cynthia Ferrer has appeared in a host of musicals and many television shows including Fame and General Hospital.

From the role of Anne in the Broaway musical La Cage Aux Folles, Jennifer Smith joins the company along with Brad Moranz, who also comes directly from the Broadway company of Singin' In The Rain.

Shows are Monday, Sept. 15 and Tuesday through Saturday, at 8 p.m.; matinees Wednesday and Saturday are 2 p.m. and Sunday, Sept. 7 and 14 at 3 p.m. Tickets are $21 to $40. For charge tickets call Telecharge at 1-800-233-3123. For more information call Shubert Theatre at 426-4520.

GSC premieres North Shore Fish

The Gloucester Stage Company closes its summer season with a five-week run of North Shore Fish, an Israel Horovitz world premiere, in the GSC's new provisional home at 267 East Main St., Gloucester, MA.

This performance space, a large brick warehouse overlooking Gloucester Harbor, provides a fitting setting for Horovitz's latest Gloucester play and enhances the play's local favor.

North Shore Fish takes place in a fictional fish processing plant in Gloucester called North Shore Fish Company and chronicles the lives of the various women working in the plant.

Associate artistic director Grey Cattell Johnson, whose most recent GSC directorial effort was Hard Times, the 1986 summer season opener, will once more be at the helm.

The bittersweet comedy, set in the ill-fated fish plant and focusing on the day-to-day lives of the women who pack frozen fish, features Geraldine Librandi as the wise-cracking Florence, Theodore Reinstein as Sal, the plant foreman, and Mark H. Rogers as Parker. Also in the cast are Karen Crawford, Teade Gormley, Tara Dolan, Michelle M. Faith and Judith McIntyre.

Israel Horovitz, GSC's artistic director, was born in Wakefield, in 1939. His first play, The Comeback, was written at age 17 and produced at Emerson College. In the 30 years since, more than 50 Horovitz plays have been produced and translated in more than 20 languages worldwide.

His comedy The Good Parts, starred Tony Roberts off-broadway in 1984. His play Park Your Car in Harvard Yard, played to standing-room-only houses at GSC this spring, as did another of Horovitz's Gloucester-based plays, last summer's smash Henry Lumper.

The Widow's Blind Date, which premiered at GSC in 1983, then transferred to Boston as a commercial hit, played in Paris this past season to critical acclaim at Theatres des Mathurins, and has been filmed for French National Television. It is scheduled for its NYC premiere this coming season starring Kathleen Turner.

Three new Horovitz plays opened in New York this past season: Today I Am A Fountain Pen; A Rosen By Any Other Name; and The Chopin Playoffs.

Horovitz's The Former One-on-One Basketball Champion, premiered in Seattle this year, starring former Celtics star Bill Russell.

Horovitz is now at work on anothr Gloucester-based play called The Year Of The Duck.

For film, Horovitz has written The Strawberry Statement, and Author! Author!

He has won numerous awards, including the Obie, The Emmy, The French Critics Prize, New York Drama Desk Award, an Award in Literature of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and, this past May, the Eliot Norton Prize.

Performances of North Shore Fish are Tuesday through Sunday through Sept. 28. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. for all performances except Saturday, when showtime is 6:15 p.m. and 9:15 p.m. Tickets are $12.50.

The theatre is located immediately before the entrance to Rocky Neck in Gloucester. For further information and reservations call 281-4099 or contact the GSC office at 90 Prospect St., Gloucester 01930.

What To Visit

Harvard turns 350

This year Harvard University, the nation's oldest college, turns 350.

As Harvard celebrates its latest milestone, ivy league becomes everyone's league as the school and community unite for area-wide celebrations Sept. 3 through 7.

In addition to the university's birthday, the Harvard Law School Alumni Association marks its 100th anniversary, and both the Graduate School of Design and the John F. Kennedy School of Government celebrate their 50th anniversaries.

At the heart of the festivities are three convocations in the Tercentenary Theatre, outdoors in Harvard Yard.

Prince Charles of Great Britain delivers the main address at the opening Foundation Day convocation at 10 a.m. Sept. 4.

The British heir to the throne is a graduate of Cambridge University, where many Harvard founders, including John Harvard, were educated.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz gives the principal address at Friday's 10 a.m. convocation. Other speakers include Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., and Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

The third convocation, at 2 p.m. Saturday, features an alumni procession and an address by Harvard president Derek Bok.

More than 100 symposiums are scheduled Sept. 4 through 6. Included are appearances by three Supreme Court justices and presentations by faculty, alumni and other speakers on a variety of topics. Admission is free, but tickets are required.

Special events begin with a Floating Birthday Party along both banks of the Charles River, between the Weeks and Anderson bridges, from 7 to 10:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 3.

Highlights of the outdoor party will be a laser light show of images projected on screens of water, a 600-foot inflatable rainbow sculpture connecting the river banks, an electronic oracle, musicians, jugglers, dancers, a stilt-walker, clowns, decorated barges, and a larger-than-life John Harvard marionette to shake hands with passers-by.

Musical groups will perform both onshore and from barges in the river. They include the Cambridge Harmonica Orchestra, the Batucada Belles, a 23-piece women's samba band, the Cambridge Symphonic Brass Ensemble, and the Copley Brass.

Admission is free; a raindate is set for Sept. 5.

Film evenings in the Harvard Film Archive, 8 p.m. Sept. 4 and 5 in Carpenter Center, feature classic American and foreign films. Tickets are $5.

A special showing is John Harvard: Movie Star, a 60-minute retrospective of highlights and backstage by-play of almost 100 years of Harvard in the movies. Bob Hope, Jane Russell and Rudolph Valentino are among the featured film stars.

A poetry reading at Agassiz Theatre, at 8 p.m. Sept. 4, features award-winning Radcliffe alumnae Maxine Winokur Kumin, Linda Olenik Pastan, Adrienne Rich and Ruth Whitman. Tickets are $10.

The Erick Hawkins Dance Company performs at 8 p.m. Sept. 4 and 5 at Hasty Pudding Theatre.

Hawkins, a 1930 Harvard graduate, premieres a work specially commissioned for school's 350th celebration. Tickets are $20.

Gym Transit celebrates sport and dance in a one-hour performance at 8 and 11 p.m. Sept. 3 through 5 at Radcliffe Dance Center. Tickets are $10.

The American Repertory Theatre's highly successful production of The King Stag is staged for three performances at 8 p.m. Sept. 3 through 5 at the Loeb Drama Center. Tickets are priced $17, $21 and $24.

The Harvard-Radcliffe Orchestra is joined by the Harvard Glee Club, the Harvard-Radcliffe Collegium Musicum, and the Radcliffe Choral Society for classical music at 8 p.m. Sept. 5 at Sanders Theatre. Tickets are $10.

The Boston Museum Trio presents Baroque chamber music at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 5 at Agassiz Theatre. Tickets are $12.50.

The Harvard Glee Club, the Harvard - Radcliffe Collegium Musicum, and the Radcliffe Choral Society are re-joined by alumnae and alumni for a performance of Harvard and Radcliffe favorites from the traditional choral repertoire. The show takes place at 8 p.m. Sept. 4 in Sanders Theatre. Tickets are $10.

The New World String Quartet provides chamber music in Paine Hall at 8 p.m. Sept. 4. Tickets are $12.50.

University organist John Ferris performs repertoire favorites at Memorial Church, at 5 p.m. Sept. 4. Admission is free.

On Sept. 5, memories of folk music's bygone Club 47 coffee house are brought back by Harvard graduate Tom Rush, and other folk music stars in concert. An Evening With Tom Rush At Club 47 begins 9 p.m. in the outdoor Tercentenary Theatre in Harvard Yard.

Accompanying Rush are folk singers Joan Baez, Livingston Taylor and Bonnie Raitt, as well as emerging folk performers David Buskin and Robin Batteau.

Tickets are $12.50, available at the Harvard University Ticket Office at 495-0555.

The grand finale of Harvard's five-day celebration is a bash in the flower-bedecked, 83-year-old Harvard Stadium 8:30 p.m. Sept. 6.

Master of ceremonies Walter Cronkite, the Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra and more than 700 performers will present a light-hearted look at Harvard's past.

This multi-media show is produced and directed by Tommy Walker, who directed the opening and closing ceremonies of the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles and special effects at the recent Statue of Liberty weekend.

Walker hopes the show "will capture the memories of the alumni and chronicle Harvard's 350-year tradition without being a history lesson."

Featured performers include the Empire Brass Quintet in a salute to Harvard alumni Leonard Bernstein; plus Harvard alumni writer George Plimpton, concert pianist Ursula Oppens, and actor John Lithgow. Singer Maureen McGovern also performs..

Harvard student groups, including the Harvard-Radcliffe choirs, the Kuumba Singers, and the Harvard Band will also entertain.

The satirical Hasty Pudding Club, famed for its student-written musical comedies, debuts a new skit in honor of the birthday celebration.

Also taking part are area color guards, the ceremonial unit of the state's National Guard, dressed in costumes of 1776, plus actors and mimes.

The show will also include lasers, multi-media projections and fireworks.

Tickets, $12.50 and $25, are available at Harvard University Ticket office. For more information, call 720-3434.

SPECIFY WHAT STAYS OR GOES WITH A HOUSE

The Purchase & Sale contract may be the most important document in the sale of a home. In order to save a lot of aggravation, post-sale bickering, and possible law suits, the gray area of which items will stay with the house and which the Seller will take away should be spelled out specifically in the contract.

Know the difference between chattels which can be picked up and moved without leaving nail holes; and fixtures which have been attached with the intention of their becoming part of the real estate, The Buyer expects fixtures to remain with the property.

Items like wall-to-wall carpeting, smoke alarms, and fireplace equipment should be specified as remaining as fixtures or being taken as chattels in the contract to avoid confusion.

Two commonly troublesome items are the TV antenna and fancy lighting fixtures; people form strong emotional attachments to chandeliers. Rather than get bogged down over such matters, simply make sure your offer stipulates that all fixtures remain except specific ones you're willing to up to the Seller.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

Real Estate Happenings by Steve Collins

GOING FOR A BROKER

Most people are happy to pay for the skill and service of a real estate professional. It relieves them from the strain and time burden they would assume if they took the responsiblity for selling their home. It is important to realize that a broker may actually save you money in the long run. A good broker will compile essential information about the house, help set a price, advertise it, arrange showings, qualify buyers, and set up the closing transactions. The broker already has contacts and resources in the community and knows what is happening in the local housing market. This means that the agency will be able to line up potential buyers much more quickly than you could. In addition, many prospects are more comfortable dealing with a broker than with a homeowner.

When you list your home with CENTURY 21 COLLINS REALTY, INC. you can feel confident you have chosen a firm anxious to assist you in any way to see that your property is sold in the shortest amount of time at the highest price and with a minimum of inconvenience. Our experience in the business and our overall success speaks for itself so come see us at 783 Massachusetts Ave., 648-6900. We are open daily, evenings and weekends. Have a safe and happy Labor Day weekend!

HINT: Many residential communities are zoned to keep out commercial and industrial sites.
